To many push notifications even when I turn off all the apps notification settings. It doesn't give or show you all the people who want to add you unless you pay wich is fine but it constantly gives you those notifications saying they do wich is really annoying, and nobody seems to want to talk on the app so what's the point. Overall the app is just okay in my opinion.

BruhMoment: Good idea, done even worse than poorly. Like everyone else says, its behind a pay wall, this needs to be changed. The only way to see people who actually added you through swiping is to pay a healthy sum for a subscription, and i find that ridiculous. Not everyone has money like that to pay to make friends, at that point youre literally paying for your friends. This needs to be changed to adds atleast. Also copy-paste replies for this issue is a really good way to flip someone off through text.

First issue got fixed, but now each time I switch between devices, it wants me to verify myself again. So annoying, I just wish it would work. When trying to message people, everytime I tap a letter, it goes back to the screen before. Then when I can finally get a message written and hit send, it tells me it failed to send. This means you won't be able to make friends because the app is too broken at the time of writing thisPutting out an update after a month without fixing the issue making a huge chunk of people unable to use the app is really ridiculous. It sends a clear message, intentional or not, that you're totally uninterested in making the app usable first and foremost.

As a software engineer, I would never submit an update if my client couldn't use my app. Hope this is fixed soon and the team managers realize what a bad look this is.Good app, but would like to see for features. Such as being able to filter to only people in your area. I'm aware this is a feature already, but it is very rough and I'll get people only as close to me as 50 miles away everywhere I go. The rest are random from other parts of the country. Definitely not within my range. "my country only" needs to be reworked, and improved. Not rushed out only for another update to come up to fix the app that became unusable becuase of the rushed update.
