“I like to fashion myself as the Walmart greeter of sex ed.”

—Shannon Boodram, @shanbody

When Shannon Boodram, a sexologist, author, and YouTuber, started out, “my mom said boys were going to masturbate to my work,” she says. “Now she’s my biggest supporter.” And about this picture? The matching necklaces are actually vibrators. “My partner and I wear them to say, ‘I’m not ashamed of what makes me feel good.’ It works for us, and I always try to represent myself in an accessible way, but you shouldn’t look at somebody else as a sexual-empowerment role model. Instead, it should be: “That’s cool, they figured out what works for them, now I feel empowered to see what works for me.” —A.L.G.

Facebook has ordered an additional 12 episodes of “Make Up or Break Up,” a live relationship show hosted by social influencer and “sexologist” and author Shannon Boodram (aka Shan Boody) — the first original show funded by the social platform to get an extension.

The show, which airs Thursdays at 8 p.m. ET/ 5 p.m. PT on Facebook (at facebook.com/makeupbreakupshow), features Boodram counseling couples at a critical juncture in their relationship to determine if they should stay together — or call it quits — in front of a live studio audience. The added wrinkle: Facebook viewers of vote live on

Sex Expert Shan Boodram: "I Dare You To Find a More Intriguing Way to Describe Your Outfit Than: "It Vibrates."

I dare you to find a more intriguing way to describe your outfit than: "It vibrates."

For the past three years of my life I've been saying these two words to strangers, friends, and even a suspicious Secret Service team at a Hillary Clinton event. My vibrator necklace is a metallic, bullet-like pendant that has been mistaken for a pen, vile, whistle, portable urn, railroad spike, and lip gloss. If I don't want you to know what it is, you won't, which is one of the things I love most about it: Like a woman's sexuality, it's my choice who gets to share in the mystery.

But usually, I choose to share it with anyone who inquires (which people often do) for the same reasons I choose to wear the Vesper in the first place—awareness, acknowledgement, community ... and cuteness!

As expected, the VMAs red (or white, rather) carpet featured some of the biggest names in music, decked out in some of the most amazing looks: Beyoncé slayed in Scognamiglio, Ashley Graham dazzled in Naeem Khan, and Nicki Minaj stunned in Bao Tranchi. But one VMA attendee donned a new and surprising name: Trojan. Yes, you read that right: YouTube star and clinical sexologist Shannon Boodram graced the red carpet in none other than a custom-made Trojan condom dress.
