Fourth Of July Celebration In The Charlestown Navy Yard

Warm sunshine and soft harbor breezes, military uniforms, color guards, patriotic music, flags and red, white and blue bunting, set the scene for Independence Day in the Charlestown Navy Yard.

Residents, visitors and tourists poured through the gates — some preparing to board USS Constitution for her annual turnaround cruise — others as observers, capturing the spirit of the day by viewing the festivities.

A crew member of USS Constitution met each car at the gate, checking the names off a list and directing the occupants to parking and boarding for the turnaround.

Another dimension was to be included in the ceremonies on this July 4th as Governor Michael S. Dukakis was to deliver an Independence Day Address. The presence of the Secret Service was the clue that the Presidential candidate was about to arrive in Charlestown.

WHO PAYS THE POINTS?

When homebuyers shop for financing, they must consider two important factors. First, what rate of interest does the lender charge? Second, how many points must they pay to secure the loan? Each point is equal to one percent of the mortgage amount. If you're selling a home, your buyers may ask you to share the points with them

Reading Tutors Needed Do you like to spend your summer days with a good book? Volunteers are needed as reading tutors and story readers at the South End's Blackstone Elementary School on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. A free orientation is offered. Call School Volunteers for Boston at 451-6145.

St. Jude, help of the hopeless pray for us. Say this prayer 9 times a day, by the 8th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail. Publication must be promised. Thank you, St. Jude. SJDD

Whether or not you pay points is negotiable. When a contract is presented, your Realtor will go over the price and terms to help you calculate the net price you will receive. If the offer is attractive and will net you the amount you want, paying one or more points might be a good idea. If, however, the offer has a low sales price or risky contingencies, you might make a counter offer that increases your net profit on the sale by either eliminating the points from your selling costs or increasing the price to a level that will help you absorb additional costs that you will pay. In some cases, buyers with limited cash need some assistance from the sellers to make the transaction work. Your Realtor will help you to look at the total picture and make your decision based on your bottom line as well as the buyer's overall gualifications.

The treasure hunters will have to find another building along First Avenue and the other sundry avenues and streets from which to collect their prized possessions. Laborers with hammers in motion boarded Building 104 - front, side and rear. Once, the cavernous building was visited daily by those seeking a trinket from the past. Development can't be too far behind, nor can the "No Trespassing" proclamations that will end the average hunter's appetite. As always, the universal question to the developer will be whether there will be a sufficient number of parking spaces to accommodate the future occupants. First Avenue has experienced several mornings of vehicular gridlock. Unable to adequately service the existing mix of residents, visitors, employees and general delivery vehicles, one shudders with the forthcoming development.

"See where the wind can take you!" As the motto for the newly established Navy Yard Sailing Club, The Raymond Group is agressively marketing this public sailing program. Its inventory numbers J-22's, laser radial sailboats, and for the physically challenged sailor, they offer a "Freedom Victory." As an update, the hours are 1 to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Their relatively low rates are as follows: 30 consecutive days $65; 75 consecutive days $140; full season (June 1 to October 1) $195 and full season husband and wife $215. For additional details, visit the Pier Six facility or call The Raymond Group at 242-1482.

Walking the Shipways perimeter, residents Lou and Phyllis enjoyed a refreshing breeze off the harbor, but they still had warmth on their minds. After reading the Boston Stove brochure, they decided to make a visit to the Reading store to purchase a fireplace screen. Approaching three years without the benefit of a pulley screen and glass doors, they finally made the move. Sparks will henceforth remain in the confines of the fireplace and not dance over the floor and rug. In the near future, you will know who is experimenting with a new enclosure. It won't be long until additional firewood will be delivered to Lou and Phyllis - a story direct from "The Big Chill."

Although the Boston Fire Department Boat was in the area, it didn't come prepared. As the newlyweds strolled to their reception aboard the Sans Souci, the Fire Boat passed but couldn't jettison its water salute. This tribute was the only element missing for the attractive couple. It was a perfect day and a placid harbor for the bride and groom and the cruising guests. It was a first to witness as the guests departed Pier Eight and with cans and confetti in tow, the couple began their married life.

Appearing for a brief visit was the Charleston of the American Cruise Line fleet. Yards End was its berth to load supplies and prepare for its local itinerary.

Skateboards dominated Thirteenth Street as the young residents visited the piers and the adjoining properties. All the latest acrobatics were demonstrated. The group toured the affordable housing units with a voice heard saying, "My family and I will soon be residents." Soon indeed, with the finishing touches at both ends around the corner, the lucky 50 should be ready for Thanksgiving celebrations.

Who has the charter for the Bunker Hill Yacht Club? That question was raised by "Townie" Moe Gillen. It is a valid question that should be answered. Its former site off Medford Street is history, as is the old swimming hole for many a "Townie" - Dewey Beach. With the resurgence of yachting in the community, the erstwhile Bunker Hill Yacht Club should be resurrected. Its place in the former and future history of the town must prevail. For all you history buffs, how about some direction in helping Moe bring back our nautical tradition?

Courageous Victorious In Holiday Weekend Match Races

by Lynn Peters

Seasoned sailor Ted Hood, 1974 America's Cup winner, captained Courageous for two consecutive victories on July 1 and 2 in the noon match races against Stars & Stripes '83 in celebration of the Courageous Sailing Center's oneyear anniversary in the Charlestown Navy Yard. Ted Turner, who earned the Cup in 1977, beat out former Courageous skipper and owner David Vietor on July 3 in the last of the three races aboard Stars & Stripes.

Hood, Turner and Vietor donated their time to benefit the Center which is designed to introduce Boston's inner city kids_to the sport and spirit of sailing. Robert A. Shafto of The New England, a Boston-based financial institution, announced just before the holiday weekend Regatta his company's corporate sponsorship of the program for the next three years. The New England joins a list of sponsors that includes private contributors such as Leonard Greene, who donated the 12-meter Courageous. the City of Boston's Parks and Recreation Department and the Boston Redevelopment Authority.

Harry McDonough, president of the Center's board of directors, who donates his time running the pro gram, was on hand overseeing the festivities. He reiterated at the races' opening his continued interest in strengthening and expanding the program. Instrumental in securing the contribution of the worldfamous yacht, McDonough said he will now search for the owner of the Pacific Princess, tv's "Love Boat," for the donation of the vessel for a sailing program designed for youngsters with drug problems.

The Courageous Sailing Center officially opened July 5, is available for all children of the City and runs through August.

On Tuesday, July 5, the City of Boston Board of Appeal (BOA) took action on two developments proposed in the Charlestown community.

One development involved the proposal by Vahid Nickpour and his development team to construct three condominium units with three parking spaces on a 2,446-square-foot parcel at 23-24 Common Street. The BOA denied the proposal without prejudice.

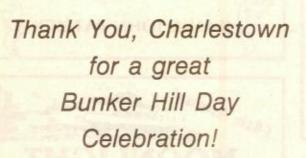

Judy Evers, neighborhood coordinator with the Mayor's Office of Neighborhood Services, stated

Sue, who is the daughter of Joe and Jennie Parcells of California, will intern in pediatrics at Saint Joseph's Hospital in Omaha. Chuck is also a Captain in the US Army Reserves.

According to Evers, BOA Board Member Chai-Ming Sze questioned the figures in the proposal that listed a 36-foot back out from the parking spaces while he said the back out should be 42 to 44 feet.

Evers stated that abutter Rose Woods and residents from Adams and Park Streets were present at the hearing to offer their support for the proposal.

According to Evers, the development team will have to "return to the drawing board" and scale down the project.

Also on the agenda at Tuesday's BOA hearing was the proposal for 286-290 Medford Street by developer John Stevens. The Board moved to defer action on the proposed development until September 27. At the last community meeting on June 21, Stevens proposed 12 units with 18 parking spaces for the 6,500-square-foot parcel.

Evers noted that since there had apparently been some changes in the plan since the last community meeting, Allen Jarasitis, attorney for the developer, requested a deferral from the BOA.

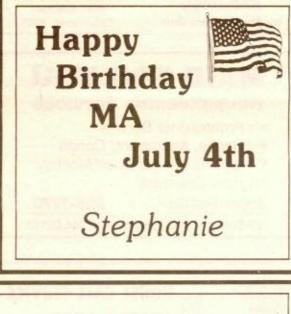

Also requesting deferral were Evers; John Bell of the Boston Redevelopment Authority; Julia Rodriguez, chairman, Housing and Development Committee of the Neighborhood Council; and Dennis McLaughlin, chairman, Charlestown Neighborhood Council.

Evers stated that the plans for the Medford Street development will be brought before the Neighborhood Council in August.

Charlestown Residents In Uphill Battle To Claim Land For Affordable Homes

by Kathy Giordano

The need for affordable housing in Charlestown grows with each passing year. The price of an affordable unit also grows with each passing month that goes by without a unit being built. The families that await the opportunity to purchase such a home are growing faster than the required income needed to buy their "American Dream" of home ownership.

Although discussions and meetings have been taking place for some time on this issue, the families that remain waiting are fast becoming more and more impatient, or finding themselves searching for their "Dream" in the suburbs. With each young family that finds it necessary to move away from this community in order to afford a home; with each second and third generation, young couples are forced to move away from relatives and friends; with each uprooting of this generation, there is a tremendous loss that will surely change the composition of Charlestown forever.

Charlestown residents have begun to fight what seems to be an uphill battle to claim whatever land remains for homes that can be made available to Charlestown's "forgotten minority" - the working class family of four who makes between $30,000 and $50,000 a year. The majority of these families have two incomes and are pinching every penny to put aside the needed money for a downpayment.

These same families, who are struggling to make a better life for themselves and their children, are caught in the middle between the new affluent arrivals who can afford the market rate housing available in Charlestown and the lower income families who have programs available to them to bring their mortgage payments down and thus more affordable.

Last week the Planning and Zoning Committee of the Charlestown Neighborhood Council brought Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA) at an open forum to discuss not only the needs of the community but the possibilities left open for units of affordable housing in Charlestown.

According to statistics released by the BRA, the mean price of a single-family home in Charlestown in 1987 was $170,358. The income needed to be able to afford the mortgage on such a house, with a 10 percent downpayment, was $62,668.

In the classification guidelines set down by the BRA that target affordable housing units for a family of four, the upper moderate income level (the highest level of classification) falls between $41,000 and $43,000 in order for the family to be able to afford a $115,000 mortgage. It was also revealed, although disputed by those attending the meeting, that the average yearly income of a Charlestown household in 1987 was $29,700. The Affordable Housing Committee stated that the income of the families presently living in Charlestown looking to purchase a home within the community falls between $35,000 and $50,000. These are the families that are caught in the middle, with too high an income to be included in the affordable homes bracket and too low an income to afford market rate housing.

Council member Bill Galvin stated that these are the "people who grew up in Charlestown and any future discussion on affordable housing should address these moderate income people, not low income. Forty percent of the housing in Charlestown today is housing for the low income people, that's 1,900 units out of 5,000. We should now take care of the moderate income families in the community."

Jim English, director of harbor planning and development for the BRA, stated that the majority of future housing sites geared toward affordable units will be found within the Navy Yard. "There are no sites left within Charlestown (outside of the Navy Yard) that have the 200 units that are found in the Master Plan of the Navy Yard" for affordable housing. David Armanetti, BRA special assistant, stated that a total of 46 units are expected to become available for affordable housing across Charlestown at sites currently under development or in the last stages of the development process. These are in addition to the 200 units that will be included in the final development plans for the Navy Yard. The land that will become available when the Central Artery North Area (CANA) project is completed in City Square is also a probable site for additional affordable housing units, he said.

The density and location of the affordable units that will be constructed in the Navy Yard was a concern to the Affordable Housing Committee and members of the Neighborhood Council. Julia Rodriguez expressed the concern of the Affordable Housing Committee members at the possibility of the affordable units being located in high-rise buildings, while the location of such units was also discussed by Council members Tom Cunha and Steve McHugh.

Rodriguez stated that although it would not be desirable for families with young children to live in a building with an elevator, this was not a major issue with the committee. Cunha and McHugh expressed their concerns on the location of the planned units, asking if they would be placed separately from the the market rate condominiums or integrated within these buildings. They also inquired as to whether the height of a building that included affordable units would be raised to allow for more units in the total numbers. All three agreed on the need for housing in the affordable market range to be built as soon as possible, whether it be in the Navy Yard or in Charlestown.

Committee chairperson Kathryn Downing listed the concerns raised at the meeting:

Will affordable housing

FOUND Set of Keys on Belmont Street 241-9511 units to be built in the Navy Yard be segregated from the luxury units?

• Will the affordable units be rental or ownership or both?

• Could additional linkage money come from downtown projects to supplement affordable housing units in Charlestown?

• Where are the affordable units going to be placed and what will be the Floor Area Ratio (FAR)? and

• What is affordability? Can the range be adjusted to include those that fall above the upper moderate income level?

These questions will be presented to the Neighborhood Council at their August 2 meeting. Downing requested that anyone from the community with questions and concerns on affordable housing opportunities, construction, location, etc. write to: Planning and Zoning Committee, Charlestown Neighborhood Council, c/o Kathryn Downing, Chairperson, 41 Green Street, Charlestown, MA 02129. These issues will also be discussed at the August Council meeting.

The Governor and Mrs. Dukakis attended a reception in the Hull Room in Building Five and then were escorted by the 1797 Marine Detachment Color Guard and the reception committee to a decorated platform on Pier One, adjacent to "Old Ironsides."

He said that there are those who would like us to sit around and think things over, adding, "I say that America is ready to take off like a firecracker on the Fourth of July." He stated that "we're ready to roll up our sleeves; and go to work; and make America number one in the world."

The Governor said that there she was, very regal, starting to descend the gangplank which had been covered with carpet. Then, the Queen with her high heels, started to slide. He said that she was coming towards him, sliding as she descended. He said that thoughts flashed through his mind - should he violate protocol and catch her or should he let her fall. The Governor said that as she neared the bottom of the gangplank she stopped short with a little bounce and proceeded to walk onto the dock.

prayers go out to the victims.

The Governor said that he welcomed the full investigation by Admiral Fogarty as promised by the President. Although supportive of our right to defend ourselves, the Governor stated that there would be more tragedy and heartache as long as the senseless war continued between Iran and Iraq. He said this was no time for acts of terror or revenge and the United States should take the lead with the establishment of an international committee to join together to stop the conflict.

As the Governor began his formal address, he stated that "the tree of freedom that was planted at Bunker Hill 213 years ago has grown strong and straight and true." He pointgions around the world.

He stated that "we will not rest until we win the war against drugs."

The Governor said, "Like the Minutemen of 1775, we must be prepared. We must be militarily strong.'

Other areas touched upon by the Governor in his address included economic strength, the importance of full employment in America, education, elimination of racism, sexism and discrimination, Social Security, basic health insurance and housing.

He stated, "A strong America is true to American values," adding that respect for the Constitution and for the rule of law is the most important principle of our democratic society.

"The revolution that began at Bunker Hill," stated Governor Dukakis, "did not end with the British surrender at Yorktown." He added that ours was not just a revolution against one government, it was a "revolution of the human spirit" and that "it lives wherever men and women are taking into their own hands the responsibility to build a better world."

In conclusion, the Governor stated, "We are the inheritors of a proud and glorious past. We are the trustees of a great and successful democratic experiment. We are determined, even as we celebrate the past, that we will one day leave our own footprints on the Freedom Trail. And we are confident, as we turn to face the future, that the best America is not behind us; the best America is yet to come."

Following his address, the Governor and Mrs. Dukakis boarded USS Constitution to greet the guests on the annual turnaround cruise and shook hands with visitors on the pier.

As the time neared for the USS Constitution's journey out into Boston Harbor, tugs approached the vessel and crowds lined Pier One. Special platforms had been constructed on the decks of "Old Ironsides" to allow the guests a better view of the activities. Lines were cast and, to the strains of "The Navy Hymn," the annual cruise was underway.

Those on shore applauded and shouted as the ship moved away from the pier. Commander David M. Cashman, USN, Commanding Officer of USS Constitution, celebrating his first turnaround cruise as the ship's commander, saluted those on the pier, bringing roars of approval from the crowd.

For those remaining on the shore, several activities got underway. A ceremony honoring the United States Constitution was held with the ringing of a replica of the Liberty Bell. This bell, commissioned by Nichirenshoshu Sokagakkai Academy (NSA), was the focal point of a float that had tra-

Superintendent John Burchill acted as master of ceremonies for the event. After welcoming the gathering, Burchill referred to John Hancock and Samuel Adams who provoked and raised the consciousness of the then constituency, noting the purpose behind those who declared independence from Great Britain over 200 years ago. He spoke of the Battle of Bunker Hill, Dorchester Heights, "Old Ironsides," and listed the many sites in the Boston National Historical Park that were significant in the fight for independence. Burchill also announced that he is seeking was his "sincere hope that come January, I will have the privilege of addressing him as 'Our President.' "

Governor Dukakis began by referring to the absence of Representative Richard A. Voke, Chairman, House Ways and Means Committee. He noted that it was traditional in this state to balance the state budget on July 4th and lauded Voke and his staff for their efforts on this holiday.

He also told Burchill that he would do all he possibly could to assist in the efforts to change the name of the park to Freedom Trail Park. The Governor praised Burchill, stating that he was very proud of the Superintendent's career in public service. The location of these July 4th festivities on the pier reminded the Governor of the arrival of Queen Elizabeth to Boston in 1976 and a story he said he had never told before. He related that he and his wife, Kitty, and Mayor Kevin White and his wife, Katherine, waited at the dock for the arrival of the royal yacht, noting that the gangplank from the yacht to the dock was steep.

SENATOR Francis D. Doris introduced Governor Michael S. Dukakis to the gathering on Pier One in the Charlestown Navy Yard.

Dukakis stated that he was a product of that dream and is running for President because he wants to help that dream come true for every family and citizen in this land. He pointed out that during the celebration of the past, we must, like those who built this nation, have our mind on the future for "their dream is now in our hands."

Residents And Agency Representatives Continue Dialogue On Substance Abuse

by Jessica Goodheart

The mood was optimistic although the crowd was small in number, as agency representatives and residents met to discuss Charlestown's drug and alcohol problems.

During one poignant moment, Karen, a Charlestown resident, told the gathering of her ultimately-triumphant battle with drugs and alcohol. Maybe, she said, if she had known more about the dangers of addiction - if she had seen a pamphlet or anti-drug advertisement on television she could have bypassed the difficult route she took. "I think kids today have a better chance than they ever did," she said.

Father Robert Kennedy of Saint Catherine's, an organizer of the program and the only representative of Charlestown clergy present at the June 29 meeting, shared Karen's optimism. "There's a lot more awareness, and this group will. I believe, grow," said Father Kennedy. But others were disappointed by the sparse attendance.

The group of concerned citizens formed June 13 after the "Improbable Players," a Watertown-based drug and alcohol awareness performance team, brought their production to the community. With the prompting of members of the Adolescent Task Force, an association of community agencies, nearly 30 residents signed up to form a committee against substance abuse in the town.

"I came here expecting a really big crowd and I'm disappointed," said one resident. About 100 were present at the June 13 program. But Hil Ohrstrom, program director of subance abuse counselling at the Kennedy Center and an organizer of the event, said he was happy that people had taken the time to come at all. "If we have two people here, that's progress, because that's two people more that are meeting about drugs and alcohol than there were ten weeks ago," he stated.

Discussion strayed from the agenda prepared by Joe Travis, coordinator of development at Charlestown Community Schools, who said he wanted the meeting to be a "sounding board" for the community. Those present were asked to share their expectations for the group's future. Some residents said they hoped that the group would provide an open forum for discussion for persons of all ages, while others were uncertain as to what its goals should be.

Health care and law enforcement representatives expressed hope that the group would provide a link between professionals and the community. Said Adelaide Smith, social worker at the Bunker Hill Health Center and a member of the Adolescent Task Force, "It's no good for those who are called professionals to come into a community and tell people what to do. You have to have parent support, and that's community support."

Joe McNulty, community service officer for Area A of the Boston Police Department (BPD), one of the two BPD representatives at the meeting, complained that police often feel they are acting alone. "I don't see much as far as community involvement. "He called on Charlestown residents to be alert to activities in their neighborhoods.

Most of the discussion focused on the youthful substance abusers in Charlestown who, residents said, were often in evidence in the parks at night. One woman, who lives by the Doherty Park, said, "It's like the whole town comes out there to drink."

Others pointed out that drug and alcohol abuse affects everyone. "We keep talking about kids. I think we need to talk about people. We need to talk about ourselves," Travis said.

According to Ohrstrom, most drugs on the black market are available in Charlestown, including Phencyclidene (Angel Dust) and Cocaine. He added that the "main problem" continues to be alcohol.

Linda Lacey, a sponsor for Alateen a self-help group for young people affected by someone else's alcoholism, named denial as a key foe in the fight against alcoholism. "People in Charlestown have denied alcohol problems for a long time. I'm concerned about the future of our community. We have to stop denying what is happening," said Lacey.

Suggestions were made to invite speakers who are recovered alcoholics or drug addicts. Travis said he would look into getting a member of the South Boston anti-drug group to speak at a future meeting.

The group did not set an agenda or choose a name for itself, but those present agreed to hold open meetings every two weeks. The next meeting will be Wednesday, July 13. "Tm not really sure what happened here tonight, but it happened and I'm please about that," Travis said as the session drew to a close.

Ligotti Announces Candidacy For Clerk of Supreme Judicial Court

Joseph A. Ligotti, the second assistant clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court for Suffolk County, has announced his candidacy for the position of Clerk of the court. Ligotti seeks to succeed the outgoing clerk, John E. Powers, who is retiring.

Assistant Clerk Ligotti has served for 26 years in the state's judicial system. His career began in 1962 when he was appointed to a position in the Suffolk County Probate Court. In 1973, Clerk Powers appointed Ligotti a court procedures clerk in the Supreme Judicial Court for Suffolk County. Two years later, Ligotti was appointed the third assistant clerk of that court, and just two years after that, he was promoted to the position of second assistant clerk.

A resident of Winthrop, the 44-year-old Ligotti and his wife of 18 years, Marie, have four children.

In announcing his candidacy for the elective office of Clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court for Suffolk County, he asked the voters of Suffolk County to endorse his promotion from assistant clerk in order that he might continue the fine work of the present Clerk, John E. Powers.

Ligotti stated, "No other candidate possesses my experience or expertise to carry out the important duties

The Clerk's office handles all of the bar applications for the State of Massachusetts; handles and ultimately disposes of all bar disciplines; and handles all of the myriad of matters which by statute and procedure, both criminal and civil, come before a single justice of the Supreme Judicial Court. The Clerk serves as the liaison between the justices of that high

Description / Summary:

The Massachusetts Port Authority's 1988-1989 Airfield Improvements Program for Logan International Airport includes the following projects:

* * * * * * * * * *

 Bypass Access Taxiway to Runways 22R and 27. An access taxiway to Runway 22R will be constructed parallel to the existing November taxiway. The existing taxiway to Runway 27 will also be widened to provide dual taxiway access.

 Sierra Parallel and Bypass Taxiways. A new bituminous concrete access taxiway parallel to the Sierra taxiway and a bypass taxiway connecting to the new Bravo-2 taxiway will be constructed.

3. Holding Apron Bypass at Taxiways C and G. A new bituminous concrete holding apron will be laid at the intersection of taxiways C and G.

 Pavement Rehabilitation, North Cargo Area. The work entails a bituminous concrete overlay on a portion of the existing asphalt apron adjacent to the TWA hangar and sealing the adjacent Portland cement concrete apron.
 Airfield Signs and Miscellaneous Improvements. Airfield signs and lighted wind cones will be installed. Miscellaneous snow melting, pavement repair, and electrical improvements will also be accomplished.

The purpose of the bypass taxiways is to improve FAA's efficiency in handling airfield traffic on the ground. The bypass taxiways are used to rearrange aircraft in the departure queue according to takeoff sequence criteria.

Standard methods for construction dust suppression will be required of the contractor. The construction schedules will be implemented based on wind/weather factors and often during nighttime and weekend hours to minimize the disruption of normal runway usage patterns. Truck deliveries will occur almost exclusively during normal working hours and contractors will be under contractual obligation to keep vehicles on designated roadways.

Boston Gas Cautioning Residents On Utility Company Imposters

Boston Gas is cautioning people to beware of imposter utility company representatives and stresses that its own employees carry photo identification cards for the public's benefit.

Because of reports of recent incidents in Charlestown of individuals posing as utility company workers in an attempt to enter homes under false pretenses and to possibly commit crimes, Boston Gas warns citizens to be careful when admitting strangers into their homes.

"All our field personnel collectors, meter readers, customer service representatives - have ID cards with their pictures on them." says Domenic A. Barbero, the Boston Gas manager whose responsibilities cover field activity within the city. "We advise customers not to allow anyone into their homes without asking for proper identification."

representatives, those who most often enter customer homes, wear distinctive uniforms with Boston Gas insignia, so they are generally recognizable as employees.

"However," he cautions, "if there is any doubt at all, ask to see a company ID card. If the person cannot produce one, under no circumstances let him or her into your home."
