No doubt that uniform clothing also needs regular and on time cleaning routine from their owners as well. Check out this easy method and if you do have clothing collection then we are sure that this easy cleaning technique can make your life easier.

Removing Factory Grease from your Clothing:

First you need to have in hand a lint-free cloth so that you can remove all sorts of factory grease from that particular clothing of yours. It always happens that whenever you are going to purchase an embroidery fabric from any of the shop producer it will always have a thick kind of coating of oil or thick sort of coating of grease on it. So as soon as you will get your purchased tokaido clothing then you should immediately and right away remove that grease by using a lint-free cloth, be it a cotton cloth as well. You should be wiping your clothing in the form of straight and one-directional strokes so that you might not get an injury. You should be moving from the bottom and then move towards the tip of your clothing item.

Using a rice paper to clean up Clothing:

If you do have hard clothing fabric then you can make use of a rice paper to clean them up. Do not use these lint-free cotton cloths if you have purchased machine fabric from market. For a cheap alternative, you can for sure use coffee filters.

Application of lacquer thinner

In order to remove some stubborn sort of gunk from your fabric then you can do the application of lacquer thinner on them. Note that using lint-free cloth might not be enough to remove and eliminate this dirt and dust as well as gunk from your clothing. You only have to pour down little amount of lacquer thinner and then you can rub down that gunk off. While applying lacquer thinner, you should be in the same and uniform straight and one-directional motions. Then you can use another one lint-free cloth so that you can easily remove rest of the lacquer thinner. Let it dry for some time.
