Drugs And Vandalism Topics Of Mishawum Tenants Meeting

by Marianne Martin

Drugs and vandalism were the topics at the Thursday, July 26, 1984 meeting of the Mishawum Tenants Area Committee which not only drew the attention of area residents, but also local elected officials, and Boston Police Department members.

One of the serious problems hindering progress in the fight for "peaceful" living, is the "Catch-22" situation Mishawum tenants find themselves in. Since the area is in theory "private property" located on a public street, police can only patrol the public access ways.

While officials, City Councillor Robert

Travaglini and State Representative Richard Voke, pledged support to the tenants, the facts of limited police manpower have hampered adequate security.

The key to solving, or at least a step in the proper direction, lies in obtaining support from the management. While one resident stated area superintendent, William McClellan, has been "wonderful in his help of organizing us and pulling us together," McClellan, however, is not in the authority to do anything further to assist the tenants.

Presently, Richard Dray, the attorney for and a principal owner of Mishawum, is "the target" person stated several at meeting who said they have been unsuccessful in their attempts to reach the attorney.

Dray was not in attendance at the meeting, but in a later interview stated, "I am very delighted that the committee was formed."

The attorney reported he has been on vacation for the past two weeks and due to his present time schedule has not been able to attend the Mishawum Tenants Area Committee meetings, but stated, "I do intend to meet with them. I will be at the next meeting."

Dray stated, "I met with them initially and I encouraged the group."

Paramount Receives Final Designation From BRA

For Town Hill Development

by Marianne Martin

The Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA) awarded Paramount Development Associates, Inc. of Framingham final designation of 8,250 square feet in two non-contiguous lots on Main Street for the construction of 83 units of condominiums on Thursday, July 12, 1984.

The land which is the former Boston Filter property will come home to 80 units of residential condominiums with underground parking for 92 cars, should plans be approved by the Board of Appeal (BOA) this summer.

"Chances are very good," stated Jack Rizzo, developer and vice-president of the Paramount Development Associates, that the plan will be approved by the BOA.

According to Rizzo, the site is comprised of three separately owned parcels totaling more or less 37,000 square feet of land. (Paramount received two parcels of land prior to the BRA meeting). "As a result of a year of planning, design review several state and local agencies, and Final Designation by the BRA, we are now in a position to proceed with the project," stated Rizzo.

Among the agencies to review the design were the Charlestown Preservation Society, the Massachusetts Historical Society, the Landmark Committee and the BRA.

While Rizzo stated the building design "will be similar to the fabric of Charlestown," the added features which include a courtyard and more importantly, underground parking were a plus in receiving community acceptance.

In all, Rizzo stated there were two community meetings and either two or three neighborhood meetings. "Everyone thought that (the underground parking) was a great idea and while it is costly to do, we thought it was necessary," informed Rizzo.

The developer also added the project "is a blend of the past with modern day comforts. The design of the condominiums, landscape, and common areas have been carefully planned to present an atmosphere to compliment the architectural integrity of the surrounding neighborhood."

A total of 83 units will be constructed; 80, of which, will be residential and three will be commercial. Of the 80 residential units, 42 will be single bedroom and 38 will be two bedroom.

The price range is between $80,000 and $160,000 for the units which will vary in size between 600 and 1300 square feet.

Presently, the area is being cleared in order that construction may begin sometime in August.

The project, which is located in the Town Hall section of Charlestown, will contain the Austin Block, the old Dexter School and new buildings.

The Austin Block will serve as the corner anchor where Harvard Street and Main Street come together. According to Rizzo, this building will be used as commercial condominiums, while the new buildings and the former school will serve as residential units.

Rizzo also stated that the underground parking will serve approximately 92 cars. The entrance and egress from the garage will be from the south corner of Main Street adjacent

I think I'll go to church tonight,
Drop in and talk with God:

Pilot Education Program At Bunker Hill

Twenty-five fourteen and fifteen year-olds from the city's public schools are involved in a pilot education research program at Bunker Hill Community College in Charlestown.

The project, part of ABCD's, "Summerworks", is funded by the Ford Foundation and is designed to integrate with the public school curriculum by combining math and English studies with on campus "work" projects. Concepts learned during the morning academic period are directly applied to the afternoon assignments which include: mural design and painting, script writing and video taping and a garden beautification project.

The students, selected for the "Orange Line" communities of Charlestown, Roslindale, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain, and Boston's Chinatown.

Boston is one of the two pilot sites and will be used as a model for future programs around the country.

Students participating in the program will be monitored for several years to determine how this supplementary education affects their future academic and social progress. Because part of the project's focus is on job training, the youngsters will receive minimum ($3.35 per hour) for their participation in the program.

"This project is very exciting," said Mary Provo, Project Coordinator at Bunker Hill Community College. "Not only are the students receiving additional academic training, but they are also developing job skills and building relationships with people from enormously varied backgrounds."

The students will be on the Bunker Hill Community College campus every Monday through Friday until August 30th.

Paramount Receives Final Designation

to the Austin Block.

The new buildings which will connect the Austin Block and the school building on Harvard Street will "sensitively fit between two architecturally and historically important buildings," stated Rizzo. "The new construction will relate in scale and material with the special character of this Charlestown neighborhood."

The character of the buildings will be brick masonry with a combination of bow fronts and straight fronts. The roofs of the buildings will also be varied with some flat, others mansard, others pitched, while still others may have dormers.

"The idea," stated Rizzo, "is to express in a contemporary format, forms and expressions from Boston's and Charlestown's great architectural history."

Some of the units, primarily those being on the ground floor, will be accessible by front steps, and also have small gardens facing into the privately enclosed courtyard formed by the construction of the new buildings along the perimeter of this land bounded by Main Street, Harvard Street, Harvard Square and Hurd Lane. The other units will be accessible by a glass elevator located in the Dexter School building across glass enclosed bridges and down corridors to the front door.

The project, which has been designated by Mintz Associates, will take approximately nine to ten months to complete. Rizzo stated units should be available sometime next spring.

Voke Record Questioned By Coleman

The following article is a press release issued by the Coleman Campaign Committee.

Is the incumbent state representative for the combined Chelsea-Charlestown legislative district a true friend of organized labor and public school teachers?

The issue of support for labor and teachers arises following Candidate Phil

Coleman's contention that Voke is a "lukewarm" supporter of the AFL/CIO in Massachusetts and a poor supporter of the MTA (Massachusetts Teachers Association.)

To back his claim, Coleman revealed statistics published in the 1983-84 edition of The Massachusetts Political Almanac which lists the Chelsea incumbent's

AFL/CIO rating at 53 percent and an MTA rating of 25 percent.

A comprehensive 316-page review of State Government, the Almanac is a privately researched report of Hyannis resident Stephen G. Lakis and two assistant editors. Although four state government offices assisted compilation of Almanac data, it is not an official publication of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts nor a specific report of any political interest group.

Footnotes in the Almanac follow detailed listings of legislation filed by the two organizations in 1981 and 1982 and stress the fact that both refrain from "officially" rating legislators with numerical percentages. However, based on reviews of each legislator's roll-call record, the organizations periodically note the percentage of times a legislator has voted in agreement or disagreement with their preferred or "recommended" positions.

The Almanac Editorial Staff also lists 13 major issues acted upon during the 1981 and 1982 legislative sessions. Of the 13, the Chelsea incumbent is identified as a supporter of Gay Rights legislation that called for outlawing discrimination based on sexual preferences; the same section also noted the Representative's failure to vote on campaign finance regulation bill in October of 1981 and a handgun control bill voted on in late April of the same year.

He did, however, vote "No" on separate legislative proposals calling for Auto Insurance Deregulation and institution of the Death Penalty.

Coleman has stated the incumbent has voted (and in some cases not voted) on issues that could have been against the wishes of the district's residents. Part of Coleman's Campaign commitment to the district is the community meeting theory, a model he says will insure that the representative's votes are more indicative of community opinions.

He also believes the next representative should be more supportive of labor and education.

Facts About Drugs

by Mimi White

Why do kids drink? (or not drink)? There are many reasons why kids make the decisions they do about drinking. Maybe you can add others to the list.

- Many kids drink because it is part of their family life to have wine or beer with dinner or at a special event.
- Many kids drink in order to feel grown-up. It's like a "right passage" from childhood to adulthood.
- Some kids drink because they have a drinking problem.

•Many kids are pressured to drink by other kids. They don't like to be different. Here are some other reasons kids give for why they drink:

- "It makes me have a good time."
- "It tastes good."
- "I'm curious about what it's like."
- "My friends do it."
- "It makes me like myself better."
- "It makes me forget my problems."
- "My parents drink."
- "My parents told me not to drink."
- "It relaxes me."

For all of us it is important for us to know which of these reasons we feel are "good" reasons.

Between 20 and 30 million Americans never drink alcohol. Here are some reasons why:

- They may not be interested in it.
- They don't feel they need it to feel good or to be grown-up.
- They are happy the way they are.
- They have other ways of relaxing or having fun.
- They don't drink for religious reasons.
- They don't like to use any drugs including alcohol.

Why do many adults worry less about alcohol than about other drugs?

- Maybe they don't know alcohol is a drug.
- Maybe they feel that alcohol is an acceptable drug to abuse while other drugs are unacceptable.

It is important that everyone, whether adult or kid, make responsible decisions about their lives. Think about it.

Let's put Charlestown and Chelsea Voters back into the decision-making process....

Metropolitan Police Seek Identification Of Body

The Metropolitan Police today appealed to the public for assistance with their investigation of a body found in the Middlesex Fells Reservation in Medford last week.

On Wednesday, July 25, two men following an orienteering course in one of the most inaccessible areas of the reservation found a badly decomposed body. The body was so badly decomposed that it was difficult to determine the race and sex of the victim.

An autopsy revealed the body to be that of a white male, approximately six foot one inch, with a narrow waist. The victim was wearing a long sleeve print shirt, jeans, work boots and a Seiko watch.

Detectives from the Metropolitan Police have been comparing the physical description and dental records with those of known missing persons in the metropolitan Boston area. This investigation is difficult because of the limited amount of physical evidence available. A description of the victim has been sent by teletype to all police departments in New England.

Anyone with any information regarding the body is asked to call the Metropolitan Police Detective Unit at 282-8760.

The final assembly program of the year at the Warren-Prescott School

PHILIP CHAN of Mrs. Lund's kindergarten class who had the distinction of being the only kindergartner with perfect attendance.

New Supervisor Of Navy Shipbuilding

U. S. Navy Captain Richard G. Anderson relieved U.S. Navy Captain David B. Gibson as Supervisor of Shipbuilding, Conversion and Repair, Boston, during a ceremony conducted at the Charlestown Navy Yard on July 27.

U. S. Navy Vice Admiral Earl B. Fowler of the Naval Sea Systems Command in Washington, D.C. officiated at the ceremony. Boston Mayor Ray Flynn was also in attendance.

The U. S. Navy Supervisor of Shipbuilding, Conversion and Repair, Boston, is responsible for administering Department of Defense shipbuilding, design, conversion and facility contracts at assigned private shipyards in the New England area, as well as overseeing overhauls and repairs performed on U. S. Navy ships at private shipyards under contract. He is also responsible for planning and design for ship alterations, as well as the maintenance of the USS Constitution.

took place on Tuesday, June 19th in the Judge Gilmore Auditorium. Fittingly, the youngsters of the first grade classes of Mrs. Mooney, Mrs. Mernin and Mrs. Whelan presented the final extravaganza celebrating Flag Day and Bunker Hill Day. It was also the occasion of presentation of awards for the school year.

Congenial Brent Dobbins took on the role of Master of Ceremonies and was a very poised young man in handling such responsibilities. He welcomed all in attendance, invited the assemblage to stand and salute Old Glory and then join in the singing of "America". Mrs. Robbins, on last minute notice, graciously offered the piano accompaniment.

Mrs. Whelan's students opened the program with the story, "We Are Celebrating A Very Special Day," and this was followed by their magnificent singing of "Flag of Our Country." Mrs. Mernin's class then rendered in fine style, the poem, "Our Flag's Birthday". Fittingly, then they offered the musical rendition of "Marching, Marching, Flags Are Marching". Following this, the students of Mrs. Mooney recited the poem, "The Flag Goes By-Hats Off". The lilting rhythm of the song, "The Little Red Drum" was then sung by the group.

Next on the program, the children of room 102 recited the poem, "This Is A Blue Sky" and beautifully sang, "I Love the Flag". Room 101 children followed with the poem, "Our Country Is America." Coming next was the song, "Marching, Marching Proudly".

program, Mrs. Whelan's pupils rendered the poem, "Flags of Every Size" Finally, the poem, "Patriotism" and the song to close out the program, "God Bless America" was presented.

Following the conclusion of this outstanding presentation by the youngsters of grade one, Mrs. Kiely, principal, expressed her deep appreciation and gratitude to the teachers and children for their traditional excellence. She was speaking to all those in attendance, also.

Awards were next in order, as has become a tradition at the Warren-Prescott School. Children were recognized for the Alice Casey Award, Reading, Honor Roll and Perfect Attendance. All were wished a very happy and safe summer. A note of thanks was expressed to the parents for attending the program and award ceremony. Thanks to the children of Miss Lee's fifth grade for serving as ushers.

Any Charlestown resident, 18 years and older, may pick-up NOMINATION PAPERS at the KENNEDY CENTER, 27 Winthrop Street, Charlestown.

This house pulls its electricity out of thin air.

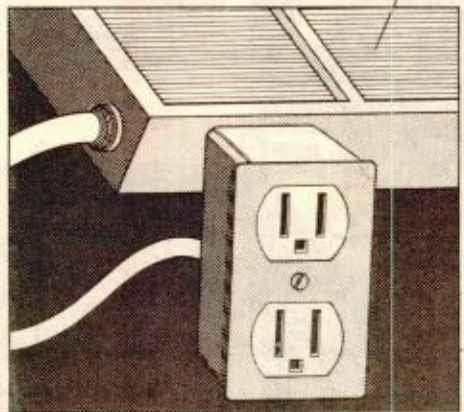

This is Boston Edison's new IMPACT 2000 House—a living laboratory of energy innovation.

Here, photovoltaic solar panels may generate 40%-50% of the future homeowners' electricity needs, while solar water panels will provide 80% (based on a family of four) of the hot water needs.

A Sun Shower:

Water flows through a series of solar collectors, absorbing heat directly from the sun. It is then stored in hot water tanks, until it's time for a sun shower.

Solar Electricity:

Photovoltaic cells, made of crystal silicon, convert sunlight directly into electricity. This technology has already been used to power NASA satellites.

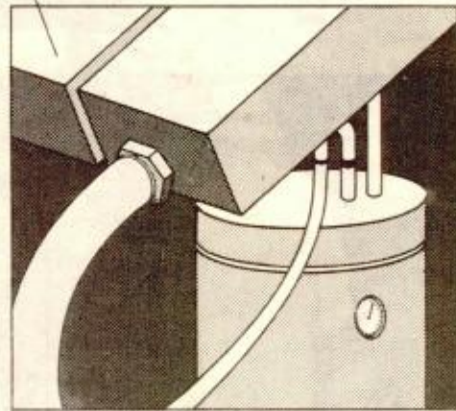

We've also incorporated a host of other energy technologies into the design of the House. Technologies that will help each of us save and produce more energy in the future.

That's why Boston Edison built the IMPACT 2000 House in the first place. We want to generate the information that will help us all lessen our dependence on foreign oil and use energy more wisely.

Information is power. And we want you to have all you need.

Voke Announces Changes In Banking Law

Representative Richard A. Voke is pleased to announce a bill which was passed by the legislature amending the state banking law to benefit elderly and minors has recently been signed into law by Governor Michael Dukakis.

The law, known as Chapter 230 of the acts of 1984, amends the state banking laws and states that no bank shall impose any fee, charge or assessment against the savings account or checking account of any persons sixty-five years of age or older or eighteen years of age or younger.

Representative explained, "the general trend in banking today is to not want to do business with small accounts. Consequently, banks are charging fees anywhere from $1 to $5 per month for savings accounts and upwards of $6 for checking accounts which do not maintain certain minimum balances. This practice by the banks was penalizing the elderly residents of the Commonwealth by subjecting them to the outrageous banking service charges and at the same time was discouraging the young people of today under the age of 18 from establishing savings accounts."

The Representative continued by saying that this new law prohibiting all state chartered banks in Massachusetts from charging minors or elderly customers fees on checking or savings accounts takes effect on October 11 and it is expected that federally chartered institutions which are not affected by the law will feel the competitive pressure from this legislation.

The Vacation

by Charlie McGonagle

The coins were spread across the kitchen table, silver sparkling above copper. The hoard was the result of two years of intensive savings on the part of O'Brien, his wife, and two children. On the dresser in the kids' small room rested a plastic poodle whose head nodded in appreciation upon the receipt of each coin which was dropped through a slot in his back. It was difficult to imagine how many times the poodle's head had bobbed up and down over the past twenty-four months, for many of the coins and a few of the dollar bills the girls had received from grandparents and other relatives had found their way to his insides.

He had been called Pluto, for they had hoped to redeem the contents of his body for a trip to Disney World. Passing months found him growing heavier from donations, and now the magic moment was upon them. The fruits of two years' savings would be reaped, their dreams realized.

In a kitchen cabinet, O'Brien had placed a one pound Maxwell House Coffee can. The plastic lid had been tightly taped to the can, and a slot large enough to accept contributions was cut in its middle. The coffee can was to O'Brien and his wife, as the poodle was to the kids.

The girls were six and eight years of age. A good portion of their lives had been dedicated to this project, and their excitement could not be hidden in the kitchen's dim light.

The paper on which O'Brien had listed the various expenses the family would encounter on their one week trip, glared at him from the table top.

The most practical plan he could find in his two year search had been offered by a downtown travel agency. Three hundred seventy-four dollars and ninety-five cents per person, double occupancy for adults, including airfare and hotel, and one hundred ninety-nine dollars per child under twelve, sharing the same room as the parents. All plans were plus fifteen percent tax and gratuities. If O'Brien's calculations had been made correctly, thirteen hundred twenty dollars and nine cents would be needed for plane fare and accommodations. In addition, he would need one hundred twenty dollars for admission to Disney World, thirty-two dollars for a day at "Wet and Wild", and a minimum of twenty-five dollars per day for meals, which would include a steady stream of McMuffins, McChicken, and burgers in place of the customary Big Mac. Transportation to and from Disney World and the airport would be provided by the hotel free of charge. With another one hundred dollars tucked away for incidentals, the bottom line on O'Brien's tally sheet totaled seventeen hundred forty-seven dollars and nine cents. It would be their goal.

"I've never seen so much money in my life," the older daughter exclaimed as the contents of the coffee can was poured atop Pluto's offering.

"Start with the pennies," O'Brien ordered. "We'll work our way up. Make piles of fifty. I'll wrap them."

Twenty minutes and much counting later, the pile of change had been cut nearly in half.

"Twenty-seven rolls, and seven extra pennies!", the younger daughter shouted.

O'Brien's proud grin was quickly replaced by a disappointed frown.

"Thirteen dollars and fifty-seven cents," he mumbled over and over.

"Oh well, let's get on with the nickels and dimes." After separating and wrapping the coins, leaving only quarters strewn across the table, the total had climbed quite undramatically, to one hundred twelve dollars and seven cents.

Four rolls of quarters and a sprinkling of assorted bills pushed the figure up another one hundred and eighty-four dollars. The grand total of the O'Brien's two year effort amounted to two hundred-six dollars and seven cents, a full fourteen hundred fifty-one dollars and two cents below their goal!

"Who the Hell put this in here?" O'Brien's disappointment could be felt in his words as he stared dejectedly at the bridge token.

"I don't even know how to get to the Mount Hope Bridge!"

The camping trip was hastily planned. Two years of savings would not go unrewarded. O'Brien would see to that.

The three hour drive to the mountains began beneath a beautiful sky of blue. Sunbeams danced across their faces creating smiles. Dreams of Disney World had been swept aside, at least temporarily, by the excitement of family's first camping trip.

The old wagon weaved itself through city traffic until, finally, it reached the open highway. The O'Brien's new found joy was reflected in song. The medley began with tunes the parents had learned from their parents and were now being passed down to another generation.

From "Heart Of My Heart" to "That Old Gang Of Mine" to "Casey" to "I've Been Working On The Railroad", the O'Brien's happily passed the miles. Soon the girls began to interject favorites from a repertoire of their own.

"My Name Is Michael, I've Got A Nickel, I've Got A Nickel Shiny And New...." "Windmills Of My Mind". He had heard them sing it together so often. It would always remind him of their childhood.

"Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head...."

They had been so enrapt in their singing, that they had not noticed the approaching clouds. The song's words were magnified as the first drop found O'Brien's windshield. Soon visibility along the highway was virtually non-existent, prompting O'Brien to take refuge at the next road side rest area.

"I'll be glad to get to the motel, O'Brien. Look at that rain. And the mud out there is ankle deep!"

The tent was to be a surprise. There was not supposed to be any rain, and the tent he had rented was to be an adventure for the entire family. Now, as he prepared himself to break the news, he knew it would be much more than an adventure.

"A tent? C'mon O'Brien, this is no time for jokes". There was more than a hint of concern in her voice as the Mrs. hoped that, in fact, it was a joke.

"Do they have toilets?"

"What?"

"Tents. Do they have toilets?"

The question came from one of the girls. It was something O'Brien had not even considered.

"No."

"No? They where do we, ah....?"

"Well, I guess there must be a place where everybody can, ah well, you know."

"Everybody?"

"Do they have a shower?"

"No."

"Dad?"

"Yeah?"

"What do tents have?"

His two daughters and the Mrs. caught his gaze as it shifted toward the rolled up sleeping bags. They were sure he had taken them only as added protection against the cool air that typified the August nights in the mountains. Now they realized the truth.

"Nothing, they have nothing. Not even beds or cots. We are going to sleep on the ground." There was panic in his wife's voice and the girls began to sob a bit. Their crying would continue for the next three days.

It was eight o'clock Sunday evening when the wagon pulled into the driveway. Home never looked so good. Along with many unpleasant memories, the O'Brien's had returned with one certain case of Poison Ivy, and bites from more mosquitoes than any of them know existed. Only the sounds of scratching had punctuated the silence during the three hour ride home, and not until the wagon's engine ceased its tired groaning, did the three day rainfall stop.

It would be a long time before they would talk to him again, of that he was certain. He dared not tell the Mrs. that he spend the entire two hundred ninety-six dollars and seven cents, plus another twenty he had hidden in his wallet.

Two years of saving for a three day nightmare.

Monday was trash day. Atop the heap outside the O'Brien home rested an old Maxwell House Coffee can and a little plastic dog whose head bobbed up and down in the soft summer breeze.

Course In Elementary Portuguese

Elementary Portuguese will be offered at Bunker Hill Community College's Division of Continuing Education this fall. Taught by Adalino Cabral, this three-credit course focuses on the controversial aspects of the language.

Portuguese is spoken by nearly 200 million people, explained Cabral. "It is a beautiful language; and like Italian and French, it is derived from Latin." Not only is Portuguese the primary language of Portugal and Brazil, it is also spoken in Angola, Mozambique, and in the India Islands.

Elementary Portuguese meets every Tuesday evening from 6:30 to 9:15 p.m. Evening classes begin on Monday, September 10. For more information about this and other fall semester classes, call the Division of Continuing Education at 241-8600, extension 444.

Attention A.F.D.C. Recipients

The University of Massachusetts is operating (contingent upon funding from the Bay State Skills Corporation) a Paralegal Training Program for A.F.D.C. recipients. This is a two semester program in which students will take courses in Legal Research, Reasoning, Substantive Law, Courts, Administrative Procedure, etc. and a reading and writing seminar. The program also offers career development seminars and tutoring.

A paralegal traditionally is someone who works as a lawyer's assistant doing research, compiling and filing documents, investigating facts, analyzing evidence and interviewing clients. People with the ability to perform these tasks also work in state agencies, corporate offices, hospitals, personnel departments and with advocacy groups.

All classes and seminars will be scheduled between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Attendance at each class and seminar is mandatory. Total class attendance time adds up to approximately 20 hours per week. It is further expected that students will spend at least three hours per week in the College library doing research for homework assignments. All total, participants are expected to commit no less than 25 hours per week. All students should be eligible for federal financial aid (Pell grants) to cover tuition, and books and materials are covered by the Program. Day Care and travel expenses are paid for through the Department of Public Welfare.

The Paralegal Training Program is run through the Law Center at the College of Public and Community Service at the University of Massachusetts' Downtown Center. The building is at 250 Stuart Street, two blocks from the Arlington Street subway station. Applicants should have good basic reading and writing skills; interest in law; willingness to give 25 hours a week to academic work. Application deadline is August 17. If you have questions, call Janet Grogan (956-1087 or 1080) or Regina Placid (956-1192).

Horseshoe Tourney

Well, the Third Annual Horseshoe Tournament is now history. Congratulations go to Steve "Bimba" Brennan and his father, "Rusty", for winning again for the third straight year.

I would also like to thank Jerry Suprey and Billy Delaney for helping to prepare the grounds; John "Melly" Kelley and J.A. for keeping score; and to all the neighbors and fans for braving the rain as the tournament wound down.

A special thanks also goes to Boston City Councillor Robert Travaglini for sponsoring this year's Tourney.

Again thank you all and see you next year.

Tournament Director,
Jeff Jones

In National Guard Training

SSGT. JOHN F. THOMPSON of Charlestown, recently returned from Fort Drum, New York, where he participated in two weeks annual training with the 26th (Yankee) Infantry Division, Massachusetts Army National Guard. Thompson is a career counselor with the 101st Infantry Battalion located in Reading. It's his job to retain qualified people in the Army National Guard. With more modern equipment and communications capabilities the emphasis is on keeping people in.

The Constitution

the Freedom Trail was prohibited from being painted in the Charlestown Navy Yard, a Boston National Historic Park. But after lengthy negotiation, the red line was permitted to connect Old Ironsides and the USS Constitution Museum, using a special non-permanent paint unlike what is used on the rest of the Trail.

The USS Constitution Museum was created in 1976 to house the artifacts of the great frigate after her restoration to an 1812 appearance. A private non-profit foundation, the museum tells Constitution's story in hands-on exhibits, audio-visual presentations, and special programs. The link between the museum, the oldest commissioned ship in the world, and the rest of Boston's historical sites by the Freedom Trail has been a long awaited event. Finally, the Red Line has made all its connections!

Drugs And Vandalism Topics Of Meeting

Travaglini told the tenants that while Deputy Joseph Saia, Boston Police Department, Area A, was aware of the problems which plague the area, the police were faced with the problems of limited funds, and manpower, not to mention lack of communication from the community.

The councillor suggested to the tenants the implementation of a security system similar to the one in CharlesNew-Town. "People have to put up the funds which police department does not have for additional security," said Travaglini.

One resident of Mishawum asked if there were any state or federal funds available to assist the tenants since there was no managerial support. "Don't they (the City and State) have a responsibility to us? Aren't there any laws to protect us from management?"

Paul Mattaliano, from Representative Voke's office, stated that he would research to see if there was state legislation which could aid the tenants.

While the drug traffic problems on Main Street are a major distress for the residents of the area, other problems such as "lack of human respect" by those who "hang in the area" is a greater problem stated residents.

"Isn't there any way we can put fear into these kids?" asked one woman.

Since the Mishawum area is technically private property, the police department can not patrol the area. Travaglini stated he felt a definite need for security within the grounds to drive the element into the streets, where the police can handle the situation.

Lieutenant Micky Roach, from the Community Disorder Unit of the BPD, emphasized repeatedly the importance of "documenting every incident."

"It has been my observation after 17 years on the force", stated Roach, "that if you want to see improvements, the one thing I have learned is to document."

Roach told the tenants to write their case in "the form of a good letter" and "outline the priorities" facing their area.

According to Roach, there was 176 calls from the area to the police since April which indicates "a definite problem". "I believe in putting things in writing. Document every incident and together we can make a clear presentation."

Travaglini agreed with Roach, but added "there is a need for the commitment of the management. We have to pool our resources, come up with a game plan. Unless we establish and position goals, prioritize problems, then we are only exchanging communication."

While many stated fear of retaliation by those who are creating the problem if they spoke out, one woman told the tenants, "We can all pinpoint the troublemakers. We can give names. We all know who they are."

Police Officer Jim Barry told the residents to continue calling the police and reporting incidents.

Travaglini told the residents, "You don't have to give your name, just the address of the problem."

One woman told the officials, "We need reassurance that our complaints are not going into the air."

The woman continued, "The general consensus here is 'Why bother? It's been like this for years.' People here don't think it will ever clear up. The Committee (Mishawum Tenants) was formed to show we do care and this place is not a slum and will not become one."

The Mishawum Tenants Area Committee will hold their next meeting on Thursday, August 9, 1984 at 7:00 p.m. at Mishawum Park Hall, 95 Dunstable Street. All interested persons are invited to register complaints and suggestions to improve area living conditions.
