The problem is that at the time of the Microsoft mojang account migration I did not have a pc. and clearly that signifies that I have not migrated my account. The bigger drawback is that I have an Microsoft account for minecraft bedrock which does not have a Java model purchased though. Am I screwed and pressured to rebuy the game or did I overlook an log in with mojang operate?

If you click on "login" on minecraft.web, the dialog field is for Mojang accounts. Word the textual content, "nonetheless have a mojang account? log in right here:". Minecraft-server-list To login with a Microsoft account, you have to click the Microsoft Login button.

Having mentioned all that, right here is the direct link to the launcher obtain:

They're still migrating I feel.... Have you tried logging in to minecraft.internet (or the Minecraft launcher) with your mojang/Minecraft account credentials?

It's best to be able to link your Java account to your present Microsoft account/Xbox gamer tag and Java will nonetheless present your Java name.

In case you have Mojang account, you possibly can still use it.

You of course ought to migrate to Microsoft account. You possibly can have each Java and Bedrock versions of Minecraft in a single Microsoft account, they are basically separate video games.
