Lighting Ceremonies Mark The Opening Of The Schrafft Center

by Marianne Martin

Landmarks are often taken for granted by those who are so familiar with the area, but a funny thing happens when these seemingly insignificant objects are gone — they are sadly missed. Such was the case with the clock on the front tower of the former Schrafft's Candy Factory in Sullivan Square.

For generations, the clock was a symbol of the factory, which served as a principle employer for many Charlestown families, however, as the economy tightened and candy sales declined, so did the jobs at Schrafft's, until in May 1984 the candy factory was forced to close her doors forever. And the clock stopped.

The Flatley Company of Braintree investigated the possibility of renovating the mammoth building into a first-of-its-kind multi high tech research and development center for the City of Boston. After negotiations with Mayor Raymond Flynn, the company purchased the 16 acre building for $2 million dollars in July 1984. To mark what The Flatley Company called "the beginning of a new era" for The Schrafft Center, Thomas J. Flatley, President of the company which bears his name, invited members of the high tech community,

Carol Bratley Named Manager Of Real Estate Advisory Services

Carol Bratley of Charlestown has been named Manager of Real Estate Advisory Services in the Boston office of Laventhol & Horwath, it was announced by David Love, Managing Partner.

CAROL BRATLEY

Real Estate Advisory Services compliment the accounting, auditing, tax and management advisory services of Laventhol & Horwath's full range of consulting services to middle-market businesses and assists individuals and companies making real estate development or investment decisions. The firm has more than fifty offices throughout the United States, and through its overseas organization, Horwath & Horwath International, the firm is represented in more than seventy countries throughout the world.

Bratley has managed a full-service real estate consulting practice in a Boston area commercial bank since 1982. She brings broad experience in evaluating the visibility of a wide variety of real estate projects nationwide. These include new or proposed and existing mixed-use developments, residential projects, commercial and retail facilities, research and developable land, and numerous special use developments.

Bratley received her bachelor's degree from Brown University, Phi Beta Kappa, in 1966 and her master's degree from the Sloan School of Management at MIT in 1981. She is active in a number of cultural and civic activities and has published in Bankers & Tradesman.

The Charlestown Preservation Society will hold its next monthly meeting on Sunday, December 1, 1985 at 7:30 p.m. at the First Baptist Church Hall, 5 Monument Square. The featured speaker will James English of the Boston Redevelopment Authority. He will have with him Dean Stratoule of the the Congress Group, Paul Davis of Immobiliare New England, Charles Weigle of The Architect's Collaborative, Joseph Timilty of Frontier Enterprises, and Joseph Hennefield of Housing Associates. The main topic of the meeting will be a discussion with English, and those with him, of present development projects in Charlestown as well as proposals for future development.

The Preservation Society is hosting English as a first

Navy Yard Development To Be Topic Of Preservation Society Meeting

step in a renewed effort to learn more about what is presently going on in the Navy Yard and other BRA sites around Charlestown. It is hoped that he will not only be able to answer specific questions about different projects, but that he will let us know what the BRA is thinking and doing about Charlestown for the future and how community involvement can best be assured in the development process.

The Society feels that so many projects have been begun, so many have been announced and there are so many possibilities for the future, all having substantial effect on Charlestown, that it is necessary not only to get an update from English, but to begin thinking about the most effective way to insure community input into the process. Some projects in the Navy Yard have made great progress with little or no community input at all. This is a situation that cannot be allowed to continue or the community will lose control of its destiny and the character of the neighborhood will be changed forever.

All members of the Society and the whole Charlestown community are cordially invited to attend. Bring your questions and concerns so that you may learn more and so that you may become involved in a renewed and exciting community effort.

CURB APPEAL

When prospective buyers pull up in front of your home, their first impression will be crucial. Many of our customers call us from "For Sale" signs, and they're more likely to call on your home if it has a terrific exterior. If a house has peeling paint, a shaggy yard, and droopy shutters, the buyers may resist going inside. Even if they do go in, their negative first impressions could color their feelings about the rest of the house, even if the interior does meet their criteria. This is why "Curb Appeal" is so important. Before marketing your home, check the exterior paint and trim. If the house does need painting, get it done as soon as possible, and complete any exterior carpentry work that may be needed. Keep your lawn mowed and trim the shrubbery. A few flowers can also help dress up your exterior. A cared-for exterior will help your home give the impression that it has been well served before buyers even set one foot inside the front door. It will make buyers feel positive about the property from the first moment they see it.

If you're thinking of putting your home on the market, calling Century 21 Silva Realty Associates is a good first step. Our agents can give you good ideas about some simple fix-ups that will help your property sell quickly and for top dollar. Our phone number is 242-7470, or stop by our offices at 142 Main Street, Charlestown.

Each office is independently owned and operated.

THANKS GOD

A laugh, a sense of humor
Is a real necessity
Along life's puzzling pathway
A sure cure for adversity
When things go wrong, remember
It doesn't always rain
Sunshine will come smiling thru
To drive away the pain
This life is full of struggles
Most of them-up-hill
And you can ease the battle
If you, but have the will
When things go wrong, nothing's right
Life seems very sad
Go find something to laugh at
And things won't seem so bad
How many times have our problems
Seemed to us so tragic
And later on we laughed at them
In laughter there is magic
Your sense of humor never lose
Its a mighty precious gift
I thank you God, for the many times
It gave me, that needed lift.

al Highway Administration, will continue through 1987. As historic archaeologists from Public Archaeology Laboratory, Inc. enter the last few weeks of uncovering City Square Archaeological District, 17th and 18th tavern life unfolds.

Long's Ordinary, also known as Three Cranes Tavern, and formerly the Great House built for Governor Winthrop in 1629, appears to have foundation walls measuring 20 by 40 feet. The building's front orientation is to the water and typically faces the south. A large off center chimney sits between the kitchen and great hall (called such because it was the main living space). Underneath the hall is a small wine cellar with a brick floor enclosed by interior stone partitions. The tavern's first owner, Robert Long, may have constructed the wine cellar below the floor boards in 1648, at the time that it is recorded that he bought a license to sell wines. No structural or material evidence has surfaced to represent the chambers or bedrooms listed above the great hall and kitchen in the probate records.

The deed of the Long's house, constructed by 1682, reads that it has "a little kitchen, a parlor, a parlor chamber, a kitchen chamber and a low room in the entry between the tavern and the other dwelling house." Location and preliminary measurements of the foundations suggest that the structure was very small, probably 20 by 20 feet. However, a cellar hole has been excavated to the rear of the building indicating a small attached wing, possibly the kitchen.

Other foundations on the site seem to be five, maybe six privies. All are located on the west side near a fence line that may correspond to the lot line. Typically, out-houses are utilitarian small wood buildings located as close to the dwelling house as was aesthetically and conveniently possible. When it was necessary to dig a new pit, the building was often dismantled and reused. The number of years that the privy was occupied relates to its construction and its use. The tavern and Long house lot were subdivided to include four other dwellings in the 18th century, such that the excavated privies could have been associated with any one of the buildings or possibly more than one.

Their construction varies somewhat, with pits that range in depth from four to ten feet and stone foundations with or without wood interior linings. To date, the largest, intact artifacts have been found in the deepest privy. Once the privy was abandoned, it was filled in all at once with dirt and unwanted domestic objects. Among the items dating between 1730 and 1760 were a wooden dish, two iron pots, chamber pots, wine bottles, olive oil jars, ale jugs, and redware bowls. Large fragments representing other household wares were also removed: glass wine goblets, plates, bowls, cups, and saucers in English earthenwares, German stoneware, Charlestown redware, and Chinese export porcelain.

Even though the City Square site has always been thought to be the location of

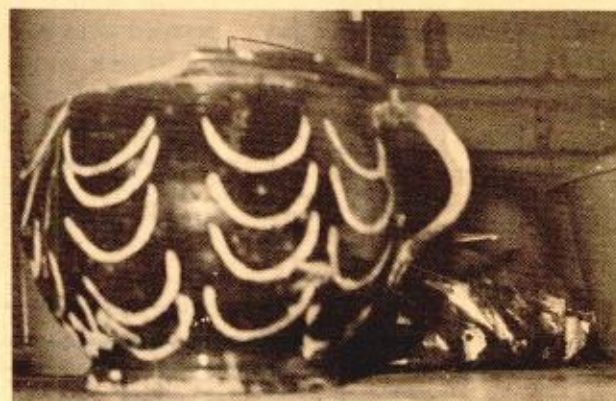

The Great House / Three Cranes Tavern, its exact dimensions and ground plan were not known. The foundations of the 1629 building are the only archaeological record of Governor Winthrop's short occupation in Charlestown. Its importance lies in the fact that the founders of the Massachusetts Bay Colony sought and obtained a royal charter granting them full powers over this new settlement. The Charlestown site was more than a trading or fishing outpost, as its forerunners along the New England coast had been. Though Governor Winthrop relocated to Boston, Charlestown assumed a prominent role as an early English town and colonial seaport.

Future excavations planned for Spring 1986 will examine how the businesses in the 1630s and 1640s expanded and required wharves, storehouses, shops, and market places. Four pottery sites along the 17th century waterfront, the first Town Dock and Dry Dock will be investigated.

The Lights Go On Again At The Schrafft Center

tech skilled and semiskilled positions, especially those who lost their jobs when Schrafft's Candy and the Revere Sugar companies closed their doors last year. While there is the commitment to create new jobs for residents and the community will be a source of future employees for those high pany the opportunity to expand. Hayes and his wife, Karen, began Fotec, Inc. in the basement of their Charlestown home, but due to the growing market for their products, were forced to seek larger quarters in the South End, which they quickly outgrew. The move back to Charlestown, stated Hayes, "has been great for us." In fact, Fotec has increased their employee base by 25 percent. Hayes compared Fotec to other small, but growing high tech companies which began in Boston, however, "unlike other companies who grew up and moved to the suburbs, Fotec chose to stay."

Hayes echoed many of Flatley's original reasons for purchasing the facility in his decision to locate Fotec in the center, that is, "location, location, location." The center offers proximity to Downtown Boston without high rents, to highways leading in all directions, to Logan International Airport, but most important, to the MBTA, since most of Fotec's employees live within three miles of the center.

The tenant also praised Flatley for having both the "farsightedness" and "insightfulness" in accommodating not only the high tech field of today, but also allowing the freedom for the needs of tomorrow.

As a resident, Hayes was pleased to see the creation of new jobs without displacement of neighbors or other businesses. "All in all, this is very good and important to the city as a whole."

Raymond L. Flynn and Thomas J. Flatley turned the switch that illuminated the famous Charlestown landmark.

THOMAS J. FLATLEY, President of The Flatley Company which is the owner and developer of The Schrafft Center, acted as Master of Ceremonies for the recent "Lights Go On Again" Ceremony at the Sullivan Square landmark. Flatley praised the Charlestown community and stated that the community will become very much a part of The Schrafft Center. Shown (l. to r.) Mayor Raymond L. Flynn, Flatley, and James Hayes.

The theme, "The Lights Go On Again", while symbolizing more than the fact that the building will be occupied again, also symbolized the promise of returned economic growth to Boston and to the residents of Charlestown. Flatley pledged, "The community will become very much a part of The Schrafft Center. I can't speak highly enough about the people of Charlestown." The facility will provide many residents with economic opportunities as before, but Flatley warned the new center will be a different kind of employer than was the facility of yesterday.

tech companies moving into the new center, Flatley stated there is also the commitment to create a self-contained facility which will offer both company amenities just not found in many complexes in Boston, at rents below current Boston market rates. Among the extras offered at The Schrafft Center will be a health club, a professionally staffed daycare center, and a HMO — all within the former power plant. In the main building, Flatley will construct a restaurant, a corporate theater, and conference rooms, as well as retail space.

Flatley introduced the first

"There once was a time," according to Flatley, "when parents would say to their children, 'Either you get out of bed, and get ready for school, or you'll work at Schrafft's the rest of your life.' But now they'll have to say, 'You better stay in school or you'll never get into Schrafft's.'"

Presently, The Flatley Company is working closely with the Bunker Hill Community College in a special job training program for residents interested in high guest speaker at the ceremony, who appropriately enough was not only the first tenant in the center, but also a resident of Charlestown. James Hayes, President of Fotec, Inc., a leading manufacturer of test equipment for laboratory, biomedical, and industrial fiber optics, addressed the gathering as a man wearing two hats — one as a businessman and the other as a resident. As a businessman, Hayes stated the move to The Schrafft Center has afforded the com-

ALEX JENKINS, President of Orion Research, related the history of his company's move to Charlestown in The Schrafft Center. He pointed out the amenities offered at this site and noted that the Center will "become a cornerstone of the Charlestown community and economy." Shown (l. to r.) James Hayes, President of Fotec; Mayor Raymond L. Flynn; Jenkins; and Thomas Flatley, President of The Flatley Company.

The second speaker was the President of the first major tenant in the center, Alex Jenkins of Orion Research Inc. Flatley told the audience he had good feelings about the Orion Research Inc. because theirs was a company whose interests "parallel my own. This is a good company, not only for the 1980s, but also for the 1990s."

Jenkins told the gathering that Orion was proud to be a part of the new Schrafft Center, which will be "a cornerstone of the Charlestown community and economy." This will be the first time in 20 years that Orion Research will be housed in the same location, stated Jenkins. However, when Orion first began their search for larger quarters, they had one criteria — their new home had to be located on the "T". "Over time, we became very impressed with the other amenities," added Jenkins, referring to the shuttle bus between The Schrafft Center and the MBTA, the daycare center, the theater and meeting rooms, all of which came complete with a special "ambience and flavor", not found in other locations.

Flatley stressed his commitment to the Charlestown community. "It is very important that we become a part of Charlestown," stated Flatley, "because we plan to years ago," read Flatley who jokingly referred to his birth in Ireland. "Imagine that, I've only been in this country 30 years, what does that make me? I hope to be at least an honorary 'Townie' after this."

CHARLESTOWN RESIDENT Lois Maher is congratulated by Mayor Raymond L. Flynn as Thomas J. Flatley looks on. Maher had sent a letter to Flatley commending him for the work being done on the Sullivan Square landmark and praising him for flying "Old Glory" from the top of the building. Flatley, in turn, invited Maher as a guest at the recent Champagne Reception and read her letter to the gathering.

He continued reading, "How can I begin to describe the thrill I felt when I looked out my kitchen window and saw the 'Stars and Stripes' flying so high and so proudly ... You have enriched my inner life, Mr. Flatley. It is and will continue to be a source of pride and joy to see 'Old Glory' everyday from the vantage point of my own home."

Inviting Maher to the podium, Flatley shook the resident's hand and held her letter in the other, and said "This is the kind of stuff that makes our day. This is what it's all about."

Prior to the lighting ceremonies, Mayor Flynn spoke on behalf of the City of Boston in what he considered a new economic opportunity for the people of Charlestown and the city as a whole. Flynn began with a comparison of himself and Flatley. Despite growing up on different sides of the Atlantic Ocean, the two shared a common understanding of the importance of jobs to the family stability. "We must encourage the kids not here, who are maybe standing on Bunker Hill Street, to stay in school. There are economic opportunities for them (here in Charlestown)."

MAYOR RAYMOND FLYNN

Flynn stated the "real heroes" of the new Schrafft Center were the residents of Charlestown, for it was the community which supported the proposal. In return, Flynn stated the center will bring money into the community, as well as emphasize "the confidence we have in the community of Charlestown."

"We are very proud," continued Flynn, who then challenged the gathering to "search high and low for another city in America where high tech jobs are available in a city, especially in an urban setting. They would be hard pressed to find what they can find here in Boston."

Mayor Flynn, along with

Tom Flatley, then hit a generator switch illuminating the structure with giant flood lights, all of which was witnessed by the guests by means of a video display.

Then, as the facade of the new Schrafft Center became aglow, the famous clock began once again and as Flatley promised, the clock "will go on forever more."

Columbus / Savio Clash Returns To East Boston Stadium

by Bob DeCristoforo, Athletic Director
 "Home Sweet Home" is the popular line at Christopher Columbus High School and Dom Savio High School this week as "THE GAME" is back at East Boston Stadium after a two year road show. After extensive field renovations, East Boston Stadium is ready to host another Thanksgiving Day battle between the two fine schools.

It is interesting to note that four Super Bowl berths have been captured in this relatively young rivalry on Thanksgiving Day. While the stakes are high in this contest, the bragging rights for one more year are up for grabs and "THE GAME" continues to be the top contest on both teams' Catholic Central League Schedule.

Alumni, family, friends, and just sports-hungry fans should flock to this Inner City rivalry, as it probably is the easiest game to get to. Directions are: Go through the Tunnel from the Boston side or MBTA it on the Blue Line via Airport Station. This should get you there in plenty of time for the 10:00 a.m. kickoff.

In addition to "THE GAME" Championship Trophy, each team will have a Game MVP. This is the first time these awards will be given.

Christopher Columbus High School and Dom Savio High School would like to take this opportunity to "Thank" all those who have contributed to make this game a very special success, and also to wish everyone a very joyous Thanksgiving Day. We hope that each of you will be as happy as we are this week.

Wallace Returns For Second Season On Suffolk Team

Suffolk University's varsity winter sports teams swing into action for the 1985-86 season this past week.

In basketball, this could be the year that Jim Nelson's team breaks the .500 mark. After five straight losing seasons, Suffolk hoopsters finished 12-12 last winter handing 10-year coach Nelson his 100th victory in the final game against Rhode Island College.

Nelson greeted returning starters — Leo Fama, a senior from Medford, who averaged 20.8 points per game a year ago; swingman Dean Coletti of Quincy, who averaged 13.8 points and had 87 assists last season and point guard Rick Hayes of Revere, the team sparkplug. Transfer Mike Slattery, a forward from Somerville, freshman guard Dan Anglin of Brockton and sixth man Jerry Wallace, a 6'4" forward from Charlestown, will complement the returning starters.

Facts About Drugs — F.A.D.

With a great deal of reverence and respect, I want to write about Narcotics Anonymous.

N.A. is a non-profit fellowship of men and women for whom drugs had become a major problem. These people, who are all ages, meet regularly to help each other stay clean from drugs of any sort. The men and women who live the 12 Step Program of N.A. are living proof that it is possible to overcome the desire to use drugs.

There are as many reasons to use drugs as there are to use alcohol (which is also a drug). N.A. has people who know all the reasons and have become addicted. This addiction can happen to anyone, but the lucky addicts are the ones that find recovery in N.A. Many addicts have tried to overcome their addiction by themselves and sometimes temporary relief was possible. But it was usually followed by an even deeper involvement.

Addiction is a progressive disease, like diabetes. The allergy is to drugs. The end of this disease is always the same: Jails, institutions, or death. Recovery can begin in N.A. As a person abstains from all drugs, he/she comes face to face with feelings that are new and surprising and sometimes disturbing. The fellowship is there for sharing these new feelings and to get help in working them through.

The program consists of the 12 Steps, new friends, sponsors, the slogans and meetings. Each one of these tools provides the person with the help needed as he moves to a new and more meaningful life. The program offers hope. All you have to bring with you is the desire to stop using and the willingness to try this new way of life.

There is a new N.A. meeting in Charlestown. For further information, call Mimi White, at the Charlestown Clubhouse, 242-1775. An office serving the need of N.A. will be opening in January.

"Paper Route To College" Scholarship Program For Newspaper Carriers

In a major new development which will affect thousands of young people in metropolitan Boston, The Boston Globe has established a unique, college scholarship program for Globe newspaper carriers, effective January 1, 1986.

The Boston Globe "Paper Route To College" scholarship program will provide one-year's full tuition, up to a maximum of $5,000, for any Globe newspaper carrier who satisfactorily delivers The Globe for three consecutive years in a home-delivery route.

Scholarships are not new incentives for newspaper carriers, but The Globe's program goes far beyond any now in existence, according to the Millard G. Owen, Globe vice president for marketing and sales.

"The Globe program is unique in two ways," said Owen. "First, any carrier who meets the requirements is eligible; and second, $5,000 is a much greater amount than any previous or current carrier scholarship program."

"The Paper Route To College program is a natural extension and new level of The Globe's commitment to the education and development of our youth," continued Owen. "For more than 35 years, we've been sponsoring academic and athletic programs to encourage scholastic excellence in young people in the Commonwealth. Now, for a job well done as a newspaper carrier, we can provide what we think is substantial, educational assistance to a group of people who are very important to The Globe."

Basic requirements of the program are that the carrier must be at least 12 years of age, live in an area where The Globe is home delivered, and perform three consecutive years of satisfactory home-delivery service of The Globe. The scholarship, which may be used at a school of the carrier's choice, will be paid directly to the school and is in addition to the regular compensation carriers receive for delivering the newspaper.

As do other scholarship programs, The Boston Globe's Paper Route to College has clearly defined rules and regulations regarding eligibility, participation, and requirements of the program. For details on The Paper Route To College program, contact The Boston Globe Circulation Department at 929-2222.

Marie Hubbard To Be Honored By Governor

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Alan Mackey announced that Marie Hubbard of Charlestown has been chosen to receive a Commonwealth Citation for Outstanding Performance and will be honored by Governor Michael S. Dukakis at the second annual "Pride in Performance" awards dinner to be held on December 10th at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel.

Hubbard, who has been with the agency for 12 years, is head clerk, and secretary to title division director Richard Coburn, who described her as "vital link in the overall success of the Registry's title division." He added, "her cooperation and loyalty to co-workers helps the process of issuing vehicle titles move along very smoothly."

Aside from her role as assistant to the director, Hubbard handles most title complications which may arise at the 37 branch offices of the Registry, she works to obtain titles in emergency situations and assists fellow employees with questions regarding Registry policy.

"Marie Hubbard is an asset to the Registry," Mackey said, "Her knowledge, loyalty to the agency, and ability to deal with people in a courteous and professional manner makes her a key employee ... someone the taxpayers can be proud of," he added.

The Commonwealth Citation for Outstanding Performance is awarded to selected employees or groups of employees in each executive department agency who have demonstrated exemplary work performance. Selections are made by the agency head on the basis of nominations received from the Commonwealth's employees. From those awarded the citation, no more than ten employees or groups who show the highest standards will be chosen to receive the Manuel Carballo Governor's Award for Excellence in Public Service.

A whole new route for kids to take to college.

Introducing The Boston Globe's Paper Route to College... $5,000 Scholarship Program.

With tuition prices going up more and more every year, the prospect of sending kids to college is getting worse every day.

That's why The Boston Globe has just developed The Paper Route to College Scholarship Program.

We're asking kids ages 12 and older to give us three consecutive years of delivering The Globe. And in turn we're giving them up to $5,000 toward one-year's tuition at an accredited school or college.

They'll also earn lots of other incentives along the way. Things like money for the papers they deliver, probably tips during the holidays, a radio, a trip to Disney World, a bike.

If you, or someone you know, would be interested, simply send in the coupon below for more information. We'll get a question and answer booklet out to you as soon as possible.

And before you know it your kids will be on a whole new route to college. The Paper Route to College. From The Boston Globe.

City of Boston Introduces New Vacant Property Program

The City of Boston has initiated a program aimed at renovating and redeveloping vacant properties throughout Boston. The program, designed through "The Clearinghouse" - a joint venture of the city's Public Facilities and Real Property Departments - will assist tax-paying owners of properties which the city has indentified as vacant.

Property owners will be able to obtain one-stop assistance with a variety of related concerns, including: mortgage financing; rehabilitation and weatherization. The program is open to owners of residential, commercial and industrial properties alike and was described by Real Property Commissioner J. Edward Roche as "but one small initiative in Mayor Flynn's overall plan for providing new and affordable housing opportunities. These abandoned buildings are sleeping assets."

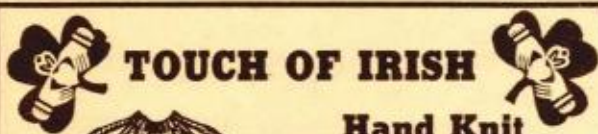

A Workshop on abandoned properties will be held on Thursday, December 5, 1985 at 10:00 a.m. in Room 811 of City Hall. Representatives from the following agencies and departments will be present to discuss the individual needs of each property owner: Archdiocese of Boston (Urban Affairs Office); "The Clearinghouse" (City of Boston Public Facilities and Real Property Departments); Economic Development and Industrial Corporation (City of Boston); Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency; Neighborhood Development and Employment Agency (City of Boston); and Rent Equity Board (City of Boston).

Each participating agency has included informational literature in a packet which has been made available to all tax-paying owners of vacant properties.

Mayor Flynn sees the new program as "an opportunity to turn abandoned buildings into badly-needed housing." He added that "An essential component in the revitalization of Boston's neighborhoods is the creation of affordable housing. When buildings are abandoned they become a safety hazard to the community. But when these same buildings are renovated and occupied, the entire city benefits."

Further information on this program may be obtained by calling 725-4111.

A Turkey Tale

A local tom-turkey, named Waller,
Within an old smithy did holler
"C'mon there, you smith,
And make me, forthwith!
A guaranteed hatchet-proof collar."

And the smith up and said "It won't save you your head!
Pretty soon you'll be dead as a mummy!
Don't cha know, stupid turk', such a collar won't work,
Don't cha know about hack-saws? Ya dummy!"

And Waller, real sad-like, said "Oh, what's the use"—
Then his mind got a sea-goin' notion,
And fast, like a deer, he sped to Revere,
Where he entered a mighty-cold ocean.

Then he swam and he swam, and he rounded
"The Horn"
And he found a lush island terrific:
And all of its people, they couldn't eat meat:
And all things were always pacific.

And now, Waller's happy as happy can be,
And for many a snap-shot he poses
With a wing 'round a beautiful sea-gull of rank —
On the island called "Isle Of The Roses."

So Waller has proven "though out-looks be bleak
And soul-trying things are a-pending,"
We can, if we strive, keep our bodies alive,
And even find joy — that's un-ending.

Thank You

A Thanksgiving dinner was held on last Monday afternoon at the Knights of Columbus Hall for the elderly of Charlestown. Everyone had a wonderful time. The dinner was the best ever and there was plenty for 472 people who also enjoyed themselves by talking to old friends, singing familiar songs, dancing and listening to the entertainment of Irish tenor Brian McCormack, organist Wayne Height, Charlestown's own Gig Etherton on the harmonica and the Somerville Trio.

Among the 95 volunteers helping out was Mayor Ray Flynn who said it was the largest turkey dinner he had ever gone to and this year's first. Also, lending a hand were State Representative Richard Voke, City Councillor Robert Travaglini and Congressional Candidates, Bill Galvin and Tom Vallely.

Many thanks to Joe and Margie Kent for all their hard work in bringing this dinner together. God bless them both for giving us a wonderful day.

Citizen Participation In Planning

by Barbara Thornton

Federal laws have set a precedent for including citizen participation in a variety of public activities ranging from civil rights to ecology. The War on Poverty programs, Model Cities, the National Environmental Policy Act of 1970 and the Freedom of Information Act of 1966 all defined a role for private citizens in the implementation of public programs.

During the 1960's and 1970's, the role of citizens in community planning was expanded by community organizers like Saul Alinsky, advocacy planners like Paul Davidoff and local government efforts like Little City Halls.

In 1969, a planner, Sherry Arnstein outlined a framework for looking at citizen participation models. The scale moves from no control by citizens to complete citizen control.

The following is the scale describing citizen involvement:

- Non-participation
- 1. Manipulation
- 2. Therapy
- Degrees of Tokenism
- 3. Informing
- 4. Consultation
- 5. Placation
- Degrees of Citizen Power
- 6. Partnership
- 7. Delegated
- 8. Citizen control

Complete citizen control may seem like the ideal from the perspective of a citizen who wants it. But it is also the responsibility of the government to balance the broader interests of the community with the special interests of a few. So there is inevitable tension between citizens who want more control over planning and the government agencies which feel that they must actively represent a broader interest. Citizen advisory organizations are often efforts to reach a compromise between individual citizen interests and the role of government agencies.

There are some procedures that are given to citizens as a RIGHT to participate in government. A zoning petition may be initiated by property owners adversely affected by current zoning. Ten taxpayers can bring a suit in court to challenge a government action. And, the most important right of all for citizens to participate in planning, of course, is the right to vote.

(Barbara Thornton has been active in various community organizations. She has her own consulting firm, specializing in planning and management. She has lived in Charlestown with her family for 13 years.)

Appearance of Blessed Mother Topic Of Holy Name Meeting

On Sunday, December 8th, 1985, the Holy Name Society of St. Francis de Sales Parish in Charlestown will present a film and commentary on the recent appearances of Our Blessed Mother in Yugoslavia.

What is unusual about these appearances is that they are taking place in a Communist country where the government has been mounting strong opposition to them.

Although the Catholic Church has not taken any official position with respect to these appearances, Pope John Paul II has encouraged further study into the matter.

The Holy Name Society invites all members of the parish to attend the December 8th presentation, which will be held in the Bishop Lawton Hall, 313 Bunker Hill Street, following the 8:30 a.m. Mass. Complimentary coffee and donuts will be served.

Secretary Alerts Seniors To Low-Cost Telephone Service

Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard H. Rowland alerted elders to a telephone service called "measured service." "Through measured service elders are allowed 30 message units each month on direct-dial calls within local calling areas. This service will cost $3.25 per month plus a $1.00 access charge, and any additional message units will cost 10¢ each. Each message unit is based on an initial period of five minutes. If you speak with someone more than five minutes, you will be charged one message unit for each additional five minutes or a fraction thereof. Also, toll rates apply to people with measured service who call outside their local calling area. The service allows an unlimited number of incoming calls," said Secretary Rowland.

"Measured service makes it possible for homebound or frail elders to get basic phone service at a nominal cost. They can make emergency and other essential phone calls and stay in contact with the community," concluded Secretary Rowland. "No elder should be without the 'lifeline' of a telephone."

Bountiful Affection

THANKSGIVING is a time to be thankful for special friendships, and there is no truer friendship than that of a dog or cat. Pets are kind, loving, loyal, warm and playful — they add so much to our lives. Show your pet how much you appreciate him by making sure he stays safe and healthy this holiday season. Keep tags on your dog and cat at all times, at home or when traveling. Don't neglect him during the commotion of guests and festivity, and avoid giving him table scraps. If you don't have a pet, consider the warmth and love a dog or cat could bring to your life. The Animal Rescue League of Boston has hundreds of dogs and cats of all sizes, shapes, colors and ages just waiting to share your love. The League's Adoption Center is open from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., seven days a week. For more information call 426-9170.
