The funny thing is that the buyers weren't committing much money in the first place. All they had to do was complete a reservation. Typically, $5,000 to $10,000 was enough to hold a place in line for a $500,000 condominium. The reservation was non-binding and the buyer could cancel at any time. Once the developer was ready to start construction, the buyers needed to come up with chứng chỉ tư vấn quản lý dự án

a total of 10% cash and obtain an irrevocable letter of credit for 10% from their bank. These were fairly easy to get at the time. So to summarize, $50,000 would put you in line for a $500,000 purchase.

Always get your full quote in writing and scrutinize it carefully to make sure it is the same as the deal you were originally promised. It is not uncommon for a lender to try to palm you off with less good terms than advertised.

The construction site should also be clean. It should not have garbage and all kinds of rubbish that the crew throws there. The duty of the entire crew is to clean up the mess daily, especially before they leave the construction site. This would greatly help them to speed up their work and stay safe too. A clean place would create a better working environment for everyone and also leaves no scope for confusion.
