Interior Design Ideas for Beachfront Condos

Condo is considered as the perfect living place for young and old people alike. It is a place where one can have a great time in a beautiful and exotic location. Before you decide to move in a beachfront condo, make sure you incorporate great interior design ideas so that you feel like you are at home.

From lighting, color scheme, to storage space, a condo's interior design is very much similar to designing a bigger space, such as your house. In both the cases, you'll want to look for that right choice of color palette that suits the entire theme, combination of lighting, and finding that perfect blend of ingenuity and practicality.

Below are few interior design ideas for your condo unit.

Play Around with Lighting and Color

Color can make or break a room. By adding color and some contrasting shades, you can change the overall look and feel of your beachfront condo. The best thing about condominiums is that the natural light can add a lot of brightness to your room. If your condo has high windows, accentuate the height by incorporation half-shades or translucent curtains to give an illusion of a room with bigger space.

Artificial lighting is another important element of your interior design. The light can also be used in such a way that it complements your color scheme. You can even add hanging mirrors in your living room to make the space appear bigger and reflect light. A mirror can also be placed over a fireplace.

Colors can add life into a room. You can paint one wall in a room of your condo a darker shade of red and keep others lighter. Or, you can go for cool, easy-on-eyes colors that provide an overall soothing sense to your beachfront condo.

Maximize the Floor Design

The floor plan plays an integral role in your condo's interior design. Since you'll be having a limited space, you will have to maximize your floor plan, and add creativity with functionality. For instance, in your condo's kitchen you might want to keep appliances that can be stacked so you have enough counter space, cooking space, and dining space.

Wall space is premium in a condo. You can utilize walls for placing paintings, flat screen TVs and shelving, while utilizing the center of your condo for sitting purposes. It is your floor plan which will help you determine the lighting and color schemes.

Keep Storage Space in Mind

Storage space is crucial in a beachfront condo and your interior design ideas should reflect the same. Incorporating furniture with dual usage is a fantastic way to add storage into your interior design. Stools with hinged tops and hollow interiors can be used for storing books, and magazines. Shelving is a design element that can be used as a place to store belongings. If you are still falling short on space, you may want to section off a wall with a floor-length curtain and hide any clutter behind it.
