The long drive to home for Thanksgiving is always interesting. I bring lectures along with me.

Here's what's going on in my life these days. My online college is where I'm learning, but it's helping me to prepare for my career as an influencer on Youtube. Youtube influencer or Youtube famous. My total followers are almost 1800. It's funny to think about this, but I've already started my journey. It's not a lot however, with patience and lots of positive thinking as well as exclusive content that is full of brilliant ideas, I'll become a celebrity. If you are willing to work at it, you'll be where You wanna be, as Nas once said. His words were always relevant to me.

So my long journey home for the holidays was promising to be boring just as any other trip that is long and monotonous. Being a hefty and bulky individual, I hate sitting in a small bus seat. So, this time I decided to outwit the boredom. It's true! My college has 2 different classes with a lot of lectures. These are hosted on their own servers however, they also have them on Youtube in case you are unable to adequately handle the speed of their HD videos, and so Youtube offers a variety of high-quality options, which always seemed extremely useful to my instructors, and they copied their lectures onto Youtube.

Here I am getting ready for the 8hr bus ride. I am trying to figure out how to make myself have fun, and maybe some thinking.. I took in the lectures and then watched the videos. The course was about seven hours of listening. I wanted to save videos on my iPad so I just listed to the lecture as I was on the bus to home for Thanksgiving. YouTube mp3 conversion was my friend.. I was able to convert the Youtube videos into mp3 files, and saved them to my phone to play when my iPad goes out of service. Because I have very limited space on my phone, I just did audio. Audio lectures are similar to podcasts, but they are written as if the audience were aged between 2 and 3 years old. This makes them easy to understand even for those who are not listening and watching. So I converted the videos into mp3s and set up my headphones. I didn't buy the overpriced new Airpods at the moment, but am using old cheap headphones I have..

youtube to mp3 converter However I also saved the videos from YouTube to MP4 files on my iPad. This would be very helpful during the beginning of my journey. Of course video is cool, you get to observe what's happening, what the teacher is up to or what's going on, but otherwise it's just the podcast. Although mp3s have a much smaller file size than video mp4, I was unable download all the videos onto my iPad. Furthermore, I did not want to erase Family Guy (also downloaded via Hulu) to make room for my trip.

I was thrilled to take both video and audio lectures. My iPad was empty after about two hours. Then, my phone kicked in. I didn't watch the lecture, I was just listening to the audio. It got me throughout the day to my destination. After returning to school, as college began again it was very simple for me to refresh what I learned on my trip and surprise the teacher with my side experience. It's very interesting what nowadays technology can help you study. There are websites that offer lectures, tutorials as well as DIY videos. It's simply unlimited knowledge all stored on Youtube and other video storage websites.. It's something to consider.
