LIVING LAB RESEARCH CONCEPT IN RURAL AREAS

LIVERUR project aims at modernising the small – medium rural businesses present in the European territory and it's a H2020 project.

SMAEs (Small – Medium Agricultural Enterprises) do represent crucial actors in the structure and the dynamics of EU rural economy: despite the on-going consolidation process, rural activities in Europe are still carried out primarily by small or very small holdings.

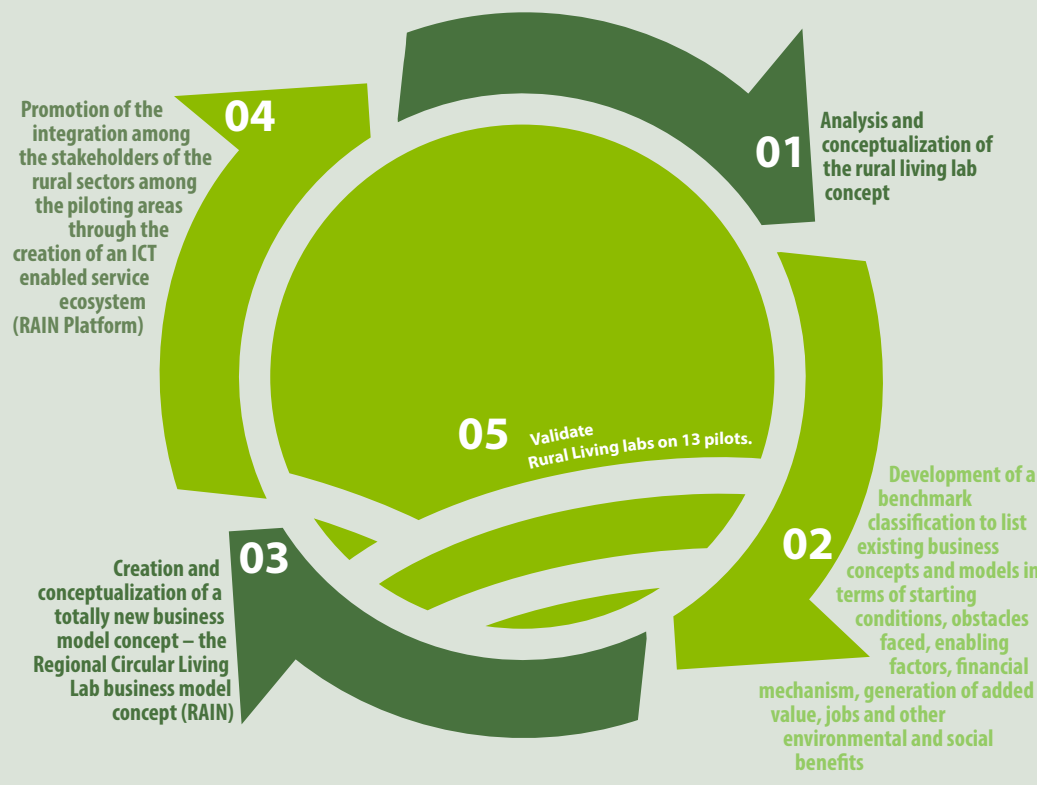

LIVERUR goal is introducing the Rural Living Lab research methodology in SMAEs framework, in order to identify and analyse various business model approaches, to that create added value, social cohesion, jobs, stakeholders' integration, actors inclusiveness, business resilience facing to the global markets and to the climate change impacts and is likely to be up-scaled and replicated.

Living labs are user-centred, open-innovation ICT enabled ecosystems often operating in a territorial context integrating concurrent research and innovation process within a quadruple X (Government, Industry/Agriculture, People, Academia) public-private-people partnership.
