The best way to make every bit of energy you use in the gym useful, is to use efficient exercises. An example of an in-efficient exercise? Hanging Leg Raises (actually, any kind of leg raise exercise, intended for abdominal development). Since the abs do not connect directly to the legs, other non-ab muscles are doing the majority of the work. Why bother doing an exercise in which 80% of the work is being done by “non-target” muscles, while your target muscle (the abs) are only getting 20% of the work. That’s like paying $100 for something that only gives you back a $20 value.
