

Bunker Hill Day Parade, June 16th

Charlestown To Commemorate The 210th Anniversary Of The Battle Of Bunker Hill

The 210th Anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill will be highlighted by the annual Bunker Hill Day Parade to be held on Sunday afternoon, June 16th. This parade is sponsored by the Charlestown Veterans/Bunker Hill Day Commemorative Committee, under the auspices of the City of Boston.

Giving the command "Forward March," starting the parade up Bunker Hill Street from Hayes Square will be Chief Marshal Edward "Ed" Kelly, a W.W.II Navy veteran who resides with his wife, Edna, on Monument Square.

Ed enlisted in the Massachusetts State Police on September 19, 1949 and rose through the ranks to Lt. Colonel and Commanding Officer of Staff Operations when he retired in 1977.

In October 1979, he was appointed as Deputy Commissioner of Public Safety for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts with an office in the John W. McCormack State Office Building at One Ashburton Place, Boston.

A lifelong resident of Charlestown, Ed Kelly has been active on the Bunker Hill Parade Committee for the past several years and is well deserving of the honor to be Chief Marshal of the 1985 - Bunker Hill Day Parade.

The June 16, 1985 - Bunker Hill Day Parade will be the biggest since the 1975 - Bicentennial Parade with over 29 musical units, as well as a Marine Band and marching units from all the U.S. Armed Forces, veteran colorguards, police motorcycle drill teams, mounted units, clowns, Irish-step dancers, baton twirlers, floats and antique cars.

The 1985 - Bunker Hill Day Parade is dedicated to the veterans of World War I as exemplified by former Boston Park Commissioner Frank R. Kelley, a W.W.I Navy veteran and Past National Vice Commander of The American Legion who has dedicated his life to the service of his fellow veteran, his community, state and nation.

Legal Notice

BOSTON REDEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY

Notice is hereby given that the Boston Redevelopment Authority has a proposal from Thomas Howley and Alan Kueny (jointly the "Redevelopers"), for the purchase of Disposition Parcel R-17F in the Charlestown Urban Renewal area, said parcel containing approximately 2,300 square feet of land abutting 47-49 Park Street.

The staff of the Boston Redevelopment Authority is recommending to the Director and the BRA Board the tentative designation of the Redevelopers as the developers of said Parcel R-17F. The Redevelopers are proposing to relocate an abandoned structure presently located at 44-46 Warren Street to Parcel R-17F. This building was scheduled to be demolished as part of the Tontine Crescent Development and has been donated by the developers thereof. The plan is to move the structure to Parcel R-17F, restore the shell and sell it to owner-occupants.

The Boston Redevelopment Authority will consider this recommendation for tentative designation at its meeting on June 27, 1985 at 2:30 P.M. at the Board Room, 9th Floor, City Hall, One City Hall Square, Boston, Massachusetts.

The Redevelopers have filed with the Boston Redevelopment Authority a Redeveloper's Statement for Public Disclosure as prescribed by the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development pursuant to Section 105 (e) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended.

This notice is being made as required by and to comply with Chapter 268A, Section 20 of the Massachusetts General Laws, as amended, since one of the Redevelopers, namely Thomas Howley, is a municipal employee and is subject to the provisions of the beforementioned statute.

Miss Stephanie Sprague of 18 Parker Street, Charlestown has been selected by the Thomas J. Roberts Unit 78 of the American Legion Auxiliary as its representative to the 41st Annual Massachusetts Girls State, to convene at Bridgewater State College June 16-21, 1985.

To Attend Massachusetts Girls State

Miss Sprague is a member of the Junior Class at Boston English High School. More than 250 other representatives will come from all parts of the State and will participate in a week's study of local and state government. These girls are selected on the basis of potential leadership qualities.

"Our girls are part of thousands of third-year high school girls who will attend the Girls States of the American Legion Auxiliary this year," explained Miss Marie Fitzgerald, Director of Girls State. Seminars are again being held in every state (including the District of Columbia) except Alaska.

At Girls State the girls will establish and operate a miniature state government of their own. They will form two political parties, hold conventions, nominate candidates for office, conduct campaigns and hold an election. Officers elected will be installed and the executive, legislative and judicial functions of state government carried out.

Talks by high state officials, leaders in government and other professions, will be part of the Girls State program. The girls will hear about the duties and responsibilities of the various branches of government from men and women actually engaged in government work. Both from practice and study of government, the girls will return home with a much better understanding of how American Democracy functions. More than 10,500 Massachusetts Girls have participated in this Citizenship Program since its inauguration in 1945.

Two girls from the 1985 Girls State will be selected to represent the girls of Massachusetts at Girls Nation, to be operated in Washington, D.C., under American Legion Auxiliary sponsorship.

America's Cup Challenger Courageous II To Be Docked In Charlestown

After months of negotiating, the Charlestown Development Corporation is pleased to announce the docking, at Pier 4 in the Charlestown Navy Yard, of the Courageous II, the 12 million dollar sailing vessel which will travel to Australia in 1987 in the hope of recapturing the America's Cup.

The driving force behind the Courageous II is the Courageous Syndicate which was formed in 1983. The organization is presently trying to change the public image of the sport of sailing. In the past, sailing has been considered a sport for the rich and affluent, but the Syndicate states this is just not so. Sailing is for everyone.

Joseph Flaherty, President of the Charlestown Development Corporation, states that the magnitude in the arrival of the Courageous II and the national attention Charlestown will receive as a result of the vessel spending a summer on the docks of Charlestown, is enormous.

The Cup was a national possession for 132 years, which stood as the longest held record in the history of world sports.

On Friday, June 14, 1985, the Courageous II will arrive in Boston and remain here throughout the summer. As part of the Courageous Syndicate's plan to bring sailing to everyone, the Syndicate will be sponsoring instructors for sailing classes. The Life Focus Center, which provides programming for the retarded and handicapped in Charlestown and the surrounding communities, will be among those local groups to participate.

According to Flaherty, the Courageous II will possibly participate in sailing matches along the inner harbor.

Through the generosity of the Charlestown Development Corporation, the Courageous II will be docked at Pier 4 at the Charlestown Navy Yard until September. Due to the expensive and sophisticated equipment aboard the Courageous II, the vessel will be removed from the water daily by Marr Equipment. Residents can watch the crew remove the keel of the vessel from the dock.

The Courageous II and her crew of 40 will also take part in the Sonesta Summerfest on Friday, June 14, 1985.

COURAGEOUS II, training in waters off the coast of Bermuda, for its quest to recapture the prized America's Cup from Australia in 1987. The 12-Meter was redesigned to include an innovative, aerospace-inspired Vortex Wing keel developed by Leonard Greene, chairman of The Courageous Challenge.

The 162nd Annual Meeting Of The Bunker Hill Monument Association

The 162nd Annual Meeting of the Bunker Hill Monument Association will be held at 12:30 p.m. on Monday, June 17, 1985 at the First Baptist Church, 5 Monument Square, Charlestown.

The agenda will include the receiving of annual reports and electing officers for the ensuing year.

A buffet luncheon will be served prior to the meeting.

The price is $5.00 per person and reservations may be secured by sending a check with name and address to James W. Conway, President, P.O. Box 54, Charlestown, MA 02129.

The guest speaker on this occasion will be John Burchill, newly named Director of the Boston National Historical Park of the National Park Services, U.S. Department of the Interior.

Mr. Burchill will update the membership on the Bunker Hill Monument - the preservation and plans for the grounds and the displays. Mr. Burchill comes to Boston with a strong sense of history and is sensitive to this significant site and the concerns the membership share in the present and future plans for the Monument area. This promises to be a most informative and enjoyable program.

Applications for membership will be acted upon at this annual meeting. Lifetime membership is $10.00. Prospective members and the public are invited to attend.

Anyone wishing to apply for membership who is unable to attend the meeting, may send a check in the amount of $10.00 made payable to the Bunker Hill Monument Association and forward it with name, address, and telephone number to James W. Conway, President at the above address.

Romance Became A Casualty Of The Revolutionary War

The Battle of Bunker Hill claimed more than lives, as Patriots fought for the liberty of the Colonies. For one couple, the Battle cost them their romance.

Dorcas Pringle Griffiths, a widow, at the onset of the war, was said to have been romantically involved with John Hancock, a man who would later become famous for being governor of Massachusetts, the President of the Continental Congress, and first signer of the Declaration of Independence and despite Griffiths being eighteen years his senior, this was the least of their differences.

Griffiths was a Tory. Hancock, on the other hand, was a Patriot. Their political differences would eventually kill their love affair.

After the Battle, Captain David Johnston of the Royal Marines, who was seriously wounded and feared for dead, was nursed back to health by the young widow and her daughter, Sarah, who took the Britain into their home.

Hancock at the time was encouraged by family and peers to marry Dorothy Quincy, a woman considered to be "an old maid," but of a fine family. Griffiths, on the other hand, never remarried.

The Battle of Bunker Hill

June 17, 1775

"Behold the Cerberus the Atlantic plow
Her precious cargo — Burgoyne, Clinton, Howe —
Bow, wow, wow!"

The British ship Cerberus sailed smartly into Boston Harbor on the 25th of May, 1775. On their way from England, three of the most important British generals of the Revolutionary War walked her decks - Sir William Howe, Sir Henry Clinton and John Burgoyne. On the way into the harbor a packet was hailed coming out, bound for Newport.

"What news is there?" a voice cried out from the port rail of the Cerberus.

"Boston is surrounded by ten thousand countrymen!"

"How many regulars in Boston?"

"About five thousand!"

"What!...Ten thousand peasants keep five thousand King's troops shut up! Well, let us in and we shall soon make elbow-room." It was General Burgoyne who spoke with such assurance just twenty-two days before the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Lieutenant General Thomas Gage, Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Forces in America and Royal Governor of Massachusetts, had long wanted elbow-room. He didn't get it at Lexington or Concord and it was beginning to look as if he might not get it at all. The people of Boston didn't care much for Gage. They hated his soldiers, who were forever parading on the Common or prowling about the streets. They hated his officers even more — "macaroni" who pranced their horses with a great show in the suburbs. There was gaiety nowhere, not even in the Province House. But the General had a good nose for trouble and he sniffed the air suspiciously on the morning of June 10th, for the return of the rebel army at Cambridge had showed 7,644 officers and men only the day before.

Two days later Gage had a well developed case of claustrophobia. The siege of Boston was no longer a joke. He wanted elbow-room and he wanted it quickly. So he sprang to, what was for him, action. He issued a proclamation! It pronounced those in arms "to be rebels and traitors" and offered pardon to all who would lay down their arms or "stand distinct and separate from the paricides of the constitution," — excepting, of course, those arch-rebels, Samuel Adams and John Hancock.

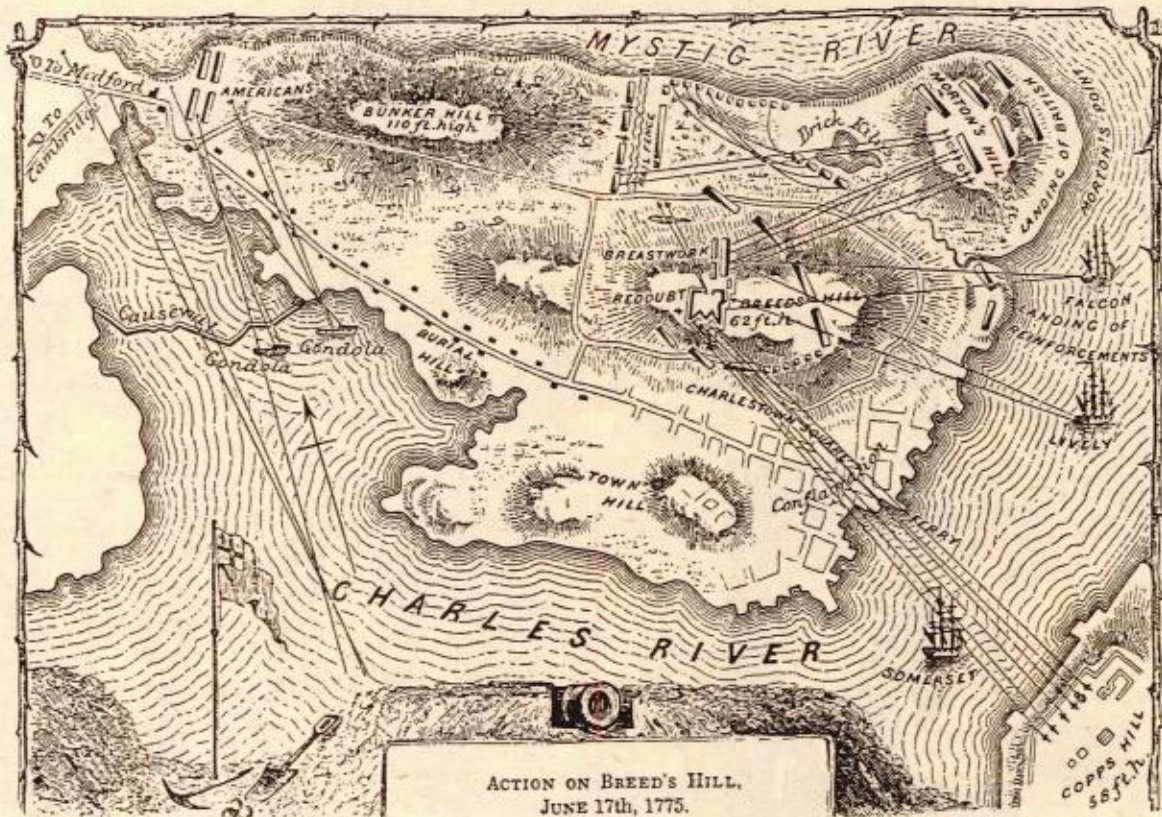

Gage looks covetously at the strategic heights of Dorchester and Charlestown. Through them, he and his officers see a way to elbow-room. When his spies bring word that the Massachusetts Committee of Safety is thinking in terms of fortifications, he straightway lays plans to steal a march on them. He proposes to begin with Dorchester Heights, and the 18th of June is the date he sets for the coup. Turning the tables on Gage, the Committee of Safety shows it too has ways of finding things out and hastily appoints two of its members to join with the Council of War at Roxbury, on the afternoon of June 15th, to consider what should be done.

As a result of this meeting, General Artemus Ward in Cambridge is forced to make a move at long last. He issues orders to Prescott's, Frye's and Bridges' regiments, Gridley's company of artillery, and a fatigue party of 200 Connecticut troops to parade at six o'clock on the evening of June 16th, equipped with packs and blankets, and provisions for 24 hours. They are to have with them all the entrenching tools in the Cambridge camp. Colonel William Prescott, of Pepperell, is handed written orders placing him in command.

At six o'clock about 1,000 men parade, and at nine

Prayer before the battle as the British soldiers approached.

THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL: Map of the action at Breed's Hill on Charlestown Peninsula, June 17, 1775. As a move against the entrenched British in Boston, Artemus Ward and the others in command of the American forces outside Boston sent a detail to fortify Bunker Hill on the evening of June 16. By mistake, the American troops built their redoubt on Breed's Hill, which is lower, more vulnerable and closer to Boston.

o'clock, after listening with bared heads to a "fervent and impressive prayer" by President Langdon of Harvard College, the march commences. "Where are we going?" is the question on every man's tongue.

Colonel Prescott, dressed in homespun, a light-colored banian and a three-cornered hat, marches at the head of his command. He alone knows where and why they are going. Guided by two sergeants, who carry dark lanterns, and walk a few paces in front of Prescott, the patriots steal along beneath a starlit sky, with a waning moon at their backs. They march silently over the dusty road that runs through Inman's Woods, by Prospect and Cobble Hills, halting only when they reach the little thread of land that leads from the Cambridge Road to the triple-hilled peninsula of Charlestown. Here Prescott calls his field officers about him and communicates his orders.

What many have already surmised now becomes a reality. The heights of Charlestown are to be seized and a fortification erected right under the very noses of the British sloop-of-war that lie moored close to the Charlestown shore, just across the Charles River from Boston. Even to the rank and file, the rashness of such a move is readily apparent. But Prescott silences most of the grumblings by talk of reinforcements and provisions that are to be sent up in the morning.

It is at Charlestown Neck that General Israel Putnam rides up out of the darkness. As always "Old Put" is in a great hurry. Colonel Prescott dispatches a company to the lower part of the town as a guard and the main body marches straight to the summit of Bunker Hill and halts. Orders from General Ward are explicit as to a fortification on Bunker Hill, but there now ensues a lengthy consultation as to whether it should be placed here or on the middle hill, nearer Boston, known to the people of Charlestown as Breed's Pasture. The hours to daylight are slipping away. Colonel Gridley, the engineer, strongly urges the necessity of a speedy decision. Putnam is firm in his stand for Breed's Hill and he points out that they can erect works on Bunker Hill later, to cover a retreat if one is necessary. Proceeding to Breed's Hill, the detachment halts. Colonel Gridley marks out the plan of a fortification and entrenching tools are distributed among the men.

It is midnight when the work begins. The men dig in relays. Prescott places a patrol along the shore in the lower part of the town to keep an eye on the British during the night. Twice he leaves the works and goes down to hear for himself the regular "All's well!" aboard the British ships. Throughout the night men on the hill dig and grovel like ground hogs — whispering orders, oaths and jests, carrying things, sweating — digging themselves in against the British.

The redoubt that Colonel Gridley stakes out is pitifully small, "about Ten Rod long, eight wide, with a Breast Work of about Eight more." The frail works that are taking form are anything but impressive. If the darkness led Prescott to think his position a strong one, he knows better when the first glimmer of daylight shows him how easily his little redoubt can be outflanked on both sides.

Dawn brings a beautiful morning. Save for the redoubt, Breed's Hill is still a peaceful pasture, its west slope studded with apple orchards. In some places, long grass, ripe for a farmer's scythe, waves in a gentle early morning breeze; in others, hay lies in winrows and cocks, fresh and sweet from recent cutting. The tide is ebbing. Dog-tired after four hours of almost superhuman work, the men in the redoubt gaze wonderingly through the early morning mists at the British ships of the line, that lie so peacefully in the harbor and river below — there is the Falcon, off Moulton's Point; the Lively, a little farther west; the Sonterset, at the ferry; and the Glasgow, Cerberus and several floating batteries — all within range — and all bristling with cannon.

The Lively lives up to her name, for even her sailors are already keenly alert even though it is now a few minutes before four o'clock. One of them chances to look toward Breed's Hill. He can hardly believe what he sees. There is a great to-do aboard. Captain Thomas Bishop, without waiting for orders, has a spring put on his ship's cable and in a matter of moments the first shot of that fateful day goes booming out of his ship's side toward the American works. Whose hill is this anyway? His Majesty the King's as far as the captain of the Lively is concerned.

Everybody wakes up on shipboard and in Boston. The cannonading is taken up by all the British ships and it is not long before even Burgoyne's pieces over on Copp's Hill, in Boston, are belching forth fire and smoke and ball. No sooner does the cannonading get going nicely than the British Admiral, for some unaccountable reason, orders it stopped. Gage orders it resumed and it starts up louder than ever.

As the morning wears on, the cannonading becomes hotter. So does the sun. Yet the men on the hill keep steadily at their work on the redoubt which is now six feet high. They build platforms of wood and earth to stand on should they have to fire. Prescott tries to strengthen his left flank. He is satisfied that Charlestown will protect his right. So he lays out a breastwork on his left "about twenty rods in length...under a very warm fire from the enemy's artillery." By now the men in the redoubt are accustomed to the cannonade and loud huzzas greet each ball that ploughs up the sod on the hillside or goes wide of its mark.

A man mounts the parapet. He waves his hat about his head as one cannon ball rolls up to within ten feet of him and stops. He turns to jump back and is cut in two by another. Prescott orders him buried at once. A Chaplain protests, but the man is buried "without prayers." Again there are grumblings. Suddenly Prescott mounts the parapet himself and walks leisurely around it inspecting everything, directing his officers, encouraging or joking with his men and completely ignoring the heavy British fire.

In Boston, spectators throng and crowd on every height and every point which affords a view of the little mound on Breed's Hill. General Gage is there, too. He looks through his glass and sees Prescott's tall figure. "Who is the person who has appeared to command?" he asks of Tory Councillor Willard, who is at his elbow. Willard takes the glass and recognizes his brother-in-law. "Will he fight?" asks Gage. "Yes, sir," Willard replies. "He is an old soldier, and will fight as long as a drop of blood remains in his veins."

British soldiers wait for action beside their artillery.

More time passes. There are few signs of life behind the earthwork that from Boston looks more like an ant hill than a fortification. The British have held their council of war and soon boats are seen pushing off from the sloops-of-war, filled with red-coated soldiers. "Lobsters!" growl the men on the hill. It looks more and more as if a fight is in the making. Whose hill is this anyway? Everybody wants the answer.

By eleven o'clock the Americans have mostly stopped their work. The heat is oppressive. No refreshments have arrived save a single wagon with a few barrels of beer. There is much suffering from want of food and drink as well as heat and fatigue. Never could men be in a worse condition for action.

At noon the British soldiers are getting ready to embark from Boston and men looking over the top of the redoubt see long lines of scarlet, trailing through the Boston streets toward the waterfront. There is a flashing at countless points where the sunlight falls on polished metal. Now the filled barges are pushing out from Long Wharf and the North Battery. The flotilla moves slowly toward Charlestown.

Where are the American reinforcements? Putnam has twice ridden to Cambridge since midnight, and at nine o'clock Prescott had sent Major Brooks hurrying away for the same purpose. But only handfuls have arrived and it is almost one o'clock. Putnam gallops onto the scene again and everyone expects to see him knocked off his horse by a cannon ball. He says reinforcements are on the way and suggests commencing work at Bunker Hill, and the entrenching tools are carried back almost too eagerly.

In the meantime troops from the British ships are landing at Moulton's Point and tall General Howe walks two hundred yards toward the American works as he reconnoiters their position. He sends back to Gage for reinforcements. The British wait placidly. They even sit down and eat their dinners. It looks more like a picnic than a battle. At this stage Prescott orders his artillery and the Connecticut troops out of the redoubt to take a position on the left where they can harass the British as they land. They march back toward Bunker Hill and seize the first defensible position they see. It is behind a wall of stone topped with wooden rails. They go to a nearby fence and bring back more rails which they set up parallel to the wall. The spaces between they fill with hay to give some semblance of a fortification.

It is now after two o'clock and Colonel Stark arrives at the neck with his New Hampshire troops. This little thirty-foot strip is being raked with fire from British ships and batteries. But Stark tells his men to take their time. "One fresh man in action is worth ten fatigued ones," he says. So they march steadily over to the peninsula. Sizing up the situation at a glance, Stark leads his men straight to the rail-fence looking so much like a breastwork the British are really deceived, even if it provides no real cover.

Putnam is riding all over the hill, hurrying reinforcements to the redoubt and turning back deserters who are trying to slink away. A lone figure walks up over the hill. No one used to fighting would be as dressy as he. It is Joseph Warren. He is a major-general but he has not formally received his commission so he comes to serve only as a volunteer. "Tell me where the onset will be most furious," he says to Putnam, who directs him to the redoubt. When Warren enters all the men huzza! Another general arrives. It is seventy-year-old Seth Pomeroy who has hurried down to Cambridge from Northampton with his musket when he heard there might be a battle. As the cannonading becomes louder he becomes more excited. Finally he gets General Ward to lend him a horse and he gallops off to Charlestown Neck. Ward has told him to be careful of the horse so he leaves it with a sentry near the neck and walks straight through the British fire to take his place at the rail-fence with Stark's men.

By three o'clock some 2,200 British have landed. Howe refuses to win an easy victory by attacking the flanks and rear. Here is a battle to be fought his way. He will show these Yankee rebels what His Majesty's troops can do by a straightforward attack. He makes a short address to his men. "I shall not desire one of you to go a step further than where I go myself at your head," he concludes.

The British cannonading becomes furious. The American artillery pieces sound like popguns as they feebly return the fire, and after a few shots they are almost silent.

Now that an attack is certain, the Americans are in a dither. They know they are the underdogs, for the British outnumber them two to one. Putnam rides about wilder than ever. There are hurried consultations of officers, and frequent dispatching of messengers from the hill to the neck or from one part of the hill to another. The stage is set and the curtain is rising on the splendid first scene of an immortal national drama.

With a roll of drums the British begin to march. Howe heads straight for the hay-covered rail-fence. The troops to his left, under General Pigot, march up the hill towards the redoubt. Howe's artillery becomes mired in the soft ground after it goes a short way. The British move slowly in long straight lines. They swing along in silence and look neither to right nor to left — outwardly as calm as if on parade. Their stiff cumbersome uniforms are a handicap. But even worse, they are fully equipped for field service and carry knapsacks and provisions for three days.

They struggle through long grass and clamber over fences under a burning hot June sun. Their scarlet coats seem to blaze, their steel bayonets flash. As they advance they fire formal volleys by platoons in fixed order, but the charges go high over the mark. They know nothing of accuracy in shooting. But they think the noise will frighten the rebels. On they come — nearer and nearer.

In the redoubt and behind the breastwork, the British see no sign of life. Some even wonder if the rebels have not run away. But there is plenty happening there. The officers are having a hard time to restrain their men from firing. "Hold Fire! Wait until you can see the whites of their eyes," is the word passed about. Prescott is wise and he holds most of them in check until the redcoats are within sure range.

Before they realize it, the British are at hand. The men in the redoubt can see a look of mild curiosity on the faces of the marching men as they approach. "What a way to march to one's death!" they whisper. It seems almost too late...when the powerful voice of some Yankee twangs "FIRE!" The order is timed with precision. Through the smoke the Americans see great gaps appear in the scarlet lines, red-coated soldiers are lying on the ground, some writhing and grimacing, some perfectly still, others without visible wounds. The astonished redcoats make a feeble attempt to recover the regular formation of their lines. A few fire back at the heads in the redoubt, but as always, they shoot too high. Slowly the British lines roll back down the hill, and as they go figures fall behind and plunge to earth. The Americans are elated.

Howe's men re-form by the shore, and soon the General has them charging up the hill again, only to be mowed down like tall meadow-grass or driven back to the water's edge by the deadly marksmanship of Prescott's men. Howe thinks the Americans are not fighting fairly. They are picking off his best officers. This time the British retreat in great confusion. The slope of Breed's Hill is covered with dead and wounded. Red-hot shot from the ships and Burgoyne's guns on Copp's Hill set the village of Charlestown afire. He hopes the smoke will shield the British but the wind blows it the wrong way.

Howe takes his time. He can't do otherwise, for his men are in no condition to face the deadly fire of the Americans. General Clinton sees Howe's plight and hastens over from Boston with reinforcements. This time Howe discards formality, orders his men to take off their heavy packs and knapsacks. Some even discard their coats. What few British officers are left hold a brief council.

The ammunition of the Americans is all but exhausted. Officers take what few unused artillery cartridges there are and tear off the paper covers, distribute the powder among the known marksmen and tell them to make every grain count. Prescott is very brave. He shouts to his men, "If they are driven back once more, they can't be rallied again." But he knows the hill is doomed. Still he places the few men who have bayonets at points where he thinks the enemy will attempt to scale the parapet.

Finally the British start moving up the hill for the third time. Prescott looks at his men. "We're ready for them!" they cry. The King's men come up in columns this time. Just before they reach the top, the patriots fire. The men in the front ranks of the columns go down but those behind surge on up over the top of the breastwork and the redoubt. Major Pitcairn, who handled affairs at Lexington and Concord, mounts the parapet of the American works, raises his sword and cries, "The day is ours!" and falls pierced by the last shot of some Yankee. The Americans' fire goes out like an old candle. Slowly they give way and Prescott orders a retreat. Some, braver or more foolhardy than the rest, are reluctant to leave. Joseph Warren lingers an instant too long and pays for his valor with his life. Americans go down on every side as the redcoats show they know how to use bayonets. The rest flee. Prescott disdains to run but he steps "long with his sword up." In their scramble back over the hill to the neck, the Americans kick up a great cloud of dust that serves as a protecting cover.

Clinton urges Howe to drive after them. The British general looks at Stark and Putnam whose men at the rail-fence have done such valuable service and now are slowly preparing to retreat. Twice Howe has been left standing alone before the rail-fence looking into the muskets of Stark's men, while his own troops have rushed back to Moulton's Point. Howe has had enough. He came to take the hill and he has taken it.

Putnam dashes to the rear and urges the men to turn back. "Make a stand here," he cries, "we can stop them yet." But the Americans, too, have had enough.

Howe has taken all the chances he wants for one day — too many chances, for nearly one-third of his command are now casualties. So the exhausted British do not pursue beyond Bunker Hill.

It is five o'clock when Howe orders his men to parade. And the British take formal possession of Breed's Hill.

As Daniel Webster said, fifty years later, when Lafayette laid the cornerstone of Bunker Hill Monument, "The incidents and results of the battle were most important and indeed most wonderful..." Though the British won the hill, they paid dearly for it — 226 killed, 828 wounded — 1,054 casualties by their own official return. The Americans knew this did not begin to tell the real tale.

On the American side, most of the casualties occurred after the British carried the redoubt. The official return after the battle was 140 killed, 271 wounded and 30 captured — 441 casualties. At best it was, as Clinton wrote, "a dear bought victory" for the British. Their loss had been frightful. The battle had proved that the Americans could shoot to kill and that as long as they had ammunition for their muskets, they could more than hold their own against the flower of His Britannic Majesty's troops. Even in defeat, the patriots on Breed's Hill gave courage and inspiration to all the colonies. That in itself was a victory.

When news of the battle reached Philadelphia, George Washington, now Commander-in-Chief of the American Army, asked, "Did the militia of New England stand the fire of the British regulars?" When he was told they had and reserved their own fire until the enemy was within eight rods, he said, "The liberties of the country are safe!"

This account of the Battle of Bunker Hill was originally published by the First National Bank of Boston in 1938. Appreciation is extended to the officers of the bank for permission to reprint this article.

This 1858 illustration from "Harper's Weekly" shows the intense hand-to-hand combat at the top of the hill. The Americans were finally driven back to the mainland, but records show that the British sustained over a thousand dead and wounded out of the 2,200 men used in the assault, more than twice the casualties sustained by the Americans. The fact that British regular army troops met such fierce resistance from relatively untrained Americans, made the battle a moral victory of the colonials.

At approximately 11:00 a.m. on Bunker Hill Day, Sunday, June 16th, the Charlestown Association of Parents (CAPS) will be presenting a puppet show on the Training Field immediately following the Doll Carriage Parade. All children are invited to bring their parents and come watch Clair DiMeo from Melrose, a puppeteer who has performed extensively throughout the Greater Boston area.

CAPS was formed to provide arts and entertainment programs for all children in the community, as well as offer educational presentations for parents. In its second year of existence, some of the successful activities which have been sponsored by CAPS include the Halloween parties at the Charlestown Working Theater; swimming for tots at the Boys and Girls Club; expressions and movement classes for toddlers at the Chartown Working Theater.

In the long tradition of Bunker Hill Day Festivities, CAPS hopes that the many participants and spectators at the Doll Carriage Parade will stay and enjoy the puppet show to follow. In the event of rain, the puppet show will be held at the St. Mary's Parish Hall, Winthrop Street.

CAPS welcomes all new members. For further information, please call Patricia Johnston at 241-7716 or Andrea Garr at 242-3356.

Traffic And Parking In Area Of Old C.H.S. To Be Topic Of Meeting

A meeting addressing traffic and parking concerns in the vicinity of Old Charlestown High School on Monument Square will be held on Tuesday evening, June 18, 1985 at 7:00 p.m. at the Charlestown High School on 254 Medford Street.

Among the considerations will be the vehicular entrances and exits from the former high school, the traffic patterns in the area, and the potential parking problems that may be generated with the renovation of the building into 44 apartment units by the Graham Gund Associates.

All area abutters and interested persons are encouraged to attend.

Letter to the Editor:

After growing marigolds and zinnias from seed, my husband and five year old son were thrilled when I announced that we now had a "Victory Garden" in Hathon Square. Our plants were deep green and very healthy from TLC and fertilizer.

Last Friday, June 7, we planted two dozen marigolds and one dozen zinnias in our plot. We also had a dozen tomato plants at home which were to go in. As it turned out, I was glad we did not get to put in the tomato plants because all thirty-six of our lovely efforts were dug up and stolen by Sunday, June 9th.

I hope whoever is responsible for this action is reading this letter because I would like you to know how much of a loss this was to a five year old who grew those plants from seeds. I have heard of some low behavior in the past, but this beats it by a mile. Needless to say, we will never plant anything here again.

Thank You, Frank

by Charlie McGonagle

Today, my greatest wish is that my letter reached Mr. Power before he died, and that in it he was able to recognize the gratitude I attempted to express.

Since leaving last January for Ireland, he had twice contacted me through the mail. I considered this an honor, for among those he knew well were dignitaries in the world of sports and public life as well. To be numbered among those he counted as his friends carries a special meaning for me.

The envelope was postmarked March 29, and the letter inside was filled with things common to the two of us, and probably of no interest to anybody else. Several weeks after having sent it, and perhaps after passing through reams of red tape, I found it returned to my mailbox marked "insufficient postage". The letter was to go overseas, and the twenty-two cent stamp I had attached was not enough.

Truly meaning to include the necessary postage and remail the letter, I put it aside, and in a move typical of many, forgot about it.

A few weeks ago, after opening a cluttered drawer, I came across the still sealed envelope, and felt immediate embarrassment at my neglect. Without wasting another moment, I sat down, wrote a second letter, and placed it in a larger envelope with the first. After attaching the proper postage, I mailed the letter to Mr. Power's address in Ireland.

On Wednesday morning, June 5, I read Mr. Power's obituary. It is very important to me that he received and read my letter. There is a reason for this, and I would like to share it.

I believe it was early 1968 when he returned to Charlestown High School as headmaster. I had been teaching at the school for a couple of years, and although we were meeting for the first time, I had known of him since the mid fifties when he helped to elevate the athletic program at Charlestown High School to a level of excellence never before reached by the school.

I, as many others in the community, had become a Charlestown High School fan, and a Frank Power devotee. Through the eyes of his athletes, my friends, I followed his exploits and marvelled at the esteem in which he was held by his "boys".

Time passed, and promotions from within the system took him elsewhere, but the tradition of excellence he had helped to set at Charlestown High School would continue for years to come.

His appointment as headmaster in 1968 was hailed by many in the community as a triumphant return, for his reputation had easily survived the years of his absence.

Even in the beginning, as virtual strangers, we found our conversations very easy, for many of his friends were mine and our talks could be kept comfortable by traveling these paths.

To say that I was sorely lacking in experience in those days would be an understatement, but slowly he helped to nurture a potential he felt he saw in me, but quite frankly, I had difficulty in recognizing.

In small pieces, he handed me more and more responsibility, being ever so careful not to ask for too much, but even more careful not to ask for too little. By use of the proper ingredients, he was helping me to develop a self-confidence which would be needed in order to be effective in my chosen field.

He knew I had played on baseball teams with some of his finest performers. He knew, also, that I did not possess their talents, but through our many conversations on the sport, he may have sensed I had a feeling for the game. When the position of Junior Varsity Baseball coach opened up, he placed me there ahead of others with more experience. Later he showed further confidence in me by naming me Varsity Swimming coach. Some of the more enjoyable of my life experiences were met with the young people I worked with in these two capacities which stretched over a decade or more.

By the early 1970's, a part of Mr. Power had become permanently linked to the Charlestown community, and he began to dream of a new high school complex which would boast of the best the city could offer in the fields of academics and athletics. He felt the community had earned the right to a new school, and he became a major catalyst in a move in that direction.

By the mid-seventies, however, the powers-to-be had taken the schools from the neighborhoods, and in doing so, shattered his dream. It was a period he later described as the "Darkest Hour" in his career. Perhaps because circumstances beyond his control were preventing him from doing what he had so long wanted to do, he left Charlestown High School with a great deal of reluctance. Only a few of us knew of the anguish he suffered when he felt he had to leave.

In the ensuing years our contacts were not many, but frequent enough to hold a friendship intact. Class reunions, Bunker Hill Days, and an occasional phone call were the things that brought us together during those years.

He would become the first headmaster of the Hubert Humphrey Occupational Resource Center, and later headmaster and Dean of the Boston Business School. It was in this capacity where fate would once again cause our paths to cross.

On March 18, 1982, at 7:35 a.m., I became the victim of an unfortunate and ugly incident at Charlestown High School, and one of the first of the many concerned calls I received came from Mr. Power. Because we had both known Charlestown High School as it was, and shared similar feelings for those days, it was easy for him to be sympathetic to my plight. As time passed, it became more and more apparent that I would never, or better could never, return to Charlestown High School.

During the next two years our conversations became more frequent, and the topic of discussion usually turned to the Business School where he was now serving as headmaster.

One morning he invited me to visit the school, and after some small talk, took me on a tour of the building. I know now that this was his way of testing my reaction toward a school environment totally different from any I had previously been associated with. What I did not realize at the time was that he was setting the groundwork for what might well be my future.

Time passed, more than two years in all, when on June 4, 1984, my phone rang. The Business School, once an entity of the City of Boston, was to be absorbed by the state's Community College system. In September of 1984, Mr. Power would be named dean of the school and there would be two positions available on his faculty. He wondered if I would be interested in filling one of them. He really did not have to ask, for I am sure he knew what my answer was to be.

It had been close to nine years since I last worked under him at Charlestown High School, but he had not forgotten. Many, myself included, are great practitioners of "out of sight, out of mind". I am thankful that Mr. Power did not advocate this philosophy.

Today, because Frank Power was a man who valued friendships, and went to great extremes to prove it, I have a job of which I can be proud, and a title to go along with it.

It was impossible to know last January, just before he left for Ireland, that I would not see him again, but something inside urged me to write expressing my gratitude for all he had done on my behalf. I did, and today I feel he knew of my appreciation, and for that I can be grateful.

The last letter I wrote, the one mentioned earlier, reaffirmed my gratitude. I spoke also of how much I enjoyed working at the Business School. I am sure he would have wanted to know, and this is why it is important to me that the letter reached him in time to be read.

Many people in this community owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Frank Power, but none more than I. I truly believe that each of us is sent to this life for many reasons, some recognizable to us, some not. I am thankful that I am able to recognize myself as one of Mr. Power's reasons for having been here.

Thank you Frank.

"Mysterious" Billy Smith To Fight June 24th

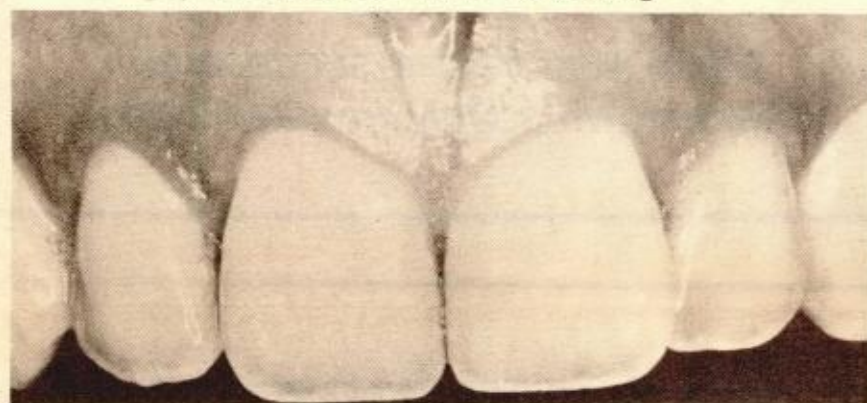

Charlestown's own "Mysterious" Billy Smith will take on Hyde Park's Mailman Kenny Butler on Monday evening, June 24th at 8:00 p.m., at the Spinoff roller-rink on Lansdowne Street, Boston (next to Fenway Park). This fight is quickly shaping up to be a "neighborhood war" between the two Boston neighborhoods.

Butler, who is always an exciting, comes to fight the gladiator, and will certainly have his hands full with the formidable Smith, who up to a short while ago was campaigning on the West Coast, while Butler has been fighting in many out of town bouts.

Both fight fans and supporters alike have been talking about this fight for quite some time and coupled with the extra-exciting undercard scheduled for that night, it should shape up to be a super fight card.

Charlestown Police Line

From The Desk Of
Deputy Superintendent Ronald X. Conway
Commanding Officer, Area A Downtown, Charlestown, East Boston, Beacon Hill

On May 31, 1985, at 10:30 p.m., police officers observed a man at 290 Main Street drinking from a can of beer. The suspect, a 33 year old Norwood man, was placed under arrest, taken to Area A, and booked for public drinking.

On June 3, 1985, an officer was approached by a female, who stated that while walking on Medford Street, she was set upon and assaulted by two suspects. The victim was able to identify the assailants, and warrants for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon were issued from Charlestown District Court. On this same date, detectives of Area A, armed with a warrant, went to the home of one of the suspects. The suspect, a 26 year old Charlestown man, was found to be at this location and placed under arrest.

On June 4, 1985, at 12:25 a.m., a cab driver reported to police officers that while inside his cab, he was robbed by a male suspect, who pointed a gun at him and demanded money. The suspect removed $80.00 in U.S. currency from the victim, and fled on foot. A description of the suspect was broadcast, and a search of the area conducted. A man fitting the description of the suspect, was spotted at 58 Medford Street. This suspect was placed under arrest, after being positively identified by the victim. The suspect, a 19 year old Charlestown man, was taken to Area A, and booked for armed robbery.

On June 4, 1985, at 8:00 p.m., police officers observed a man standing in front of 81 Walford Way. The officers knowing that the suspect had an active warrant issued from the Chelsea Court, placed the suspect under arrest. The suspect, an 18 year old Charlestown resident, was taken to Area A.

On June 4, 1985, at 10:45 p.m., police officers received information concerning a stolen motor vehicle, which had just been involved in a hit and run accident. A short time later, the officers observed this vehicle leaving a courtyard at 50 Medford Street. The officers pursued the vehicle to Constitution Road, where the operator lost control of the vehicle, and crashed. The operator then exited the vehicle and fled on foot.

After conducting a search of the area, the suspect was apprehended. The suspect, a 19 year old Charlestown man, was conveyed to Area A, and booked for larceny of a motor vehicle, and possession of burglary tools.

On June 6, 1985, at 10:50 a.m., police officers observed a man at Rutherford Avenue, who was known to have an active warrant issued from Charlestown Court. This suspect, a 26 year old Charlestown man, was placed under arrest, and transported to Area A.

On June 6, 1985, at 8:10 p.m., police officers observed a motor vehicle being operated in an erratic manner on Tufts Street. Upon being stopped, the operator exited the vehicle, appearing to be unsteady on his feet and smelling strongly of alcohol. The suspect, a 20 year old Charlestown man, was placed under arrest for operating under the influence, and conveyed to Area A.

Courageous II To Be Docked In Charlestown

The Hotel Sonesta will be hosting the crew of the Courageous II during their stay in Boston this summer.

The original Courageous won the America's Cup in 1974 and 1977. The craft distinguished itself as perhaps the pre-eminent 12 meter yacht of all time. In 1983, the Courageous was thought to be past its prime, despite a sensational performance at the 1983 America's Cup Trials. The Courageous was eliminated by another American vessel, the Liberty, on the last day of the defender trials. The Cup series was won by the Australia II by defeating the Liberty, four to three.

Courageous II, a redesigned version of Courageous, remains faithful to the sweep of the original America's Cup winning hull design. The craft is equipped with a complete range of electronic gear, including computers, with which the helmsman and tactician can attain the craft's peak-performance potential.

With the full cooperation of the Bermudian government, Courageous II crew has trained in Bermuda during the 1984-85 winter season. Several private entities pledged their support to the Courageous II and her goal, including Trans-Mar Agencies, Inc. and Princess Hotels International.

With each sailing of the Courageous II, much national attention and curiosity is generated. Ted Turner, "Captain Outrageous", multi-millionaire, and media tycoon, who skippered the original Courageous to two victories in 1977 and 1980, has twice visited Charlestown.

Flaherty also stated he has received telephone calls from a Hollywood, California film agency expressing interest in coming to the area this summer. "This worldwide attention will be a positive thing for Charlestown," stated Flaherty.

"The arrival of the Courageous II will only generate total positiveness. Everyone will benefit."
