Empower citizens in lifelong career guidance centres

Concept

Citizens are at the core of the services provided in Cités des Métiers, an integrated model of lifelong career guidance centres. Principles are based on: anonymous right; free of charge services to anyone; no appointment in career counselling; multi-services of information and counselling in career management, including events about professions. A CdM offers a neutral place of collaboration between stakeholders in the fields of education, training, employment, entrepreneurship, etc. Services provided contribute to the development of users' skills and capacities (including soft skills and digital skills), while making them more autonomous in the management of their career life.

The event, organised by Cités des métiers International Network, will highlight the contribution of lifelong career guidance centres in the up-skilling of citizens/public and professionals, identifying and analysing also other experiences in lifelong career guidance identified in Europe (i.e., one-stop-shop models: Public Employment Services Network has recently seen cross-sectoral partnerships in one-stop-shop as an opportunity to provide more innovation and quality of services to citizens).

During the event, RICdM will present ongoing EU projects, focused on the professionalisation of career counselling (COCADE), digital and inclusion facilitation (DIMESCA) and partnership management (KEEP IN PACT), that contribute to the strengthening of practitioners' skills involved in lifelong career guidance services, in order to better meet users' needs.
