Meeting On Proposed Affordable Housing In The Charlestown Navy Yard

On Tuesday, May 27, 1986, the Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA) will hold a public meeting to present a proposal for affordable housing in the Charlestown Navy Yard. The meeting will take place in Building 5, the former Officer's Club, at the Navy Yard at 7:30 p.m. (Enter Gate 4 and the National Park Service Guard will direct you to the meeting.)

The meeting will be preceded by a visit at 7:00 p.m. to the development site, which is located at the corner of First Avenue and 13th Street in the Navy Yard.

The development has been proposed jointly by Immobiliare New England, the largest residential developer in the Yard and the Bricklayers and Laborers Non-Profit Housing Corporation, a group experienced in the production of affordable housing in Boston.

Approximately 40 units of housing could be created, which would be sold for approximately $70,000 to Boston resident families and individuals with incomes of $15,000 to $42,000.

THE SITE PLAN of the Charlestown Navy Yard, indicating the location of 40 units of affordable housing proposed by a joint venture of the Bricklayers and Laborers Non-Profit Housing Corporation and Immobiliare New England. SETTLEMENT DATES

The final settlement date is usually an important item in negotiating a purchase agreement on a home. This is the day that buyers get their ownership papers and the sellers get their money. It's important to remember, however, that most standard contracts don't pinpoint a specific date, and many settlements are delayed, usually due to factors beyond the buyer's control.

Typically, the settlement will be set for a specific date, or as soon after that as the title search and lender's paper work can be completed. If anything even slightly out of the ordinary happens, your settlement schedule can be upset. A question can arise about liens that may have been paid, but not properly recorded. The buyers may find that something on their credit history must be cleared up or explained. These situations rarely cause the transaction to fall apart, but they can wreak havoc with your schedule for moving, or, if you're the seller, closing on your new home. Your Realtor will keep you up to date on the progress of your settlement to help avoid delays or minimize the inconvenience if one does occur.

If you're planning a move, Century 21, Silva Realty Associates employs full service professionals who can get your home sold and help you find a new one. Stop by our office at 142 Main Street or give us a call at 242-7470.

Charlestown Development Issues Discussed At BRA Board Of Directors Meeting

by Marianne Martin

Several Charlestown development issues were on the Thursday, May 15th Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA) Board of Directors' agenda. Among them was a request by the Authority to "advertise and/or seek development interest for housing construction" for 12 BRA owned Charlestown sites, mostly vacant land parcels, including Parcels P-2 and C-2.

Parcel P-2 is the controversial site located on the corner of Bunker Hill and Main Streets, which once was a Charlestown neighborhood where more than 30 families lived. The land was taken by eminent domain by the Authority in the 1960s for the purpose of constructing a school; however, the school was never built. Since then, many developers have expressed interest in the site, but community opposition to any non-advertised designation of the property led to Thursday's request by the Authority to conduct an open development proposal competition. Recently, the Bricklayers and Laborers Non-Profit Housing Corporation approached the community with a proposal to construct 39 units of affordable townhouse condominium housing to be sold at $70,000, a cost which is 40% below current market rates, for first time homeowners. While the community opinion favored affordable housing, they remained firm in their desire for an open competitive process.

The Bricklayers and Laborers Non-Profit Housing Corporation were also on Thursday's agenda, however it was not in regards to Parcel P-2. The group has formed a joint venture with the development team, Immobiliare New England, to construct 40 affordable townhouse units in the Charlestown Navy Yard. Immobiliare New England requested the Board approve the transfer of a portion of Parcel 4A in the Navy Yard from Immobiliare to the joint venture in order to construct these units.

Under the Land Disposition Agreement signed in 1978 between the BRA and Immobiliare New England, the development team was granted the tentative designation of 12 BRA sites in the Navy Yard. As part of the agreement, Immobiliare agreed to build a percentage of the total number of units for low to moderate income people. Parcel 4A was to become midrise townhouses under this agreement. According to Paul Davis of Im-mobiliare, Building 104 was intended to be redeveloped as moderate priced housing. While it appears that Immobiliare has not sought to construct reasonably priced housing in the Navy Yard, Davis says this is not so. "We haven't not tried to get moderately priced housing," explained Davis. "It's just been difficult to do in Building 104. This proposal (by the Bricklayers) is a great opportunity for us."

According to Davis, Immobiliare New England would donate the land to the corporation. By getting the land at no cost, and because they are a nonprofit group, the corporation can sell the units at cost, fulfilling the needs of all parties involved. Tom McIntyre of the non-profit group told the Board this venture would make "everybody happy" because the community will receive moderate priced housing, Immobiliare would fulfill their obligation to the BRA, and the non-profit group could provide construction jobs for local labor.

"Manufactured housing was considered the answer to the housing problem in Boston," began McIntyre who added, unlike manufactured housing which the the most part is made in New Hampshire, the non-profit's proposal, includes brick fronts, bay windows, and eleven foot high ceilings in the units. Also, the jobs would go to Boston residents and not residents of New Hampshire. "There's much pressure on us (the unions) to put inner city laborers to work," stated McIntyre.

Referring to the many large Boston development projects which utilize union labor, McIntyre told the Board that the unions "could build anything", but this proposal was a means of putting the type of quality work unions provide into something the average couple making $26,000 a year living in Boston could afford to own. BRA Director Stephen Coyle added in Charlestown first time homeowners did not necessarily mean "young". According to the Director, roughly 70% of all Charlestown residents rent.

The plan is to sell the townhouses at the cost of construction in the range of $70,000 for a two bedroom unit, 70% of which would be reserved for Charlestown residents. In order to maintain that the units affordable housing, the resale cost of these units would be restricted to the price the owner paid plus the percent rise in the Consumer Price Index from the date purchased. Currently, the design for these 40 units lacks the adequate number of parking spaces as required by the Boston Zoning Code which calls for a minimum of .9 parking spaces per unit. This proposal only has 30 parking spaces, but architect William Rawn told the Board he is working to revise the parking situation.

Several Board members questioned McIntyre about the use of union pension monies as a way to finance the initial finance costs. McIntyre told the Board that the actual monies were not being used, nor were they collateral in obtaining a loan. Rather, because the union had invested their pension fund monies at the United States Trust Company, the bank was willing to lend the corporation money at a lower interest rate. "If we go belly up," explained McIntyre, "The U.S. Trust has a choice piece of land and they can sell the units at twice the price we're planning to sell them."

Board member, James Flaherty, asked if the developers could secure mortgages for those residents who wish to purchase these units. In South Boston, buyers of the Andrew Square townhouses, had to scramble to find a bank to give them a mortgage, Flaherty said. Davis told Flaherty that he was confident that Immobiliare New England could get a "letter of comfort from a lending institution" which would provide a group mortgage package for the future owners.

Before leaving the meeting, McIntyre invited the Board members to visit the South Boston townhouse units. "An independent appraiser told us they were the best looking things around for the price. They're really built up to code," he told them, adding they were "a handsome piece of business."

The Board voted to table their decision on the request to transfer the parcel from Immobiliare to the joint venture until the developers presented their plan to the Charlestown community.

Charlestown businessman, Robert Borzakian, owner of the Liberty Bell Wholesale Grocery on Main Street, also had his request before the Board tabled until a later date. This is the second time Borzakian has had his proposal to construct a new facility for his soon-to-be displaced business on a 28,000 square portion of the BRA owned Parcel P15-2C2, located on A Street, on the Cambridge side of Rutherford Avenue. When Borzakian first presented his proposal to the Board, they tabled their decision because Borzakian failed to meet with the community.

Jim English, the BRA Charlestown project director, told the Board that a community meeting was held which "thirty-five" residents attended and this group voted unanimously in favor of the proposal.

Borzakian currently leases 12,000 square feet in the BRA owned building on Main Street, in the middle of the Parcel C-2, which the Board voted to allow the Authority to advertise for development for housing construction. This building, which is an area eyesore, is also pending a court order by the Inspectional Service Department, to be demolished. Both English and Borzakian's attorney, Ralph Donabed, stressed to the Board the urgency of the Liberty Bell situation, noting that this business was displaced by the Authority once before.

Board Chairman Robert Farrell was apprehensive in granting the tentative designation for a number of reasons. First, Farrell told the developer that since the property was adjacent to the Bunker Hill Community College athletic field, the college should have been notified about the proposal, something Borzakian did not do. Second, the parcel which Borzakian was seeking "prime property" and could be "valuable to the city."

English told the Board that the land parcel, P15-2C2, was originally part of the college's property, but was given to the Authority for the purpose of relocating Charlestown businesses the BRA had moved. English added that Borzakian would "make every effort" to meet with the college "immediately."

The Liberty Bell Wholesale Grocery business was originally located in the North End where it began in 1888. The business moved to City Square in 1919, but was forced to move when the city built the John Harvard Mall. They moved to the Main Street location in 1939 and have remained there since.

We would like to thank Father Paul McCarthy of Saint Mary's Church, the Boston Fire Department's Engine 32, the Boston Police Department's Officer Buckley and the Medics that assisted us during our recent time of need.

A special thanks to our neighbors, Ed and Dot Collins, for their kindness and great help.

In Praise Of Charlestown Hospitality

Dear Mrs. Conway:

A few weeks ago, I had an experience in Charlestown which made quite an impression on me. Having had car trouble while on the Tobin Bridge, I exited at Charlestown.

Within minutes of raising the car hood, a man named Jim Adams came over to assist me. He, I learned, is a developer who is building condominiums in Charlestown. As he was checking the engine, I mentioned that I had an important appointment to which I was on my way. He called over one of his workers and actually had him drive me to the appointment, which was on the other side of Boston.

When I returned to my car that afternoon, I discovered that Mr. Adams had diagnosed the problem, had sent someone to get the parts, and had done the repairs so I was able to drive the car home. He said the parts were inexpensive and would not take any payment.

I've heard about Charlestown hospitality. I now believe it. Mr. Adams is a credit to Charlestown.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lyn Yakas

Children vs. Dogs

Spring is here!
Parents and grandparents take their small children and babies to the Parks.

Watch out!

Watch out!

Dog dirt!

Come on Parents . . . Speak up!

Tell these "dog people" to keep their dogs in their own yards to "perform" — and tell them to pick up their own dog dirt!!

They have no right to deliberately take their dogs to foul the public parks!

The children should not be exposed to the germs of animal feces matter . . . to say nothing about walking in it!

Children are more important than dogs!!!

Speak up to these "dog people".

Let's give the parks back to the "public" . . . especially to the small children who need a place to play.

Dog owner — who cleans up after the family dog!

To the Officers & Members of Post 26,

To avoid any misunderstanding, we would like to reiterate our position regarding the relocation of the Charlestown World War II Memorial.

Our organization and the Charlestown Preservation Society (CPS) respectively developed beautification proposals for Hayes Square and Thompson Square. Each organization is essentially the final arbiter for design questions pertaining to their respective proposal. To develop designs in accordance with community preferences, the Task Force and CPS jointly

Phipps Burial Ground National Treasure — Local Disgrace

Dear Gloria,

I would like to bring attention to a serious problem, long ignored in Charlestown, to the residents and to the proper authorities of the City of Boston.

The Phipps Burial Ground, a national treasure which belongs to the nation — a vital link to our colonial past — is in scandalous condition with wrecked headstones, the area littered with beer bottles, the gate wide open all the time, the flag pole erected by the Charlestown Militia Company in 1969 taken down.

Where is our civic pride? Gone! The location is being destroyed.

Where is the National Historic Society which preserves such sites?

There must be some organization or someone who can help. Could this be put on the Freedom Trail? It is the oldest cemetery in the United States.

I hope this letter will help to get some action on this matter.

Reiterates Position On Memorial

sponsored two public meetings to solicit community opinions in regard to the redesign of these two public spaces. It was in the context of these two meetings that the Memorial relocation controversies emerged.

From the outset, the Task Force, CPS, and the architects have repeatedly stated their willingness to abide by the preferences of the community's veterans organizations in regard to the Memorial's location. Neither the Task Force or CPS has taken a position on this issue except to respect the prerogatives of those veterans groups responsible for deciding the memorial's location.

We realize there are meritorious arguments for both locations. We also realize that unanimity of this matter is next to impossible. We trust that your Post's vote of reaffirmation takes into account the preference of all Charlestown World War II veterans and their families, whether they are affiliated with your organization or not.

Should controversy persist, we hope the community's veterans organizations can maintain (or reach) a satisfactory consensus on this issue, before designs are finalized. As the sponsor of the Thompson Square proposal, we believe the CPS has been as accommodating as possible on this issue. However, it is not the role of either the CPS, the Task Force, or the architects to arbitrate this dispute amongst the community's veterans.

Sincerely,

19th Century House Moved To New Site

by Kathy Giordano

"A sight worth waiting for . . ." said one weary resident who had stood for over six hours watching the tedious process of readying a duplex house at 45 Warren Street for a short move to Park Street. Workmen from the Gorman Company of Hingham started preparations for the move more than a week ago, but at 7:00 a.m. on Saturday, May 17th, the actual move began.

The house, believed to be built around 1840, slowly "rolled" out onto Warren Street, step by step, until it cleared the buildings around it, the old English Garage on one side and a wooden triple decker on the other.

Hours went by as the house was made level with the street, jacked up and put on a flat bed truck for the move. An elderly man who stood watching the young crew hard at work stated, "With every modern convenience of today, what they are doing is the best way of moving a house. It's the same process that must have been used in Egypt centuries ago with the building of the pyramids!"

The crowd that gathered to watch this unusual sight took on a festive tone. Loud radio music could be heard coming from a large "boom box" at the corner of Winthrop Street. The folks living in Constitution Co-op (formerly St. Mary's Grammar School) had front row seats and were enjoying the activities and talking to the spectators. More than a few onlookers commented on how much money they could have made if only they had thought of selling soft drinks and popcorn!

Finally at around 3:00 p.m. the house started to slowly edge its way along Warren Street to the corner of Henley Street. As it made the turn onto Park Street, the slight incline made the second floor and roof sway back and forth. Then a few bricks fell through the foundation onto the roadway.

The chimney rattled, but held firm, and at one point, as the house was working its way onto the new site, the crowd let out a yell to have one of the workmen move from beside the structure for fear that one of the chimneys would fall on top of him. Movement stopped at that point as the crew jacked the structure to level off the house. During this time, drivers of vehicles coming down the off ramp of the Mystic-Tobin Bridge could hardly believe what was going on before their eyes. Spectators seemed to be just as involved as the crew and the new owners of the house.

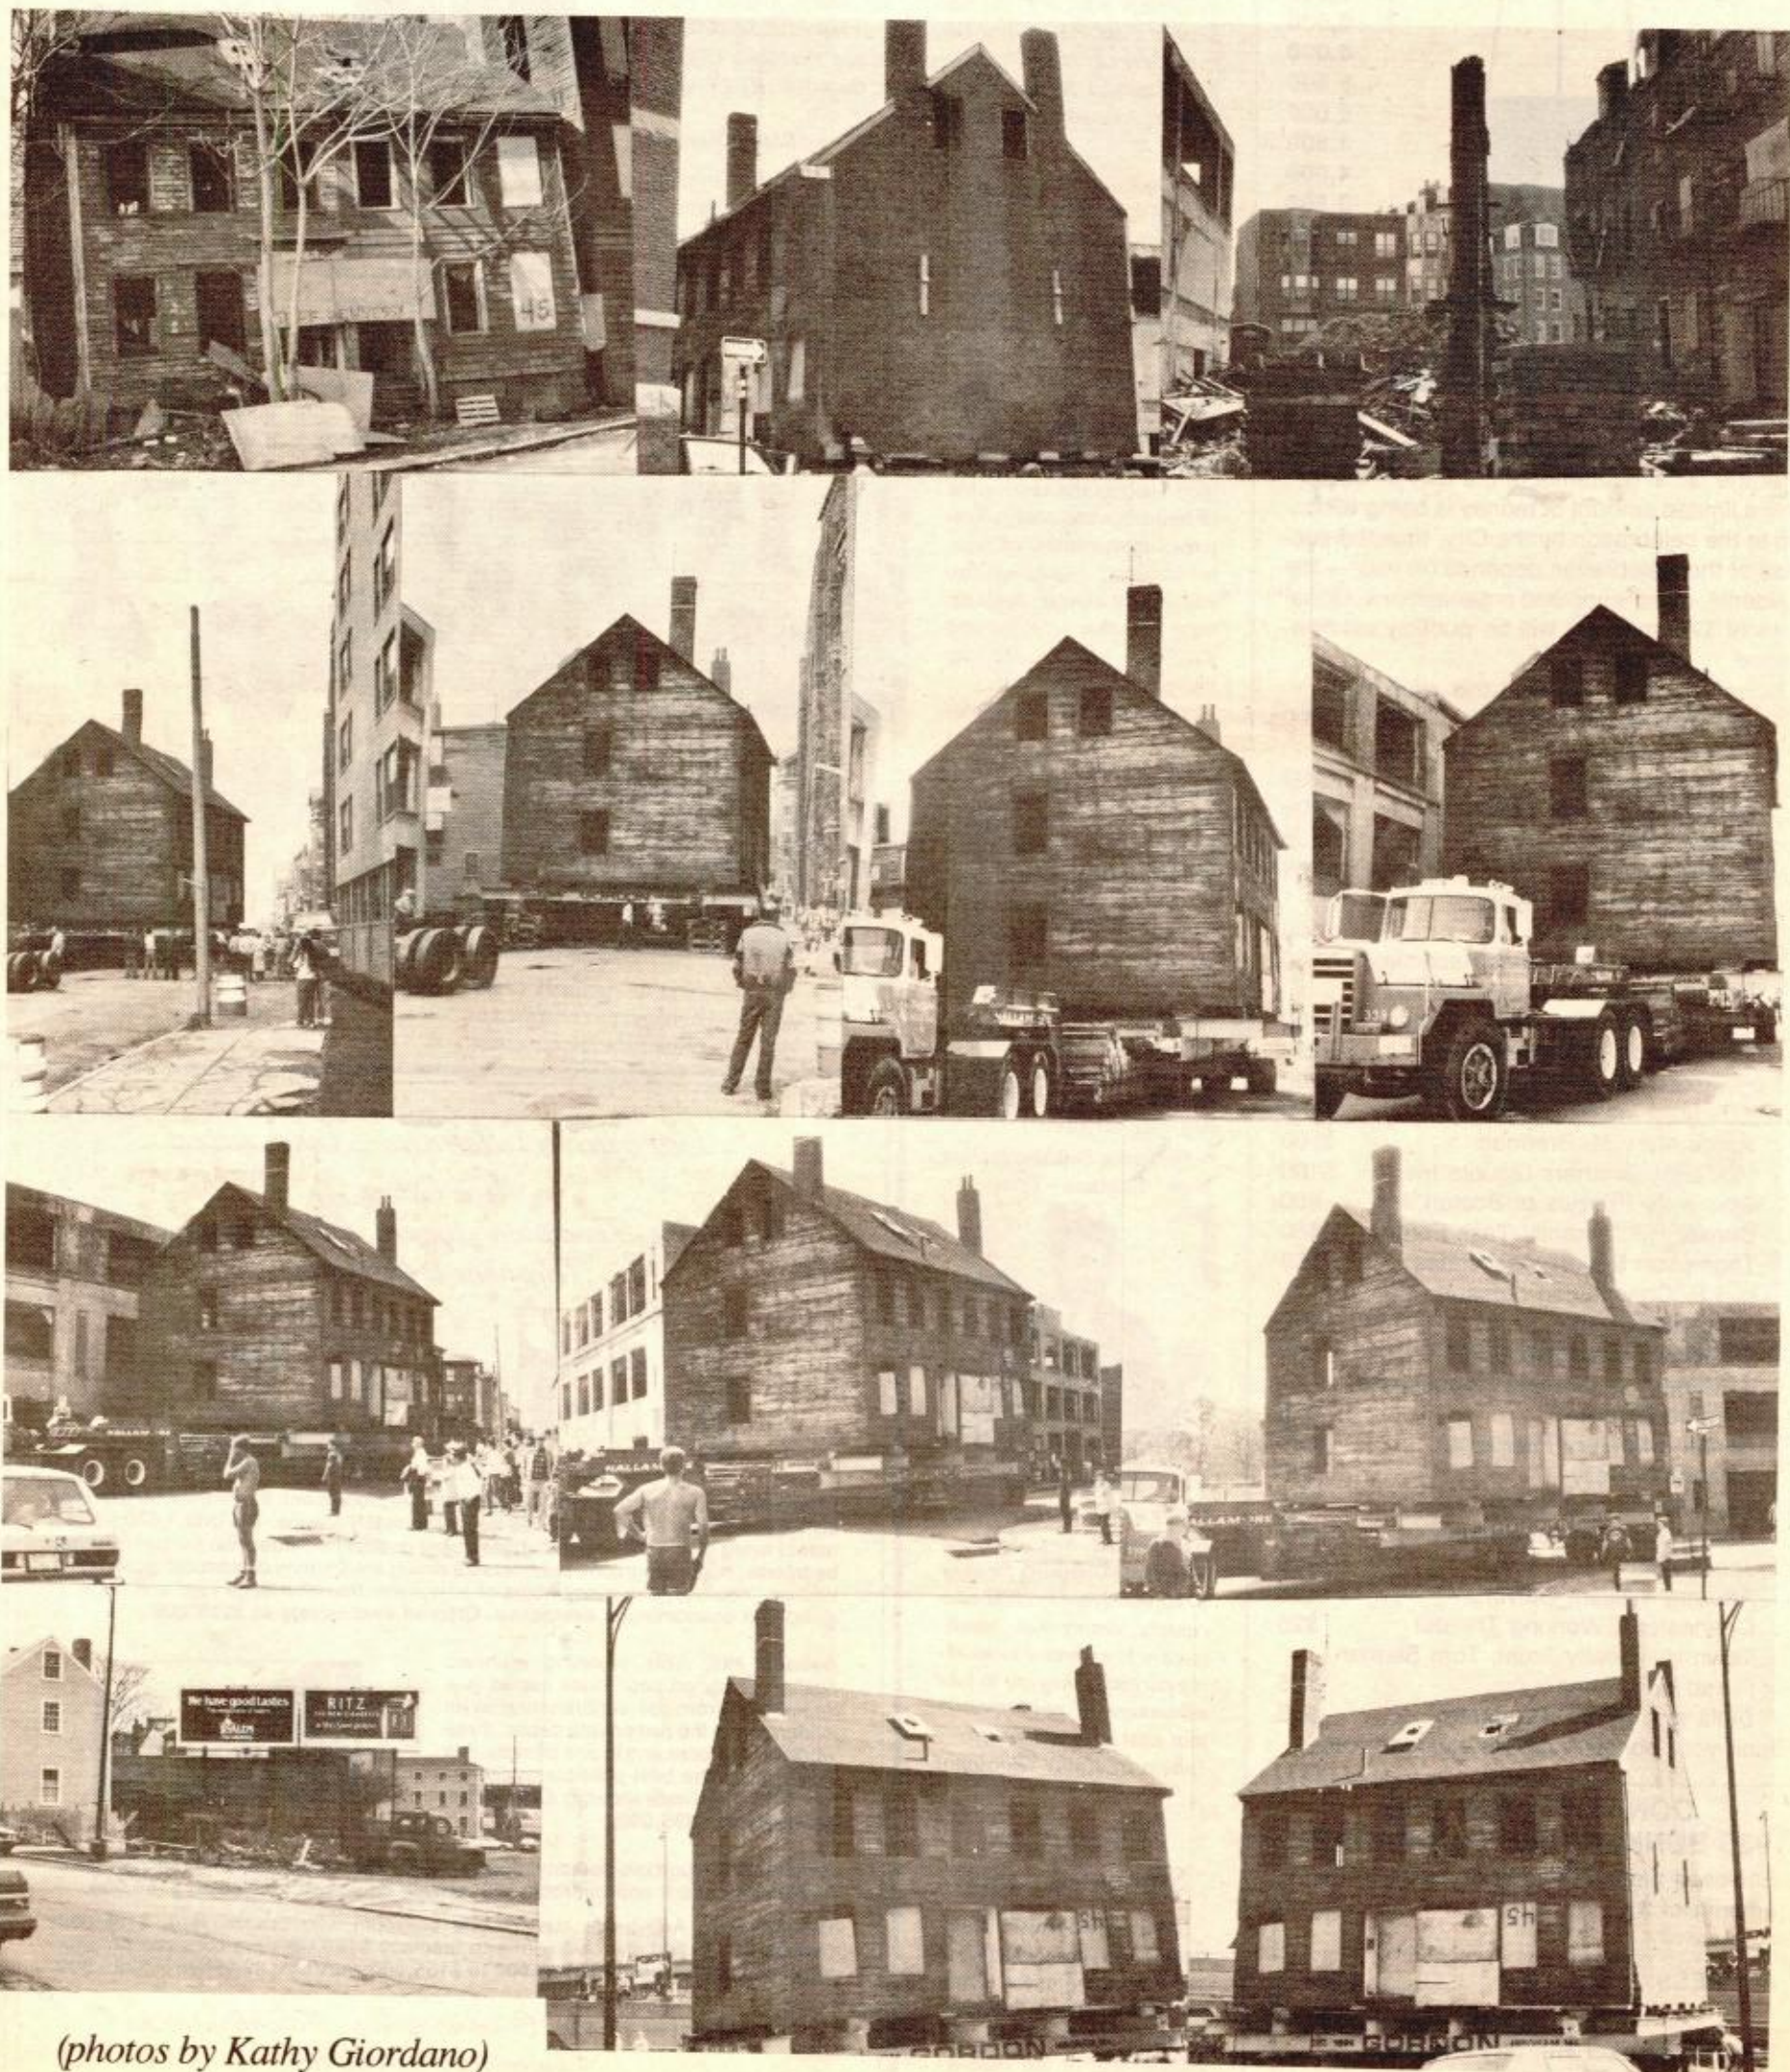

Tom Hawley of Park Street and Alan Kueny of Common Street own the duplex house. It was given to them by developer Jim Adams who had planned to tear it down during the reconstruction process of the Tontine-Crescent project now going on in that area. Hawley and Kueny plan to restore the building to its original design, including the placement of cedar siding for a more authentic early 19th century appearance. Present plans are to make two separate rental units with off street parking in the rear.

Tom Hawley stated that a few of the reasons the two men wanted to move the house was to put something on that site that was consistent with the existing homes along Park Street, not wanting the house to be demolished because of its architectural design and also to show the Boston Redevelopment Authority (B.R.A.) that there are workable alternatives to urban renewal in the neighborhoods.

Kueny and Hawley want to thank Jim Adams, the B.R.A. who owned part of the site, the Charlestown Preservation Society for their support and the neighbors along Park Street.

The house is expected to be on its new foundation within a week.

The Board voted to table their decision on designating the Liberty Bell proposal until the developer meets with the college, and the Authority investigates the "value" of the property to the city.

Also on the agenda was the request for final designation of the Navy Yard Plaza Development Associates-33 as redeveloper of Building 33 into 11,610 square feet of retail space facing the Second Avenue Pedestrian Mall and 31,000 square feet of office space on the floors two through four.

Originally, this development team was known as the Central Artery Preloading To Start In June

TYPICAL WICK DRAIN INSTALLATION

WICK DRAINS will be installed in the area of the new loop ramps, south of Rutherford Avenue, as part of the North Area/Central Artery project. Water in the soil is forced out through the wicks into the drainage layer in order to compress the soil.

town Branch Railroad filled in a right-of-way on marshland to transport ice to ships at the nearby docks. The railroad system continued to grow, and by the 1900s, the Boston & Maine Railroad had filled in more of the marshy land south of City Square to create more track space to serve the commercial activities that flourished in Charlestown. By the 1930s, the railroad yards expanded further after the North Station yards were developed in 1928. These railroad yards handled more shipments of Maine potatoes than anywhere in the country at this time, and warehouses for the potatoes, "potato sheds," were constructed near the tracks. The marshlands and waterfront area had been converted into usable land with landfill, expanding the area's transportation facilities and developable land.

Because the loop-ramp area is composed largely of organic soils, the weight of the new ramps would be too great for the earth in that area and the roadway would sink in places. If the roadway were being built on level ground in a straight configuration, such as in a rural setting, then settlement would be uniform and the road could be built without much time devoted to forcing set-water out of the soil while filtering out the soil particles. However, there are problems with sand drains breaking and becoming non-functional.

Relatively recent innovation has produced a prefabricated "wick" drain made of plastic or paper which has significantly speeded settlement time in construction projects. Wick drains will be used in the North Area project. The drains are about 4 inches wide by 1/4 inch thick and are installed by pushing or vibrating a mandrel with the wick into the ground. After the mandrel reaches the bottom of the compressible soil, the mandrel is withdrawn leaving the wick in place. Then additional fill is placed on the location in stages, raising the ground slowly to the final elevation.

EQUIPMENT similar to this will be used to install the wick drains. A mandrel installs the wick into the soil and then pulls out, leaving the wick in place.

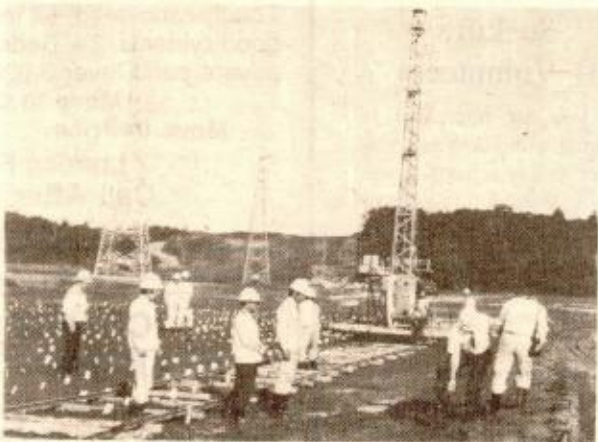

THE WICK DRAINS installed in the loop ramp area may look like this prior to the placement of the preloaded material, which, when completely placed, would be from five feet to 18 feet high.

ting. However, with high ramp structures, natural settling is not feasible, and in the North Area project, the fact that large abutments will be used to elevate the roadway requires that the soil be settled before the ramps are built.

PRELOADING METHODS VARY

There are several ways to increase the strength of the soil by compressing it. One method involves building up the land about 10 feet higher than the eventual final grade of the area and keeping this mound on the land for 3 to 12 months while the water

Normally the term "wick" means drawing out by absorption; in this case, however, the water in the soil is being forced out by the weight of the fill. The weight of the fill forces the water to flow along the surface of the drain while the filter keeps soil particles away from the flowing water. Twice the number of wick drains than sand drains are needed, because they are placed closer together. However, the installation of a wick-drain system is 20 percent to 30 percent cheaper, because of the faster installation.

AFTER a period of about one month, during which trucks and special equipment will be moved into the loop ramp area of the North Area/Central Artery project, the area will be relatively quiet once again.

slowly escapes through the soil. But a thick soil layer and very fine soil make draining water difficult. Since time is a major consideration in the North Area/Central Artery project, accelerating soil settlement is necessary.

One way of speeding settlement is by using vertical drains that shorten the drainage path of the water. In the past, vertical sand drains have been employed to carry

After the installation of the wick drains in the loop ramp area, loam will be spread, the sloped embankments seeded, and monitoring devices will be put in place. Settlement platforms and various gauges will be on the site to keep track of the progress of the settlement. After the soil has settled the required amount, the wicks will be removed and the actual construction of the viaducts can begin.

Although Charlestown was the first settlement of Massachusetts, it was originally a peninsula, much smaller than it is now. Much of the land that now makes up Charlestown, especially the area by the railroad tracks and by the waterfront, was created in the mid-1800s to accommodate growth and transportation improvements. Marshland was filled in, and Charlestown continued its growth.

The North Area/Central Artery project, a $175 million highway project in Charlestown's City Square, is currently in the Final Design stage, but plans are now set for doing essential soil preparation on the sites of the former marshlands. Because the land where the new loop ramps will be built is composed of landfill, steps must be taken now to compress the soil.

For about one month, special equipment and trucks carrying various types of material for fill will be moved into the area of the new loop ramps, south of Rutherford Avenue. Afterwards, the area will be relatively quiet again for one year as the soil is compressed and the area is prepared for construction of the viaducts.

Once the preloading process is complete in the spring of 1987, construction of the new ramps will begin, followed by the construction later in 1987 of the new tunnels under City Square. The massive, new loop ramps will be built over the Boston Sand & Gravel area and over a portion of Cambridge, and special advance preparations must be made for their construction. A procedure called preloading will be done in the area in order to speed the compression of the soil on which new ramps will be built.

WHY IS PRELOADING NECESSARY?

Preloading the ramp area is necessary, because the added weight of the new ramps would result in the ramps slowly sinking in the soil, formerly marshy land. Although there are few traces of the area's being part of the waterfront, it was, in fact, until the mid-1800s when it was filled in to accommodate new streets and as the passenger and freight railroads were developed. Designated Driver Campaign Kicked Off At Barrett's

by Kathy Giordano

The "I've Got The Key!" campaign, a life saving project sponsored by WBZ-TV and the Massachusetts Restaurant Association, had its official kick off at Barrett's on Boston Harbour in Charlestown, on Wednesday, May 14th. Liz Walker and Jack Williams of WBZ-TV 4 were on hand to launch the nation's first regional designated driver program, as was Tom McCabe, Vice Chairman of the Massachusetts Restaurant Association.

Participating restaurants and bars in the "I've Got The Key!" campaign will offer free non-alcoholic beverages to patrons who will not be drinking and will be driving the members of their party home. These restaurants and bars are located throughout Massachusetts, with a growing number in New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont and Rhode Island. McCabe stated that owners are also family members and are concerned over the numbers of deaths and injuries due to drunk driving each year. He stated that "50 restaurants have already signed up and an additional ten new applications have been received each day."

Governor Michael Dukakis, whose own "Drug Busters" Program has been very successful, praised WBZ for the "tremendous impact they have made on both TV and radio to reach out to the youth" of the Commonwealth. Dukakis stated that "it is never too early to bring this message to young people and their parents." "Alcoholism is the single most serious public health problem in the state," he said. "With more and more people eating out, you are their contact," Dukakis told

Increased Police Protection Slated For Charlestown Community

by Marianne Martin

"I think you're going to be surprised in the next couple of weeks," Charlestown Community Relations Officer John McLean of the Boston Police Department Area A, told residents regarding the increased police protection in the town to combat many of the annual warm weather neighborhood disturbances.

Problems such as youth gangs, loitering, public drinking, and late night partying increase as the temperature rises. Residents who attended the Police Community Relations Meeting on Tuesday, May 13th at the Kent Community School provided McLean with a list of some of the more popular gathering spots, such as the Eden Street Park and Main Street, but also some of the newer gathering locations including the MDC rink and tennis courts on Washington Street.

For some residents, the typical nighttime summer problems, like public drinking, are now occurring in the afternoon. "They're out there in their shorts with their ghetto blasters between 1:30 and 5:30 p.m., having their cocktails before dinner," one person said.

Others experienced increased firecracker use in their area. One woman said fireworks were responsible for a fire she had at her home last summer and warned that firecrackers could also hurt and even blind a person should the firecracker blow up.

Car vandalism is another community problem on the increase in Charlestown. McLean told the residents car vandalism has reached an "epidemic proportion. Fourteen cars were vandalized in one night in the Navy Yard. They're having the same kind of problem that people at Monument Square were having."

One resident told of an incident she witnessed. "One night, 25 kids or so were tipping a car over in the Eden Street Park. I called 911 and the operator told me they already had four calls about it. Then I saw two cruisers drive right by, like the officers had blinders on."

McLean said the police department was aware of the auto vandalism problem and has employed undercover patrolmen to catch individuals in the act. McLean stressed, "They don't look like cops, believe me."

A number of traffic problems were also discussed at the community meeting, including double parking on Main Street and Bunker Hill Street, and people driving in the wrong direction on one way streets. One woman said she saw a car traveling in the wrong direction on Main Street, but when she tooted her horn to tell them so, they gave her "the finger", which made her feel they were Charlestown residents, who should have known better.

Other problems included the new stop sign on the left hand corner of Park and Henley Streets as a potential hazard. Many stated the sign was "silly" since most seasoned Charlestown motorists would concentrate on the traffic coming off the Bridge ramp which tends to ignore their stop sign. "My husband told me not to stop because I would probably get hit from the rear," one woman added. Another dangerous traffic spot is at Sullivan Square where, for traffic going around the rotary towards Somerville, the tall grass and weeds growing in the street's island blind motorists' vision of the oncoming traffic from Everett. McLean told the residents that he has been trying to get someone to mow the grass, but was successful in only having the area "trimmed." He assured the residents that he would continue on this matter.

Many told McLean they were impressed to see the same officer each month at the community meetings, because in the past, there would be a new officer each meeting, who was not familiar with their problems. McLean addressed many of the individual problems reported at last month's meeting, and said that he would do the same next month.

The next Police Community relations meeting, the last one of the season, will be held on Tuesday, June 10th at the Kent Community School at 7:00 p.m. All are encouraged to attend.

Higginson, seeking with reference to the premises at 79 Pearl Street, Ward 2, Variance from the terms of the Boston Zoning Code (see Acts of 1956, c.665) in the following respect: Articles: 14(14-2), 15(15-1), 17(17-1). • Life at Fort Warren during the Civil War will be featured on Saturday, May 24th and Sunday, May 25th, at 12:15 p.m. and 2:15 p.m. Visitors will be able to view the fortress, prisoner-of-war and training, and be able to examine the life of a common soldier from the 1860's. Fort Warren is one of the most significant Civil War sites in the North.

• A history of women at the Fort will be featured on Saturdays and Sundays, May 31 and June 1 and June 14 and 15 at 12:15 p.m. and 2:15 p.m. Throughout the history of Fort Warren, few women have been recognized at the Fort.
