

Salute to the Dedication of Firefighters

A firefighter's life is always in jeopardy because they must deal with flames. They carry heavy luggage on their backs to prepare for the worst-case scenario. Despite firefighting precautions, a large number of firefighters are killed each year.

Firefighter Day was first observed in 1999, after five firefighters were killed by massive flames in a forest due to a sudden change in wind direction. Every year on May 4th, the world observes World Firefighter's Day to honour the dangerous services of firefighters.

Their work does not stop at cooling down burning buildings; they also deal with wildfires, where the intensity of the fire is much higher and lives are at stake.

No one can imagine climbing a tree to save a fire-afraid animal who is unable to come down on his own. Carry a human who has been injured and is unconscious on your shoulder. Every day, firefighters risk their lives to save the lives of humans and animals trapped in a dangerous fire.

Let us remember the firefighters who work in this field as well as those who have died fighting fires. The public's support will inspire all firefighters worldwide.
