WRUP All DPS Players Are Sharks Edition

It's time to share a truth many MMO players don't know The truth is that all DPS players can be considered sharks. If you're wondering how many DPS are prone to the mantra of the holy "GOGOGO," it's because slowing down for a minute means they'll die. They're required to keep swimming and killing. This is what MMOs are doing to the sharks of the world. Don't think about how a shark is capable of playing or typing the game; just realize that a rogue who will not wait for the tank, the healer, or even the other DPS will do what they do. He is a shark.

One of the Massively staff members might be a shark, but I'm not able to confirm nor confirm or deny it. Maybe he or she will reveal his or his status in this week's WRUP. Or maybe it's just our normal roundup of our plans for the weekend. Be yourself; everyone else is already taken 's not clear until you read further, although you should share what you're doing in the comments section either way.

@Beau_Hindman I'm definitely playing more State of Decay. The game is amazing and is definitely one of my top choices for single-player games of the year. I'm currently playing MMORPGs. I'll be playing the most recent version of DC Universe Online and getting some action in Neverwinter. I consider Neverwinter to be among the most beautiful and beautiful sounding MMOs.

@nbrianna: I went back to World of Warcraft with a group of guildies. I'll be leveling some old toons and exploring some Pandaria dungeons I've never done. It's going to be enjoyable!

@Eliot_Lefebvre World of Warcraft is currently my side game slot. Although there are aspects that I am still not satisfied with, it is something I am enjoying. Beyond that, I've got a lot of Final Fantasy XIV questing and endgame events that I want to participate in, so that will be my main focus.

@Sypster I don't have any big plans for the weekend. I'm currently in the countdown mode for Lord of the Rings Online The Helm's Deep game, so I'll likely try to run a few more scenarios in The Secret World and perhaps explore a bit of this World of Warcraft thing the youngsters are all over these days.

@mvmatt: I have a weekend plan that includes soup, schoolwork and, if lucky video games. I'll be playing Warhammer Online, to remind myself why it was canceled and to reminisce about the wonderful things that almost kept it going until the servers shut down next month. In addition, I'd really like to spend some time with Guild Wars 2 and The Secret World which are both games which I've been neglecting for quite some time. Perhaps it's possible that I'll cap some fools in Battlefield 4.

@MikedotFoster - This weekend I'm checking out the Three Spirits Dota 2 Update. I'll also be back in World of Warcraft, as the Warlords of Draenor announcement has made me excited yet again.

@MJ_Guthrie - I'm planning to concentrate most my gaming time (and there will be some, sickness be damned!) trying to do more in the fight against Filth in The Secret World. I am a sucker for the pet and bee suit so strongly that I don't even know how to earn enough tokens. But I will try! Did I mention I am stubborn? When I'm not working, I'll be playing a couple of scenarios and testing new designs. I will also be spending the weekend trying out various races to be my new Channeler in EverQuest II. I've narrowed it down to Ratonga and Kerra. After that, it will take me only 30 hours to personalize the appearance. Then there's the name thing...

@RichieProcopio - This weekend I'll be intoxicated. No I'm not attending the frat house, but I'll be paying the tower of dreams an appearance in Guild Wars 2 and see what Scarlet and her new serpentine friends have been up to in Kessex Hills. Oh, and Hearthstone!

Every weekend, we meet up with Massively staff members to ask them "What are your top games?" (Otherwise known as: WRUP!) Join us to see what we're up to in and out of game. And, be sure to join us in the comments to tell us what you're playing, too!