SALES PRICES ARE NOT KEEPING PACE WITH ASKING PRICES AS IN 1985

Many Charlestown (and other Boston area) homeowners are finding out the hard way that the price increases of 1985 simply haven't followed through into 1986. Many property owners have been asking much high prices, but actual sales prices have not gone up nearly as much. Result: many overpriced properties sitting on the market.

Park Service To Revise Charlestown Navy Yard Plan

The Boston National Historical Park is revising its General Management Plan (GMP) for the Charlestown Navy Yard unit of the Park. The GMP is a guide to the long-range management, preservation, and development of the lands and structures which comprise the National Park Service portion of the Navy Yard.

The proposed revised plan offers no totally new concepts for the Navy Yard, but modifies certain aspects of the plan and relocates some functions to other areas or structures within the Yard. Among the changes are: moving food service from Building 5, the former Officer's Club, into Building 10, and adding an outdoor warm weather seating area; addition of shade, drinking water, and seating to the area where visitors wait to board the USS CONSTITUTION; and a shift in emphasis at the Commandant's House to make the facility more available to the public and serve a greater variety of program uses.

Other proposed changes include adaptive reuse of portions of the Ropewalk and Chain Forge, with private developers funding the restoration and exhibit

TALK TO YOUR REALTOR

Almost every week, one of my agents will tell an anguished tale of working for months with buyers who say they really want a specific kind of home, say a center hall colonial. Then they buy a sleek contemporary!

Maybe what was most important was a high-tech kitchen or wooded lot, and these could have counted for more than the style of the house itself. To save you time and to spare you from being shown dozens of homes that are completely inappropriate to your needs, talk to your Realtor! Tell him what you need, not just in terms of style or number of bedrooms. What kind of furniture do you have? Do you have any hobbies that must be accommodated? Are you handy enough to take on major fix-up projects, or do you want a home in move-in condition? What do you like or dislike about your current house?

Don't be the strong, silent type with your Realtor. Provide constant feedback — negative and positive — so he can more easily rule out the homes that just won't work and find just the right new home for you and your family.

If you're considering a move in the near future, call the professionals at Century 21, Silva Realty Associates. Our number is 242-7470 or just drop by our offices at 142 Main Street. We can serve all of your real estate needs.

Mr. Van Osdol worked for many years in the Charlestown Navy Yard, until his retirement. He was a member of the Sheet Metal Union Local 17.

The prayers and sympathy of the Charlestown Post are extended to his devoted family.

Plans are being made to establish a youth scholarship or memorial award in "Gil's" name.

Public Information Meeting On Edison Hazardous Waste Application

The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) is currently reviewing an application for a new license to treat, store, or dispose of hazardous wastes from the Boston Edison Mystic Station facility. This firm has operated a hazardous waste management facility under the terms of an interim status permit from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Department expected to have a complete application during May; however, due to a work stoppage at the Edison facility, the company has been granted an extension to respond to deficiencies in the application. When the application is complete, the Department will begin a second review to determine whether or not the facility meets the technical and procedural requirements of the Massachusetts Hazardous Waste Management Regulations, 310 CMR 30.000.

In order to ensure that community officials, neighborhood and other interest groups, abutters, and the public understand the process by which DEQE hazardous waste management facilities are licensed in Massachusetts, the staff will hold a public information meeting at which they will outline the licensing process as well as the substantive issues that they consider in deciding whether or not to issue a license to this facility. This meeting has been scheduled for Tuesday, June 10th at 7:00 p.m. at the Centre School on Broadway in Everett.

For further information on the meeting, contact Jude Hutchinson at 292-5584.

A Prayer To THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, you who made me see everything and showed me the way to reach my ideal. You who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material loss may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Persons must pray the prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish. After 3rd day wish may be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this dialogue as soon as this favor is granted. H.C.

Peggy Ann Brennan Selected 1986 Charlestown Rose

ing was the selection of one of the Roses to represent Charlestown at the International Western Rose Festival to be held in Charlestown, County Mayo, Ireland on August 8, 1986.

Peggy Ann Brennan was chosen as the 1986-1987 Charlestown Irish Rose. The runner-up was Kathleen Sullivan.

This year being the 100th Anniversary of the Statue of Liberty, often referred to as the "Lady", would be an appropriate time to pause and reflect on our Irish heritage. Millions of Irish immigrants had their dreams rekindled at their first view of the "Lady". I wonder if on their dream list was the hope to some day have a confident, educated Irish PROUD FAMILY members congratulate Peggy Ann Brennan on her selection as 1986 Charlestown Rose. She will represent Charlestown in the Western Irish Rose Festival in County Mayo, Ireland in August. Rose in the family, who was willing to visit Ireland to perpetuate her Irish heritage. Nine dreams came true last Friday evening.

Four years ago while writing about the Rose Festival, I unthinkingly gave the committee and everyone else who helped put this most memorable event together, some credit for the young ladies being Roses. One does not become a young lady, a Rose or anything else in any one day.

When all the Roses were assembled on the stage last Friday evening, they represented a combined total of over 186 years of patience, firmness, talking, listening and the many other things necessary to make a dream come true.

The committee wishes to extend their sincere congratulations to the "Roses" behind the "Roses" — they all have much of which to be proud.

On August 6, 1986 we will be going back to where it all began for an 11 day, first class escorted tour of the Emerald Isle. For more information, send in the coupon below.

(Photographs of the Charlestown Irish Rose Contest will be featured in an upcoming edition of "The Patriot".)

Students Of Saint Catherine School "Walk For Hunger"

On Sunday, May 4th, sixteen students, three parents and three teachers from Saint Catherine School began the "Walk For Hunger" from the Boston Common to Newton Center. Four students and one parent completed the twenty mile walk.

In an effort to raise the consciousness of the students, classes raised money by participation in auctions and cake sales. This provided the youngsters who were unable to walk, the opportunity to show their support to those who walked.

A total of $1,652 was raised by the students of Saint Catherine for the "Walk For Hunger".

Those from Saint Catherine taking part in the walk included Joseph DeRoeve, Brendan Brennan, Natalie Rizzo, James Owens, Desirée Correnti, Teresa Mc-Grath, Noreen Rizzo, Marilyn Brassil, Linda Golden, Karen Miethe, Jennifer Burns, Beth Cannizzaro, Al Titcomb, Kerry Lent, Patty Reilly, Kevin Connolly, Sister Marie Patrice, Sister Anne Marie and teacher Linda Santamaria.

The faculty congratulates all those who participated in the program and thanks the organizers for increasing the awareness about the hungry of the world.

Charlestown Lions Club Eyemobile To Be At Bunker Hill Mall

The Charlestown Lions Club Eyemobile will be at the Bunker Hill Mall to provide free screening for glaucoma, diabetes, visual acuity and blood pressure.

The Eyemobile will be open from noon to 6:00 p.m. on Monday, June 9; Tuesday, June 10; Wednesday, June 11; and Thursday, June 12.

In conjunction with the visit of the Eyemobile to Charlestown, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health will offer a free screening for "diabetic eyes" on Wednesday, June 11th and Thursday, June 12th. All people with diabetes who either have been using insulin for five or more years or do not use insulin, and have not had an eye exam in the past year, are encouraged to come to the Eyemobile for this free eye screening.

Diabetes can cause serious changes in the eye without sending warning signals. The disease often weakens the blood vessels in the eye, which may leak or rupture. The Eyemobile screening test will help find these and other changes before they create problems.

The screening is painless: nothing is put into or touches the eyes. Polaroid pictures will be taken of each eye. These photos will then be sent to an eye specialist at the Joslin Diabetes Center, who will check for any signs of change. His findings will be reported to the persons screened and their doctors.

Diabetes is a leading cause of vision loss, blinding over 250 people annually in Massachusetts. Medical research shows that with early diagnosis and treatment, the number could be reduced by up to 60%. Eye damage can happen before sight is affected; people with diabetes are urged to get complete eye exams each year.

The Charlestown Lions Club will be assisted at the Eyemobile by the Visiting Nurses Association and the MGH Bunker Hill Health Center.

Core Center Opens New Quarters

by Marianne Martin

Carol Pepi, a layperson with the Catholic Prison Ministries Chaplaincy Team, noticed that many of the men she had been counseling in the area prison system, despite stating a sincere wish to "come clean", were returning to jail after their release. Pepi found that although the crimes and circumstances which brought these men back to jail varied, all the men shared an inability to adjust to life outside prison. In an effort to address the needs of these men who wished to "come clean" but couldn't, Pepi formed the Core Center, a human service agency which deals specifically with the aftereffects of crime on ex-offenders, their families, their victims, and also others such as the first-time juvenile offender or the youth-at-risk. The center's purpose, according to Pepi, is to aid "in the healing process" of crime.

The Core Center, located at One McNulty Court in Charlestown, began last July in the rectory of Saint Catherine's Church on Vine Street. Pepi and her modest staff of three are funded by various human service agencies and foundations, to work inside the prison system preparing the men for the number of struggles and decisions they will face upon their release. The staff also works with men already freed to ensure that they do not return to prison.

"Core", which stands for Community Outreach for Reconciliation and Empowerment, is a Catholic-based organization established to give support to these men. Although Pepi says their roots are in the Catholic Church, their services are available to anyone who wants them. "We don't take a blood test to see if you're Catholic. We really don't care," she explains, but it is the Catholic ties which add to the Core Center's credibility with the prisoners. According to Core staff member, Janet Schoof, prisoners, for the most part, are not very trusting of people offering counsel. "They feel there aren't many places they can go to and talk off the record. But they trust the Chaplaincy Team, and that trust spills over to the Core Staff."

The services offered by Core are not mandated by the parole system. Pepi says the men, themselves, decide, "This time it's going to be different," and they seek the help. "A man can leave prison with the best of intentions," says Pepi, "But once he is back out on the streets, the tension is there. We work with the men on the inside about the issues they will face outside such as, employment, housing, re-establishing family and community ties." One of the most important areas the staff addresses with the prisoners is how they will and can gain control of their lives once more.

In prison, men have limited control over their daily routine, however, once released they face what appears to be unlimited decision-making situations which can be overwhelming. "After ten years in prison, buying a pack of gum can be a traumatic experience," explained Schoof.

While Pepi says she realizes the horror that victims of crime experience, one has to look at the reasons for crime. "I don't live in a Mary Poppins world," she says, "but one has to look at the other side. We look at the issues which brought these men in, in the first place. I can hate crime, but I'm not dealing with crime, I am dealing with the prisoners."

By helping the incarcerated man return to society, Pepi says the Core Center reduces the number of repeated offenses. "If a man makes the decision to come clean and does, we've prevented him from committing a possible future crime." According to Pepi, ex-offenders often experience an overwhelming sense of isolation after their release which can "push an individual over the edge" and back into his criminal ways. "We here are that 'one more chance' he has to think twice about what he's doing. We teach him he is capable of making a decision. He can accept what happened before in his life as history and move on."

In prison, the men learn of the services provided by the Core Center via posters distributed throughout the prison and by word of mouth. Pepi explained that originally, one priest would visit and talk with the prisoners, but as the needs of the prisoners became too great for one man alone, a chaplaincy team of two priests, two sisters, two full time and one part time laypersons, and a deacon was formed. Pepi says the team was able to give one institution over 90 hours of service versus the 40 hours of one priest. However, it became obvious to Pepi that the prisoners needed services to get them through their release from prison and back into society. The prisoner has needs which she says aren't addressed by any other human service agency.

Inside the prison, the Core staff conducts a ten week decision-making course, which Schoof says, has been very effective helping men gain control over their lives. Schoof related a story of one prisoner, who after taking the course, had a confrontation with another inmate. Normally, the man told Schoof he would have hit the other man, but as a result of the course he decided not to. "That was a very real decision he made," stated Schoof, "How do I measure something like that?"

Outside the prison, the Core Center works with the men and their families to help them adjust to their new lives. "Everyone of us suffers because of crime," Pepi said, "Crime and punishment effect the whole community not just the offender and the victim. The community who was affected by the crime is the same community who must welcome the ex-offender back."

Currently, Charlestown is the only Core Center location. "We hope to have centers in other large city areas." The decision to come to Charlestown was based on the need of the community and Pepi's knowledge of the area, noting her past employment in the Saint Catherine's Religious Education Program. Despite focusing much of its attention on Charlestown, Pepi says the center does not limit its services should someone outside the community require help. Pepi and Schoof added that they have traveled to East Boston, Dorchester, Chelsea and Everett, utilizing local parish rectories. "We get calls from other parishes all wanting a center in their area," added Pepi, "We can't do it right now, but I do see the potential."

Another service provided by the Core Center, and one in which the local interest has "surprised" Pepi, is the juvenile offender program. Youth-at-risk of being repeatedly in trouble with the law are referred to the Core Center by either their church or the court. According to Pepi, it is the youth population, the first time offender, who offer the greatest hope of being helped. Schoof says in addition to counseling the youth, the center introduces the youth to ex-offenders who relate to the kids the experience of prison which she says is very effective.

In dealing with the youth, Pepi says the center has established four basic rules everyone involved must abide by. First, the juvenile must acknowledge what they have done. Second, he must take responsibility for having done it. Third, which Pepi calls "cleaning up the mess", essentially means that the youth must make amends for what he has done whether it be repairing the damage made, performing a public service, or simply apologizing for his action. The fourth rule states the youth must make sure this does not happen again.

While working with the youth may offer the greatest hope to the staff, not all of the youth are easily reformed. "We'll be dancing at some of their weddings before we are through," says Pepi. Often times, it is difficult for a youth to take responsibility for what they have done or to even admit that what they did was wrong.

"We look the kid straight in the eye and put the responsibility on him. We tell him not to waste our time and to take his chances in the courts," Pepi explains, "This usually works."

Getting the youth to admit what he has done is wrong, as difficult as it may be, is easier sometimes than asking him to "clean up the mess" of his action. "He has to look at everyone who was affected by what he did — everyone who ever believed in him — and make it up to those people who make up his support system, namely his family," continued Pepi.

One of the main focuses addressed by the ex-offenders, when talking to the youth, is drug and alcohol abuse. Pepi stated that everyone who has substance abuse is "vulnerable", noting that approximately 85% of all individuals arrested are under the influence of either drugs or alcohol. Pepi says the ex-offenders tell the youth to think twice.

"One of the saddest things I ever heard was a guy saying, 'If they said I did it, I probably did. I don't remember. It was all a blur,'" added Pepi.

Pepi says the Core Center has been very effective in dealing with both the ex-offenders and the juveniles. She said since theirs is a ministry working from a "faith perspective", they are able to see these convicted felons and ex-offenders as people with needs different from their own. "Everyone has integrity and value because they are loved by God. We look at these men as people. Yes, he is a sinner but his sins are public," she continued, "I, too, am a sinner, but mine are silent. They're both the same before God."

When asked how effective the program is, Schoof answered, "It is difficult to measure our success. Yes, some of these men will go back to prison. We don't have statistics which say 'X' many won't go back and 'X' many will. We teach them skills to deal with society. If we don't prevent them from going back, maybe they'll do better next time."

FACTS ABOUT DRUGS — F.A.D.

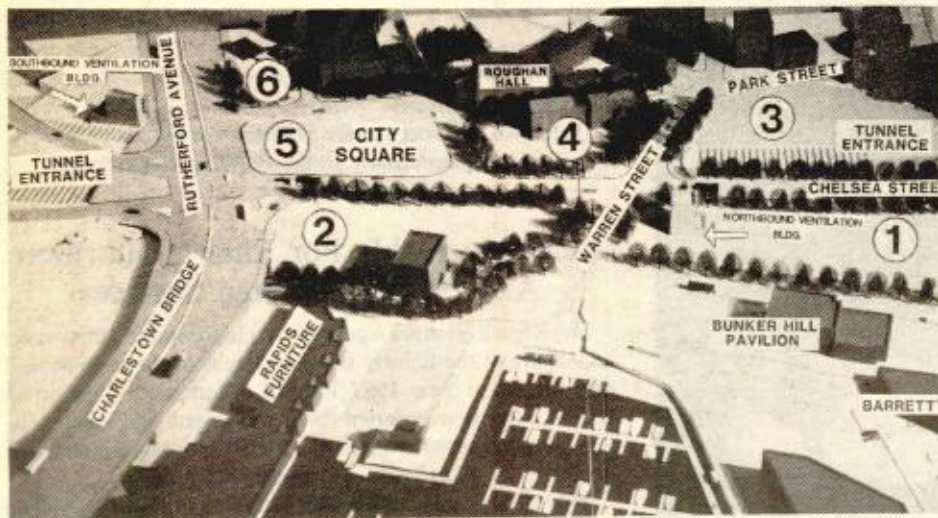

My young friend who committed suicide gave some warning signs. Most people who are planning to take their lives do. Here are some of these signs:

- 1.) Depressed mood, sadness that doesn't go away.
- 2.) Attempting suicide before.
- 3.) Talking about suicide.
- 4.) Recent loss of a loved one or a pet.
- 5.) Sudden withdrawal from friends and interests.
- 6.) Sense of failure.
- 7.) Neglect of school work or feelings of helplessness and apathy.
- 8.) Purchase of means of suicide: pills, rope, weapons.
- 9.) Changes in eating or sleeping patterns.
- 10.) Sudden mood changes or behavior changes.
- 11.) Changes in the family, such as divorce.
- 12.) Abuse of alcohol and/or other drugs.
- 13.) Giving away one's belongings.
- 14.) Attempts to hurt oneself.
- 15.) A sudden lifting of sadness which may indicate the decision to commit suicide has been made.

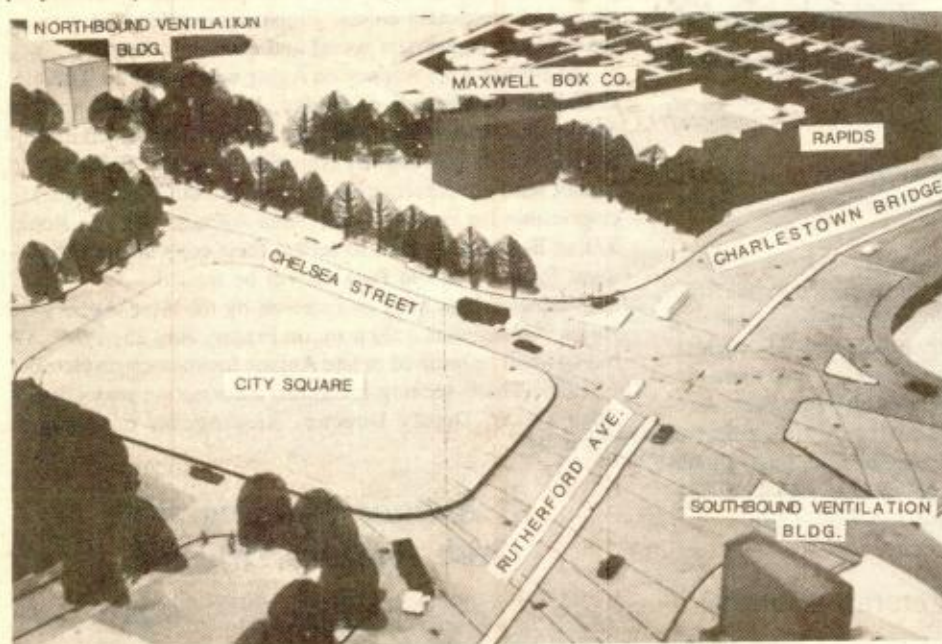

Not all persons show all the warning signs, some show few or none. Most people thinking suicide feel helpless and hopeless. They need help. Next week we'll talk about what to do.

Ventilation Buildings Subject Of North Area/Central Artery Meeting

MODEL of City Square area after the North Area/Central Artery highway improvement project. Six parcels will be created after the highway ramps are removed and the roadway put in tunnels under City Square. The two ventilation buildings are shown with arrows.

CITY SQUARE MODEL from Rutherford Avenue shows the two 48-foot ventilation buildings, one facing City Square and one at the corner of Warren Street extended and new Chelsea Street. The architectural treatment of these two buildings and how they are proposed to fit into Charlestown will be discussed at the next community meeting on Tuesday, June 17th at 7:00 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Two 48-foot-high ventilation buildings, part of the North Area/Central Artery highway improvement project, will be constructed near City Square when the $175 million dollar project gets under way. The architectural design of these buildings will be discussed at the upcoming North Area/Central Artery community meeting on Tuesday, June 17th at 7:00 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall at 75 West School Street.

The two ventilation buildings will be located near City Square, one on new Chelsea Street at extended Warren Street and one on Rutherford Avenue opposite City Square. The structures will house 48-foot-high ventilation stacks that will draw fresh air down and deliver it along the entire length of the tunnels.

Although the two buildings will perform the same functions, their different locations within the project influence the character of each in terms of design. The ventilation building for the northbound tunnel heading toward the Tobin Bridge, located at Chelsea and Warren Streets, is expected to be mostly "wrapped" by buildings when the parcel is developed after completion of the highway project. As a result of its being enclosed by future development, the ventilation building will not be a prominent feature.

However, the ventilation building for the southbound tunnel will be located on land facing City Square (Parcel 5) on Rutherford Avenue. In contrast to the northbound ventilation building which will be in a cluster of other buildings, the southbound ventilation building will be freestanding and will be the only building in the area. The building is being designed to fit in with the overall urban design of City Square. The architecture and character of the southbound ventilation building are important given the prominent location within City Square.

Current ideas for the architectural treatment of the two buildings will be presented for discussion by architects from CBT/Childs Bertman Tseckares & Casendino, Inc., consultants from the Berger-Lochner joint venture, engineers for the Massachusetts Department of Public Works. The northbound building, although it will eventually be wrapped by development, will be freestanding for a while before the parcel is developed and will be quite visible. Both buildings, therefore, will have to fit into the surrounding area.

The purpose of the two ventilation buildings is to draw fresh air into the tunnels by means of a semi-transverse fresh-air ventilation system for vehicular fumes and to clear the tunnels by means of a semi-transverse exhaust system in case of fire. The fans serve as air-intake fans in order to keep the tunnels from becoming concentrated with carbon monoxide from automobile exhaust by drawing in fresh air and distributing it along the tunnel through airports placed every ten feet. The fresh air will dilute the carbon monoxide in the tunnels.

The fans in the ventilation buildings would be able to reverse direction so that in the unlikely event of a fire in the tunnel, the fans would serve as exhaust fans by pulling smoke and fumes out of the tunnels. The height of the buildings was determined by the requirement that the noise level at the point three feet above the top of the stacks be no more than 65 decibels when the fans are operating in reverse. The height of the stacks is necessary to achieve the desired noise attenuation. The noise level of the fans when they are drawing air into the tunnels is not significant to the surrounding community; the sound from the fans is primarily confined to the tunnels themselves, and then is only slight.

Also to be discussed at the meeting on June 17th will be plans for the streetscape of the North Area after the highway improvements are done and a review of the schedule.
