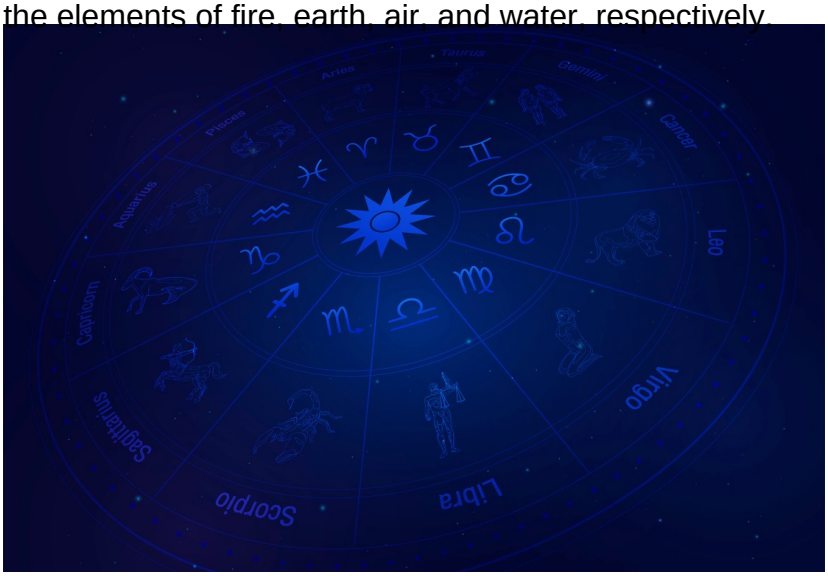
learning about your Sun sign, elements and zodiacs

While it's fun to learn more about our sun signs, astrology encompasses much more than simply your daily horoscope. In addition to learning about your Sun sign, you should also pay attention to the element of each zodiac sign. This will help you better understand your own nature, and the relationships between the zodiac signs. In order to have a more comprehensive grasp of astrology, you should first study about the influences of the element associated with your zodiac sign. Doing so will help you better understand your own birth chart and the influence of your Moon sign.

There are twelve distinct zodiac signs, each with their own distinctive personality traits and characteristics, although they may be divided into many groups. There are two polarities (male and female) and three astrological modalities (cardinal, fixed, and changeable) for each of the zodiac signs. They're further split down into four categories in astrology based on the elements of fire, earth, air, and water, respectively.



There are for more info : Leo, Aries, and Sagittarius, all of whom bring their passion and drive with them everywhere they go. Gemini, Aquarius, and Libra, on the other hand, use their intelligence and mental skills to move the globe ahead. When it comes to expressing oneself via their feelings, water signs Scorpio, Pisces, and Cancer are the best. Virgo, Capricorn, and Taurus, on the other hand, encourage us all to keep our feet firmly on the ground and to accept realism, no matter how tough that may be. They all work together perfectly to teach us these lessons, and the signs and their related components serve as a handy shorthand for arranging these teachings into categories that make astrology less complex.