Executive Summary

There is a user who was noticed on reddit.com/r/army, who goes by the online name of 'Nebor'. It was noted by several regular users that this individual, who self-identifies as an Active Duty (AGR) Infantry Officer in the United States Army, with the rank of Major, holds some extreme view-points, and routinely engages in racist rhetoric, and anti-government conversations. His comments have included hate speech usage towards multiple minority groups, holocaust denial, explaining how he would execute a US insurrection/insurgency campaign, and other extreme viewpoints that have led to concern that he may be a serious insider threat. In addition to being a potential violation of online conduct for the Army (ALARACT 061/2019 - PROFESSIONALIZATION OF ONLINE CONDUCT), the statements expressed, particularly violence towards superior Commissioned Officers, were found to be disturbing.

Through the utilization of open-source material, and PII gathered from his comments, an attempt was made to identify this individual. Several user profiles on different websites were discovered using the 'Nebor' username, that we believe link to the same person.

The following was discovered through open-source means and compiled to form a profile of the individual. It is believed that this individual has been identified as MAJ William Jeffrey Poole, USA, IN, currently stationed at FT Benning Georgia. The following slides will attempt to highlight the comments made that are believed to be dangerous and not in keeping with Army values, lay out the PII collected through these open source means, how they are interconnected, and how his identification was potentially made.

You cannot outgun the military with a bunch of militiamen with small arms fire, nades, and IEDs.

Of course not, that's why I'd take an infantry battalion loaded for bear with me. I'd just need to give one rousing speech, I figure.

Ensure my command group (CSM, XO, S3) and subordinate commanders were loyal, quietly. Gauge the loyalties of the BDE CDR (and his command group) & DIV CDR (and his command group), hope for them to side the same way as me. If not, frag them, knowing that if I go down in the process my XO will continue the fight.

With the unit? Move quickly, seize key terrain on the installation (ASP, AHA, DES, ECPs, arms rooms, hospital.) The trick would be moving faster than anyone else. Most organizations have no more than a hundred rounds of ammunition in their arms rooms for force protection. If you had combat loads of ammo and were moving before them you could deny them access to their own arms rooms. From there, depending on your location in the country, probably contact the national guard, as they'd be the largest command structures to reliably defect in the event of civil war.

That's all just off the top of my head spit-balling, as they say, it's all METT-TC dependent.

I don't foresee a civil war kicking off without another democratic vote for secession. Our nation is increasingly divided, and there are plenty of people who would rather just split the country along those lines so everyone can be happy. The real question is, does the left have the wherewithal or guts to actually kill secessionists that democratically decide they no longer want to be part of their nation? I doubt it.

You don't make demands. You take action. You're not thinking tactically or strategically. Thousands of troops and a base become part of a support network for either an army or an insurgency. Who's going to come face down a division worth of troops? Another division of guys wearing the same uniform? To kill them for what? Why? Are they going to nuke Fort Bragg? Fort Hood? The establishment can't use nukes per game theory outlined in the Turner Diaries.

Like I said, it's about seizing the initiative and violence of action early on. If it wasn't clear from my first response to you, I'd fully expect to die in the process.

Things are just now heating up. Give it time. Obviously I don't expect blue-helmets to do anything in the US, if anything I'd expect Russian support for a secession movement. But the UN charter says that all people are entitled to self-rule, and democracy.

You shoot the guys who fly the drones. The guys that fuel the drones. The guys that drive the food & fuel onto the base. You thermite the railways leading to the base (which bring fuel & munitions.) You shoot the guys that come to fix the rails (or just keep cheaply destroying the rails.) You contaminate the water. You cut off the power & sabotage their power generation. You find out all you can about who's running the air base, who works there, and where their families live. Ditto for whichever politicians are supporting them.

It's like you can only think half a step ahead. "DURRR THEY HAVE TANK I HAVE GUN I LOSE WHY TRY." You probably don't even know that molotov cocktails were initially weaponized to disable tanks. On modern tanks, you want to aim for the air intake as opposed to hatches/crew compartments.

They don't need to be organized. A 2 man team that spends a few days a week destroying railroad tracks in various places would send energy costs soaring. A 5 man team could keep Los Angeles without electricity indefinitely. Destroying a few interstate bridges would result in famine in some major cities. Our infrastructure is incredibly vulnerable, and our population is very well resourced, with vast amounts of knowledge & know-how available via the internet. You have to severely hurt the neutral, fence-sitter civilian population with hunger, thirst, cold, darkness, & violence in order to mobilize them. You need them out of their homes and angry. This will cause further harsh government response which will mobilize more fence-sitters.

You need to destroy the old country before a new one can rise from the ashes. You have to realize that our institutions aren't worth saving if they've led us to this point.

FWIW I spent most of my 20s in Afghanistan combating the insurgency there. I've also been a counter-insurgency instructor abroad and at training bases in the US. And I have a published piece in a military professional journal on how to effectively combat a domestic insurgency in an American city.

It sounds like, you are taking a problem that 1 Texas city has, and saying that is everywhere.

It is. Baltimore, San Francisco (BART & SFPD,) San Jose, Houston, Detroit, Portland, Albuquerque, Philadelphia, and more have huge officer shortages. The cause is the same in all: poor support from the cities, to include low pay, robbing pensions, increased civilian oversight, protests, malicious prosecution by elected district attorneys, etc.

I know several Dallas cops that left the department to go to suburban departments. Less danger, less micromanagement, less oversight and better pay & equipment.

FWIW I don't give a shit about any of these cities. They're nests of vipers & leaches, and most of the country would be better off if they were smoldering nuclear craters in the ground. All I was pointing out was that if you continue to treat cops more poorly than right wing cities/police departments do, you'll continue to lose cops. And then you'll replace them with the kind of cops you have in New Orleans. Which is hilarious to me. Enjoy third world policing.

Nuclear war wiping out the major cities would be a healthy reset for our nation. As long as Tel Aviv got a taste too.

And this bias will continue to push people into right wing discussion spaces, as they're the only ones that still allow free and open discussion on all topics. And that, in turn, will push more people to the extreme political right.

It happened to me. 3 years ago, I was a pretty moderate guy, on the fence between Sanders & Trump as I saw them both as status quo breakers. Then they sold our /r/politics<sup>[1]</sup> and /r/worldnews<sup>[2]</sup> to agenda driven interests, and it was obvious. Then they banned /r/fatpeoplehate<sup>[3]</sup>, and then /r/cringeandnarchy<sup>[4]</sup>. Again and again, they silenced people and banned places that allowed people to say whatever they wanted. They wiped out all the right wing political facebook pages in Italy weeks before an election. So I kept seeking out places where people were free to say whatever they wanted, and reading the ideas, and statistics and memes I found along the way. Now I'm so far right I don't believe in democracy anymore (democracy is mob rule, and the mob is easily controlled by the media, so democracy is media rule, aka the 'elite'), and I think violence is the only way to break the stranglehold that these cultural marxists have on our society.

The people who argue about the supreme might and invincibility of the US military (while lamenting it's use overseas) have no tactical or strategic knowledge or experience. They've never been in a gunfight and they've never looked into how complex & delicate the logistical infrastructure that provides our nation's (military & civilian) food, water, electricity, & fuel is.

Would some of the military side with the government? Sure.

Would some refuse to and be imprisoned? Yup.

Would some slink away and join the resistance? Uhuh.

Would some entire units defect under charismatic commanders? Yes.

Would some remain in the ranks and work to subvert and sabotage the loyalists? Absolutely.

If I were of the revolutionary spirit as a US Army Major, would I best serve the cause by running away and training recruits to fight? Or by biding my time and allahu ackbarring a conference room full of loyalist general officers?

I'm stockpiling weapons because I enjoy shooting them. On the big day, I won't need more than a suppressed H&K MR556, a glock 19, my body armor, helmet, night vision, a combat load of ammunition and a few incendiary grenades. I doubt I'll live long enough to exhaust even that. It only takes one bullet at the right time & place to take you down.

Wiping Israel off the map today wouldn't end the problem. They've infiltrated all of our institutions (government, academia, entertainment.) True reactionaries are what we need. That's what I've become. I bought into the Will & Grace propaganda of the 1990s, telling us that gay people were just like everyone else. The church ladies told us they would diddle your kids if you let them into the mainstream. And now that's exactly what's happening as pedophilia apologia spreads across the LGBT community.

If an Asian kid grows up in a middle American household, they will have middle American culture.

She grew up in a middle American household, and has spent her entire adult life trying to destroy white people.

Making individual judgments based on the aggregate rather than the specific situation is literally retarded.

I disagree. I think we should all have our separate lands, like things were 100 years ago and for all of recorded history before that. Heterogeneity in a society is bad for every metric of that society. No one can explain to you how "diversity is our strength" and the same people selling that argument are also trying to tell you that "race doesn't matter."

A common theme from this individual is 'white separatism', and the creation of a new white state here in the US.

“ If people thought the way you did, the industrial revolution wouldn't have happened

"The Industrial Revolution and its consequences have been a disaster for the human race. Imagine a society that subjects people to conditions that make them terribly unhappy, then gives them the drugs to take away their unhappiness." -Uncle Ted ‘Uncle Ted’ referenced here, is Ted Kaczynski, the Unabomber. This is a quote from his manifesto. It is a far-right ‘joke’ to fondly refer to him as ‘Uncle Ted’.

A screenshot of a Reddit comment. The user is Nebor, with 7 points and a comment from 1 month ago. The comment text is highlighted in yellow and reads: "I don't have time for MMOs, but Insurgency Sandstorm is a great multiplayer FPS with vs and good coop (plus a great new zombie mode called Frenzy.) You'll find plenty of people with usernames themed off of Saint Tarrant's manifesto, some Uncle Ted references, and your usual 'HANS GET ZE FLAMMENWERFER' type stuff. Also the teams you play as are either jihadi insurgents or Israeli soldiers so you're always shooting bad guys no matter who you're playing as." A screenshot of a Reddit comment exchange. The top comment is by user Nebor (5 points) asking "Why move when they can Balkanize?". A reply by user Elleden (4 points) says "Ayyy, we got a term named after us! I'm honoured." A second reply by Nebor (0 points) is highlighted in yellow and says "Some of us are also great admirers of your kabob removal techniques!".

In this exchange ‘kabob removal techniques’ is an anti-muslim/anti-Arab phrase talking about the killing of Muslims.

‘Remove Kabob’ is a known anti-Muslim slogan and was referenced by the Christchurch shooter.

The screenshot shows three comments from a user named 'Nebor' (profile picture: a flag with stars and stripes). The first comment, posted 15 days ago and receiving -1 point, says: "I laugh when people go nuts over my post history, because 90% of it is in private/quarantined subs so they can't even see most of it." The second comment, also 15 days ago and receiving 11 points, says: "That's all they need to know, lmao". The third comment, also 15 days ago and receiving 2 points, says: "But... they don't know. Each comment includes standard Reddit interaction options like 'permalink', 'source', 'embed', 'save', 'parent', 'give award', 'reply', and 'hide child comments'.

Many of the reddit comments shown and linked here do lead to 'Quarantined' subs, which you have to opt-in to, but they are not private. He indicates in these comments that he has 'worse' commentary made in subreddits not readily accessible by the average user.

The substance of the publicly visible comments alone was enough to raise serious concerns about this individual, and an attempt was made to identify the person behind the 'Nebor' username.

I had a go with UT over having a handgun in an on-campus apartment. A maintenance guy with the apartment contractor saw a holster sitting on my nightstand and reported it. The Dean of Student affairs called me into a meeting with him and the UT police. Texas Penal Code is pretty clear that it can't be illegal to have a firearm in a place you live:

For purposes of this section, "premises" includes real property and a recreational vehicle that is being used as living quarters, regardless of whether that use is temporary or permanent.

I explained this to the police, and they agreed and left. The dean still said I had violated school policy, and that I would be subject to admonishment. I asked what that meant, and he said that was it, he had just verbally admonished me.

This was back before your concealed carry license allowed you to carry in university buildings in Texas (though you could still carry on the school grounds outside of buildings at the time.)

I guess I always assumed that any restrictions via a lease would be invalid per the Texas constitution, but I was dealing with a state entity, not a private property owner.

My parents live in Tarrant County. The shift leftward is 100% a result of changing demographics. In 2000 it had 1.4 million people and was 71% white. The county has 2 million people and is 46% white (not hispanic or latino) today. As we saw happen in Dallas county, those with the means to move fled the urban areas and moved their suburbs further and further away.

It's sad that you look down your nose at the people around here, as they're generally good people. If you're not from here, then you should leave, to a place to like better. If you are, then you should ask yourself how you've been so thoroughly convinced to hate your people & your roots.

I live about an hour from Montgomery, AL. It's a failed city. The state tried to cover up their abysmal high school graduation rates by changing the standards. The feds called them out on the fraud. The average graduate from Montgomery ISD can't get into any public Alabama university, which isn't a high bar.

If you follow any of the local news (local social media is even better) there are regular mass shootings and gang wars between the projects. It's a disaster.

I live in that city. The black clubs have security with metal detectors but one still gets shot up every month. I have to carry spare magazines for my pistol to the Publix because there's a robbery or shooting in the parking lot every couple weeks. I frequently come out to my car with my groceries to find the guys in the picture admiring it (looking in the windows.)

BUT a few times a week at 2am I'm treated to the music of their people, blasting at 2000 watts from a clapped out Crown Victoria or Escalade slowly rolling down the street, so it's nice that I get to enjoy their culture.

The people who argue about the supreme might and invincibility of the US military (while lamenting it's use overseas) have no tactical or strategic knowledge or experience. They've never been in a gunfight and they've never looked into how complex & delicate the logistical infrastructure that provides our nation's (military & civilian) food, water, electricity, & fuel is.

Would some of the military side with the government? Sure.

Would some refuse to and be imprisoned? Yup.

Would some slink away and join the resistance? Uhuh.

Would some entire units defect under charismatic commanders? Yes.

Would some remain in the ranks and work to subvert and sabotage the loyalists? Absolutely.

If I were of the revolutionary spirit as a US Army Major, would I best serve the cause by running away and training recruits to fight? Or by biding my time and allahu ackbarring a conference room full of loyalist general officers?

I am, in fact, a smart person. In the top 5% of intelligence in my cohort my entire life, growing up in a very affluent area. First person in my commissioning class to pin on Major, sent to Kellogg by the Army for my MBA, and spend a huge amount of my time reading & researching. A perk afforded to me by the competitive nominative assignment I won.

Rhetoric matters. It convinces the easily convinced, of which there are many, even here, where I'd say the average intelligence is way above the (US) average. So alliteration, simple metaphors and clever sounding phrasing goes a long way.

We, as a species, have not escaped the natural order of the world in the last two generations. We are still subject to natural selection and evolutionary pressures. Singing kumbaya and welcoming the world to what your ancestors worked to give you will end in your demise because the world isn't as progressive as you are. That is to say, fascism isn't lunacy, it's the only way out of the mess we've made in the West.

If I were king for a day, I wouldn't be a second amendment absolutist either. I'd be trying to disarm those subversive elements of society that might disrupt my plans. Which is exactly what's happening now.

↓ "Living like a slave" means soon all of your firearms are "illegal firearms." And then most of your speech is "illegal hate speech." And then 80% of your salary is "unnecessary largess." And then your kids are "being taught hate and need to be removed from the home."

The reason the 2nd amendment is #2 in line after free speech is that, at it's most basic level, no one can force you to do anything you don't want to do as long as you're armed. They can kill you if they want to, but they can't force you to do anything you don't want to, they can't imprison you, they can't take your kids and they can't torture you.

Now if you think death is the worst possible thing that could happen to you, then that won't make sense to you. But I know for a fact that it's not, so I'd happily be riddled with bullets as opposed to hand in my guns.

Lest we forget that 10 years ago the Army was paying bonuses & giving away duty stations & grad school to get Captains to stay.

My year group (YG09) got savaged by the OSB. But of my friends that I keep up with, I'd say about 85% of them are still in the Army (which is incredible for OCS.) I'd posit that the reason is that we mostly got what we signed up for: war. Most of us finished IET and were in Iraq or Afghanistan within a few months, and then just kept going back until the optempo finally dropped off in 2014. Conversely, I've met a ton of junior officers from later year groups that never got to deploy, generally just hate the Army and get out as soon as they can.

Also the job market is fantastic for junior officers exiting the service right now.

Fort Polk was also my first duty station. /u/timster323  has good advice. On post housing isn't worth your money. Get a nice house off post and split it with at least one other officer. The best way to find housing is mysteriously through ahrn.com. I'd never heard of it either, but trust me. I split a 3,500 square foot, 2 year old, beautiful house just out the North Fort Gate with a Major. Rent was $1500 a month and he paid $1000 of it to get the master suite.

My entire time (nearly 5 years) at Fort Polk I almost never had more than $1000 a month in expenses. A little more than half that time was deployed. I left there with hundreds of thousands of dollars in liquid assets. I also saw guys try to buy their way out of the Fort Polk blues by spending thousands a month on new TVs, guns, trucks, etc.

I'm going to level with you: This isn't going to be a great time. But if you play your cards right, you'll never have to come back. Go to all the schools you can. Make it well known to your command that you want to deploy no matter what. Make sure your branch manager knows you want to deploy. You're kind of screwed since 3/10 is currently deployed (I sat next to their inbound BDE CDR a couple weeks ago at a conference at Fort Bragg.) Everyone will have a patch but you. But the installation gets WIAS taskers (requests for individuals to deploy) every week. Once you knock out your KD time in 3/10 (PL, XO) don't dick around on staff. Ask to go to Ops Group and be an OC/T. Yeah, it'll suck too, you'll spend a ton of time out in the box but it's a great OER and it might save you from an assignment at Fort Irwin, Fort Polk or Hohenfels down the road.

Socially... it's not gonna be good. The local girls are fat and dumb for the most part. We called them swamp donkeys. The general rule in Leesville is that if you see someone hot, that's because someone imported her from the outside world. There are no hot single girls in Leesville. The best bet for attractive single women are new female officers PCSing in (I bet I'll never say that again...) Get in good with the nurses at BJACH. Don't fuck all of them. You need one to be your wingwoman to introduce you to the other nurses and bring the gaggle of nurses to your parties. Avoid Paradise & Zydeco. They're full of drunk joes and you'll just wind up in trouble. Beware Joe-sephinas trying to bag a male officer, particularly on Tinder. Seriously. I saw multiple LTs go down for it while I was there. One LT was even sleeping with his soldiers wives. The isolation at Polk causes people to do desperate things, and as an officer you'll be more isolated than most. Tinder tips: Look for profiles with colleges listed, West Point being an obvious super-like, look for nursing schools, medical schools, law schools. That'll help steer you clear of female soldiers.

I had an extremely tight knit group of friends. I was fortunate enough to be in a BN where literally every single company grade officer was single, so we'd all hit the VFW together Friday night (the VFW is the nicest bar in town, and the apple pie moonshine is legit) and then bring it back to one of the bigger houses for a house party. Then we'd caravan to Alexandria on Saturdays to see a movie and eat at a decent restaurant (like Outback or Copeland's.)

I'm trying to think of what else I'm missing.... Get a dog. It'll keep you company. Also I dated two of the veterinarians assigned there because of said dog. Oh, and the chick at the front desk of the vet clinic might be dirty hot with her tats and flicking her tongue stud at you, but one of my joes caught something he couldn't get rid of from her.

There are hot college chicks in Lake Charles at McNeese University. If you play your cards right you can have a place to crash on the weekends and a way hotter girl than you'll find in Leesville just an hour and fifteen minutes away. Check out Luna Bar and Grill on Ryan St, I went out with a couple of the waitresses from there and they're usually all 8+.

I'll stand by for your questions.

As a CPT OC/T waiting to PCS out of Fort Polk (after years there,) I frequently found myself driving way out to the east side of the box (good ol' Daralam) by myself at dawn. That's a good 40 minute drive when the RTU is in the box due to the 20mph speed limit.

My favorite form of entertainment was to fly down this hill and see how hard I could hit this low water crossing. Water would go shooting 40 feet up in the air. Eventually I got so reckless that I could literally float my HMMWV across without it touching the bottom.

When they opened the highway, they let a lingenfelter Corvette do a 200+ mph run with a state trooper escort in order to demonstrate the quality of the roadway.

The road is usually empty, being both the highest posted speed limit in the United States and the least trafficked highway of it's size in the US. It's basically used by rural people to get to the Walmart 20 miles south really fast.

I was in my Porsche Macan Turbo, the road was empty, I've driven it plenty of times, and it was perfectly safe. The only car I'd passed in 20 minutes was the police SUV.

Can't wait to get my new Jeep Trackhawk out to Texas and run it up to the limit.

Born well off and became an Army officer. Continually plow dividends & deployment money back into investments. Cofounded a real estate business with a stoner from my fraternity that speculates on suitable grow spaces in states on the cusp of legalizing marijuana. Having college paid for, and free new cars until you're 26 years old gives you a huge leg up on its own. In a typical month I live on half of my net salary, and earn roughly double my Army salary in passive income. I hope to retire from the Army in 10-15 years (depending on if I make O6) with full medical coverage & a passive income in excess of $500k/year after taxes, and then go into business full time for myself. Hopefully I still remember the stuff from my MBA by then. Haha.

On reddit, references having a vasectomy, being an Army Officer, and having an MBA.

[–] Nebor 2 points 4 months ago

I've traveled to over a hundred countries. I have a dual major bachelors degree in economics & finance from UT, and an MBA from Kellogg. I own a couple of business, a couple of homes, and read a new (non-fiction) book every week. I've spent years of my life in combat, fighting people who were trying to kill me for invading their land.

The fact that I don't conform to your group think doesn't make me a neanderthal. I just have a personally informed view of the world that's different than yours, having seen true desperation & hardship, and don't want to see it brought to my nation, my country.

If I'm a neanderthal because I'm willing to actually, physically fight for what I believe in, then I'm fine with that. It's how our nation was forged, and how it'll be saved and endure.

The entire 'social' side of Steam is a mystery to me. I have nearly 1,000 games, and I've had my account since HL2 released, but I think I'm steam level 9, I don't know what all the cards are for, and I've never noticed any achievements.

[-] Nebor 2 points 1 day ago

But if I decide I want privacy

I don't understand the purpose of Steam profile 'privacy.' What are you hiding? From who? What are you worried about?

[-] Nebor 2 points 1 day ago
If you're not cheating, then don't have a private Steam profile. If I can look at your profile and see you have 400 hours, then everything's on the level.

So basically, if you can do private Investigations on my profile, then I'm not a cheater. But if I decide I want privacy, and you can't snoop, that means you should assume I cheat? Maybe JUST ASK what hours I got. I shouldn't need to have an open profile to prove to people I've never met and I've never talked to, people who even REFUSE to just ask a simple question, that I'm no cheater.
I've played since launch in EU Checkpoint. I know a lot of the regulars that have been around for awhile. They could vouch for it, that I don't cheat. Or you can assume, and spread misinformation because you're misinformed and make peoples experience with the game worse. You can't have been playing this game for especially long, or have many hours, with the mentality you possess currently.
In due time you'll see, whether peoples profile are private or not. Hopefully you won't be the cause of team killing or vote kicking on unfair assumptions though.

There is a 'Nebor' who has a Steam Profile that lists a name, Jeff Poole, and location, Louisiana.

The 'Nebor' on reddit has multiple comments referencing his use of Steam. He has comments showing he doesn't understand the need for 'privacy' on Steam, which is most likely why this PII is visible. He belongs to three groups, which are 'EVGA Gaming', and 'AnandTech Group', another website for which a 'Nebor' user account was found, and a 'Misc' group that belongs to users from bodybuilding.com, where a 'Nebor' account was also located.

Giveaway 2x EVGA GTX 1080 FTW, EVGA X99 FTW K + i7 5820k + 16GB Corsair DDR4 2133MHz C13, EVGA X

submitted 2 years ago * (last edited 2 years ago) by Nebor PC Master Race

I'm giving away some parts I don't need to some needy brothers of the PCMR. Hopefully I can figure out how to flair this post as a giveaway.

My Rules:

Each video card is a separate item

The X99 FTW K, i7 and memory are all one item however the socket has 2 bent pins. These should be easily fixed with a credit card, some tweezers and some time. As a result, I'll include the fully functioning X99 Micro 2 in case you can't fix the bigger board.

Each user can ask for one item out of the three.

On 14 July, Friday morning I'll select who I consider to be the most deserving of the items (proof of your need will weigh heavily) and edit this post with the results, tagging the winning users. Those users will then send me their shipping information and I'll ship the items Friday afternoon.

Items: <http://imgur.com/a/iYkr3>

Sorry I had to take a second picture for proof, I hadn't thoroughly read the giveaway rules. As you can see, everything except the x99 micro2 comes in it's original packaging with original accessories (backplates, daughterboards, etc.)

Edit: Please do not PM me with your entries. I can't read/consider those. Post them here so they can be voted on and my friends and I can consolidate the links to the best entries for final consideration.

Good morning everyone! Winners are: GTX 1080 FTW: </u/TaylorBalbi> GTX 1080 FTW: </u/Ginn4364> X99 Bundle: </u/jovenjams>

If you guessed that the common theme among the winners is that they all were looking to help someone else, you're right. Winners, please PM me with your shipping info and I'll do my best to get your items shipped ASAP.

Update: All items have been mailed via USPS and will arrive on Monday. Shipping was less than $150 total.

There is a 'Nebor' account on bodybuilding.com that expresses similar extreme views on race, religion, and anti-Semitism. This post is from 2016 and lists his location as Hawaii, and age as 34. The Location is manually entered, while the age is based on birthdate.

In a particularly notable exchange, when asked what his 'rank is', he responds;

“Durka durka durka jihad durka?”

I'm a captain, about to be a major next year (this post was 2016). And I work for US Army Pacific Command.”

These statements coincide with other identifying statements he has made on reddit.

I'm from Dallas, grew up in University Park. Austin is the best city in Texas. Good food, unlimited HBBs due to UT, craft beers, etc. Dallas is a close second for a lot of the same reason, only it's much, much bigger. Third is probably Houston, though the humidity and lack of separation in their neighborhoods (collapsing shack next to 6 million dollar mansion with Lambos in the driveway) have always turned me off. I lived in San Antonio 2014-2015 and it's getting a lot better due to people from Austin coming down i35 and opening cool restaurants and bars. But keep in mind that San Antonio is the poorest city of it's size in the country. While it's the 7th largest city in the country, it has the same amount of $100k+ earners as the 20th largest city.

The latest Tweets from Jeff Poole (@CPT_Aloha). Staff officer, news junkie, taco bell aficionado & runner. Honolulu, HI.

The discrepancy is because google caches the twitter information from when it was created. So the original account name was 'Jeff Poole', and the description was 'Staff officer, news junkie, taco bell aficionado & runner. Honolulu, HI.'. At some point, he changed the username and profile description, and his name no longer appears anywhere on this twitter account. However, it is still cached through google, and still identifies him with this twitter account. Additionally, the pictures featured seem to match with the Facebook account found for Jeff Poole.

When I was in high school I worked as a host at a California Pizza Kitchen. I worked there for a couple years and was the trainer or whatever and I think I made around $12\hr. A new General Manager shows up from somewhere else in the country and starts flirting with me. Those who've worked in the restaurant business knows that everyone flirts with everyone all the time, and the social cliques are like high school. I didn't think anything of it until she slid her hand onto my thigh and kissed me in her office one day while I was picking up my tip-out.

Had sex in her office a lot (which I always thought was gross because the assistant managers used the same office, and I assumed they were doing the same thing with other people,) and then her apartment. She would put me on the clock when I was at her apartment. After a couple months it turned into her just keeping me on the clock basically all the time. I was getting paid for 60 hours a week and working maybe 25.

She was a 7/10 mousey, fit chick with some serious suppressed kink. She was 35 and I was 17 when it started. It went on for quite a while, I made thousands of dollars, and eventually I went off to college. In retrospect, having dated some people in the restaurant business, I'm shocked that she would wreck her labor costs like that for so long. I wonder how she explained it to the regional manager.

Anyone that would relax near these blacks is almost certainly cucked to the max. He'll spend the rest of his life explaining why their race had nothing to do with him being crippled.

Why would you stick around? Most murders go unsolved. Those where the victim & killer don't know each other are almost never solved. Just leave them laying in the street.

It's all on camera, and it's in the middle of downtown...

So? You'd still never get caught. Most murders aren't solved. Those where the parties don't know each other are virtually never solved.

I live downtown in a 50% black city. There's no staying away from them. When a pack approaches, you just draw your pistol and they turn around and go the other direction. They'll never call the cops because they're afraid of the cops.

I'm familiar with anarcho-tyranny. They'd still never catch you. Don't handle your carry ammo with bare hands. Don't hang around the area afterwards. Ditch your barrel as soon as you're clear of the area.

These Minneapolis videos don't look like revolver situations. None of my carry ammo has ever been touched by a bare hand. And I have plenty of new Glock 19 barrels at home in case one needs to go in the river.

It's amazing how much you can improve the relationship between the police and the black community when the police stop enforcing the law.

Nah, I don't have any PTSD. I was in two of the largest mass casualty events in OEF history, but they don't really haunt me.

And my kids will be extremely well informed racists like their father, thank you.

Refers to being at two of the largest mass casualty incidents in OEF history.

It is believed this refers to:

- May 2010 Kabul Bombing incident
- 2012 incident (CPT Groberg's MOH Action)

This: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/May\_2010\_Kabul\_bombing

After pulling a dead National Guardsman from his overturned truck, I looked at the bus (which was a school bus) and saw blood pouring down the stairs to the ground. Then the medics started taking halves of kids off the bus. That's when I realized that the kind of enemy we're facing in radical Islam isn't like anything we've ever faced before, and that there would never be a compromise or a peace with them. One of us will always be working towards the destruction of the other until only one of us remains.

Then I had the good luck to be around for this one: <http://www.armytimes.com/story/milit...abad/73656708/>
Where Groberg saved our asses. That just solidified my belief. The official citation & report don't mention the fact that the suicide bombers emerged from a mosque to hit our patrol. That wouldn't be politically correct, after all.

It was always kinda crazy to me that after The Battle of Shok Valley,<sup>[1]</sup> The Battle of Wanat,<sup>[2]</sup> and The Battle of Kamdesh,<sup>[3]</sup> that we were like, "you know what, fuck Nuristan," and left.

There hasn't been a permanent US presence in Nuristan since 2009. We would get sporadic contact with the Afghan Security Forces up there when I was in Kunar, but they were on their own in Indian country. We wouldn't even send Apaches up there to help them for fear they'd be shot down with no means of rescue. In 2012 we flew in to the former Keating site with about 80 Americans from 4-4 IBCT and 40 ANA soldiers under cover of darkness as a "show of force." Until the intel came pouring in that we were going to get our shit pushed in from every direction and we bailed after less than 12 hours on the ground. Edit: Neat, I found a story about that mission.<sup>[4]</sup>

I was there (I'm currently in a 5-way group text with some others from the tour, in shock that Groberg is getting the MoH.) The narrative isn't exactly how I would tell it. There were two suicide bombers. They pushed the first guy in such a way that the blast was channeled away from most of the patrol (which was canalized on a city street) and it neutralized the second bomber. No doubt without Groberg's actions more soldiers would have died that day. Even after he flew across the road, he got back up with no skin on his arms and started trying to help people.

It was a shitty day. The look on COL Mingus' face when we told him his CSM didn't make it will stick with me forever. The fact that the god damn Air Force Liason officer (a pilot) decided to pick that day to leave JAAF and go on a patrol (obviously one of the very few in his career) bothers me. The worry that COL Walrath would lose his leg hung over us for weeks to come. A cook along for the ride as an "extra body" concealed his own injuries so he could help the wounded, at one point carrying a stretcher half a mile while he had a ball bearing sized hole through his calf.

It's weird to read a sanitized Army narrative of it all. It's also worth adding that no one liked Groberg. He was kind of a dick to be honest. A bristly personality that was hard to get along with and he acted like he wore the BDE CDR's rank. But I've got no problem calling him a hero.

I flew up there in 2012 with 4/4. Approximately 40 of us stayed overnight as a 'show of force.' Keep in mind that the entire province of Nuristan had been wholly abandoned for years at that point. Even the coalition ANP/ANA advisers lived in Laghman. They'd get constant reports of ANSF getting wrecked by the Taliban, and requests for support, but we wouldn't even send aircraft up there to support them or medevac their wounded. We stayed the night, around 8 hours before we got pulled out due to intel that the locals were going to swarm us.

Also, I worked with a 1SG that was the platoon sergeant during the battle, 1SG Hill. He was awarded the silver star for his actions there.

I'm looking forward to these films.

Conclusion

- While it is entirely possible that this is a 'con', and someone trying to assume an identity, that seems highly unlikely. They would need intimate details of MAJ Poole's life, and would have had to keep this online persona going for 15+ years (anandtech.com site, 2003 creation date for user profile), including stealing personal photos.
- The basic AKO profile for William J Poole will show immediate links to several pieces of information listed in this slide show, as well as his DA photo is obviously the same person as the twitter/Facebook photos.
- The large majority of the comments on his twitter and reddit featured in this presentation are only from the last 90 days. I have no doubt that the more the comment histories are explored, an increase in derogatory information will be found.
