Understanding Your FICO® Score

What's hurting your FICO® score

Because your FICO® score is exceptionally high, there are no actionable negative factors present with your score. Continue to manage your credit as you currently are doing to maintain your very high FICO® score.

What's helping your FICO® score

The positive factors listed here reflect areas of your credit behavior that are helping your FICO® Score. You should continue these good practices. These factors are listed in order of their impact to your score; the first has the greatest positive impact and the last has the least.

1 You have no missed payments on your credit accounts.

The FICO® Score evaluates if there are any missed payments being reported. Staying current and paying bills on time demonstrate lower credit risk.

Number of your accounts with a missed payment or derogatory description
0 accounts

★ About 98% of FICO High Achievers have no missed payments at all. But of those who do, the missed payment happened nearly 4 years ago, on average.

2 You've limited the use of your available revolving credit.

FICO® Scores evaluate the total revolving account balances in relation to the total credit limits on those accounts. People who keep their ratio of balances to credit limits low pose less risk to lenders than those with higher ratios.

Ratio of your revolving balances to your credit limits

★ For FICO High Achievers, the average ratio of the revolving account balances to the credit limits is less than 7%.

3 You have an established credit history.

FICO® Scores measure the age of the oldest account and the average age of all accounts being reported. Generally speaking, having a relatively long credit history and not opening many new accounts is reflective of lower risk.

Your oldest account was opened
30 Years, 8 Months ago

★ FICO High Achievers opened their oldest account 25 years ago, on average.

Average age of your accounts
12 Years, 5 Months

★ Most FICO High Achievers have an average age of accounts of 9 years or more.

4 You've shown recent use of credit cards and/or open-ended accounts.

FICO® Scores evaluate the mix of credit cards, installment loans and mortgages. People who demonstrate recent and responsible use of credit cards and/or open-ended accounts are generally considered less risky to lenders.

How Lenders See You

A FICO® Score of 835 is well above average. Most lenders would consider scores in this range as excellent, and an indication that you are an exceptional borrower. Based on your score alone, you might expect the following:

- It is very unlikely your application for credit cards or for a mortgage or auto loan would be turned down, based on your score alone.
- You should be able to obtain relatively high credit limits on your credit card.
- Most lenders will consider offering you their most attractive and most competitive rates.
- Many lenders will also offer you special incentives and rewards targeted to their "best" customers.

The rates you'll receive

When you apply for a loan, lenders will look at one or more of your FICO® scores. Your score directly determines the interest rate you'll pay on your loan. Check the table below to see the current rates you would receive.

Average interest rates based on your FICO® score of 835

36 month auto loan	3.64%	48 month used auto loan	4.372%
60 month auto loan	3.705%

Using a 30 year fixed mortgage as an example, your FICO® score might qualify you for an interest rate of 3.449%. Someone with a FICO® score of 630 might receive a rate of 5.038%. On a $250,000 mortgage, you would save more than $232 a month compared to a person who has a relatively poor score. So it's vitally important that you keep your score high.

Your risk to the lender

The reason consumers with good FICO® scores get better interest rates is because they pose less risk of missing payments or defaulting on a loan. The chart at the right clearly shows that consumers with high FICO® scores are lower risk. The power of the FICO® score to predict which borrowers are risky is one reason why so many lenders use FICO® scores in making loan decisions.

Most lenders would consider consumers with a score of 835 to be extremely low risk because approximately 1% of consumers in this score interval get into serious credit trouble.

The risk rate shown here is the percentage of borrowers who reach 90 days past due or worse (bankruptcy, account charge-off) on any credit account over a two-year period.

Credit At-A-Glance

Now let's look at your credit report. Your credit report contains the information that a credit bureau keeps on file about you. This is the information used to determine your FICO® score. Three credit bureaus in the United States keep information on you – Equifax, Experian and TransUnion – so you have a total of three credit reports and three FICO® scores.

On the next several pages we'll look at your credit report from TransUnion.

Worst Delinquency

None Reported
The Worst Delinquency reports the worst missed payment status that has been documented on this account. Your FICO® score evaluates how recently that missed payment occurred and in general, the more recent, the more impact it has on your score. However, the fact that it occurred is still predictive of future payment risk and could be considered by your FICO® score.

Inquiries

An inquiry indicates when a business, usually a lender, has checked your credit. The inquiries listed here are the number of times in the 12 months since the date of this report that a lender has checked your credit at TransUnion. These inquiries appear because you applied for credit with the listed company. Inquiries associated with applying for new credit are the only kind of inquiry that may hurt your FICO® score.

You have no inquiries affecting your FICO® score.

Inquiries listed here are requests by lenders to view your credit report because you have applied for credit with them. Having many inquiries can hurt your FICO® score, because that might be a sign that you are in a financial situation where you need credit. A single inquiry, however, will have little impact on your score.

Three other kinds of inquiries do not affect your FICO® score and are not listed here. One occurs when lenders search for consumers that might qualify for pre-approved credit. Another occurs when you request to view your own credit report, such as when ordering products on myFICO. Other inquiries that do not affect your score are any inquiries used for purposes other than granting credit, such as an inquiry requested by a landlord. Note: In general, inquiries contribute to less than 10% of your FICO® score.

Collections

If you do not make your required payments on an account, a business may turn over the unpaid account to a collection agency. This is called a collection. The presence of collections can hurt your FICO® Score.

Public Records

Public records are legal records reported on you, usually by a court of law. Adverse public records include bankruptcies, foreclosures, garnishments, and tax liens and they can severely hurt your FICO® score. Other types of public records such as divorces are not considered by your FICO® score.
