Through TikTok, this generation enjoys discovering new concepts and hobbies. The vast majority of Gen Z shoppers (97%) claim that social media is now their primary source of inspiration for purchases. They are therefore the ideal audience for companies trying to increase their channel following, as they are always on the lookout for new accounts to monitor. They should be aware of your brand. Any business can set up a branded hashtag challenge that allows users of TikTok to generate video and promote their brand on their behalf. If you approach existing well-known creators and give them money to make a video for your challenge, this works incredibly well. You'll increase your audience and obtain access to their devoted and active following. Views on Walmart's first-day wardrobe hashtag challenge for return to school are amazing!

You must produce material especially for your target audience after you've identified who they are. Even though gaining more TikTok followers is your ultimate goal, creating content for your target audience should also be educational and entertaining in order to build genuine relationships. Seeking followers should not be done just for the purpose of obtaining followers. The people who are interested in your brand, goods, and services are the ones you want as followers. If your millions of followers aren't interested in advancing through your marketing funnel, they won't be of any assistance to you.
