is a part of the big family of Nike, Inc. which is known to offer only the best sportswear and sports equipment products on the planet. Before Nike became Nike, it was originally named as Blue Ribbon Sports established in 1964 by Philip Knight and Bill Bowerman. For the business to continue, the owners decided to introduce their own footwear products which were Swoosh, designed by Carolyn Davidson. The name Nike was formally adopted by the company in 1978, following the successful release of a soccer shoe named Nike in 1971 and the launching of the first line of Nike Shoes in the following year. Nike is named after the Greek goddess of victory; depicting the company's aim to help athletes win in their events. The success of Nike Inc. became unstoppable as it claimed 50 3Fpsc26SubscriptionId26tag26linkCode26camp26creative e26creativeASIN3Fpsc26SubscriptionId26tag26linkCode26camp26creative26creativeASIN3Fpsc26SubscriptionId26tag26linkCode26camp26creative26creativeASIN3Fpsc26SubscriptionId26tag26linkCode26camp26creative26cr shoes for basketball? I can't believe I just said that. How can there possibly be too many colorways of the best made shoes for basketball? Actually, there is no way that Nike can make too many different colorways of their basketballs shoes. For myself and all other rabid sneaker fanatics, there has been no better time than now to be a sneakerhead. No time in the history of basketball shoes has provided sneakerheads with so many different options when purchasing a pair of kicks. That is a very good thing. Unless you are an obsessive-compulsive sneakerhead like me. If you, like myself, are one of the hundreds of basketball shoe fanatics that suffers from OCD, you fully understand the conflicting feelings that are aroused by the daily sighting of a sick new sneaker drop. Literally everyday brings a new colorway in a Nike shoe for basketball. The hugely popular Hyperdunk 2011 had released in at least 30 different color versions the last time I counted. The Hyperfuse 2011 is not far behind in the amount of colorways in which it has released. Unless you count the Hyperfuse 2011 Low. In that case the Hyperfuse surpasses the Hyperdunk in amount of releases. And that is just two Nike models among several that they have to offer. On one hand I love having an endless amount of different pairs of basketball shoes to cop. Do I really play enough basketball to justify owning 100 pairs of shoes. And besides, the basketball court is not the only place to rock a sick pair of basketball kicks. All the new colors and designs on basketball shoes is a dream come true for this aging sneakerhead. In the past few years Nike shoes for basketball have released in some unimaginable editions. And I want them all! But I am also a realist. I am just going to have to settle with a few. That's quite alright, a new pair of Hyperdunk 2011's will do. For now.
