

Reclaim Your Life With The Help Of Transvaginal Mesh Lawyers

Women often feel pelvic organ prolapse or stress urinary inconsistency after hysterectomy, child birth or menopause. And for treating these problems doctors often suggest transvaginal mesh surgery or bladder sling surgery. But in many cases, it has been found that instead of getting relief, patients undergo serious health complications.

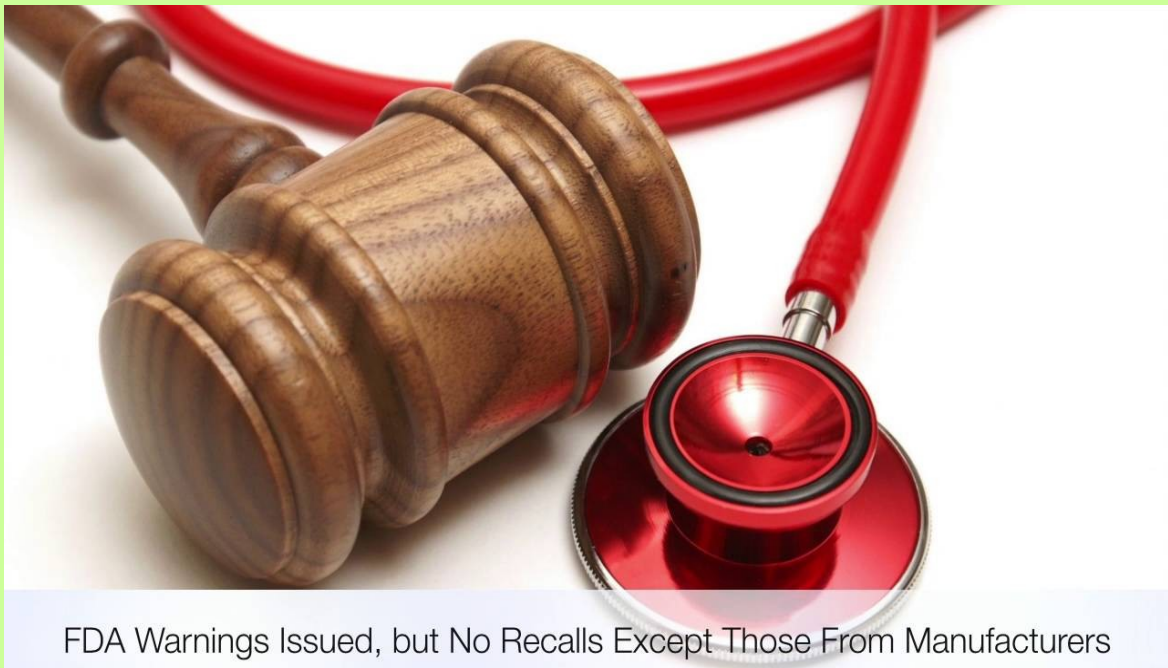

When Boston Scientific and Johnson and Johnson received the approval of FDA, they started marketing their product and selling them. Mesh slings are pre shaped pieces that are implanted to create a structural support for the weak pelvic tissues and organs. The device is also used to treat urinary inconsistency.

Even though human testing was not conducted, many manufacturers began to sell the mesh devices. Some of the complications undergone by women after a mesh implant include:

- Erosion of the vaginal mesh
- Discomfort
- Painful sex

Did you too suffer the side effects of mesh implantation? Then you qualify to claim financial compensation. Contact the transvaginal mesh lawyers of mesh lawsuit help center and we will give you free legal consultation which will be completely confidential.
