Environmental Justice

Our mission is to empower individuals to take action about challenges facing our food and water systems through equity-based environmental education.

We All Need Food and Water is proud to be BIPOC-led. Our board chair is Latinx and one-third (two) of our six-member board are people of color.

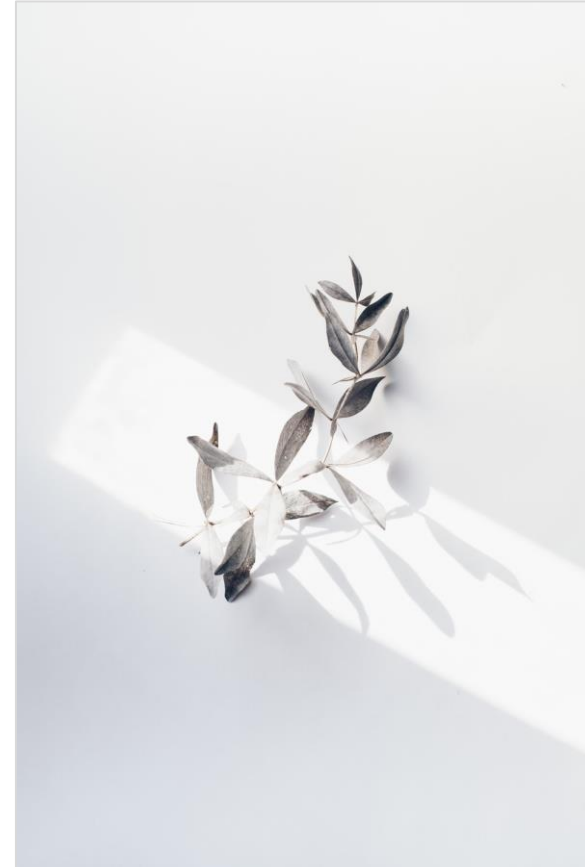

In addition, one-third of our partner teachers have been people of color and we are aiming to increase BIPOC leadership in our organization.

The name of our organization embraces equity as does our mission. We understand that equity is not achieved without justice.

Therefore, justice and equity are at the heart of everything we do. Since environmental equity is a basic human right, fair treatment and meaningful involvement of all people is essential.
