

Archaeological Excavations Aimed At Recovering Charlestown's Past

by Marianne Martin

Prior to the proposed roadway reconstruction and subsequent development of City Square, an attempt is being made to salvage a bit of Charlestown's historic past. As the overhead ramp system is replaced by underground tunnels, many artifacts, evidence of Charlestown's history that have lain under the surface of the town from Colonial days, may be destroyed.

"This may be the last chance to see what's under ground. We have historical documentation, but we no longer have physical evidence of the 1775 burning of Charlestown and of her waterfront development," stated archaeological site interpreter, Barbara Thibault.

"State legislation requires that in all highway construction, there must be an environmental review, and it was felt that it was necessary to do some excavations," explained Thibault. The project is being funded by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the Federal Highway Administration.

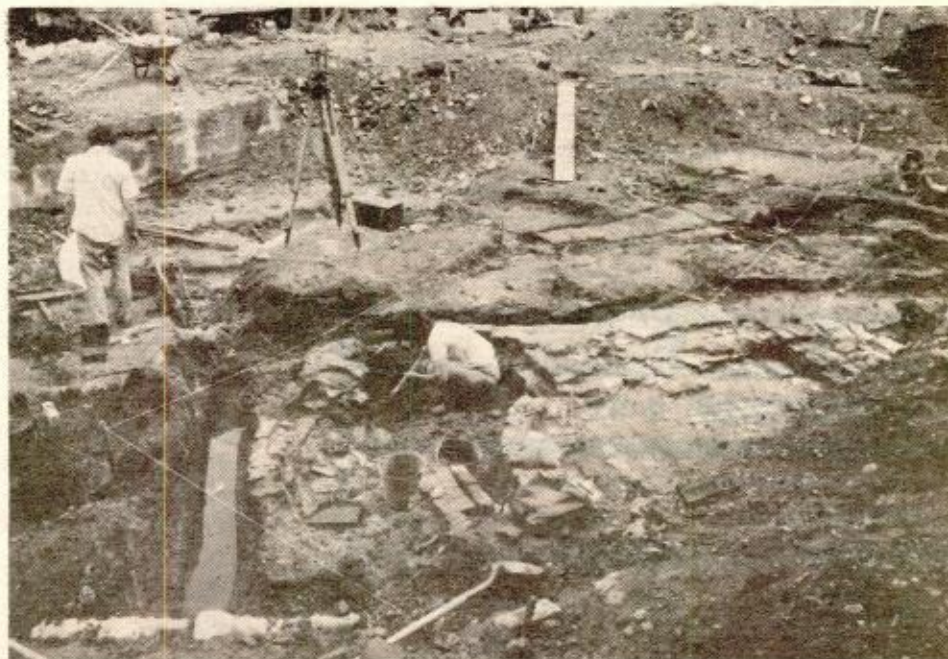

"Archaeology is the study of things that people make and use; and historic archaeology increases our knowledge of material culture, that is, objects from everyday life which may not have been recorded in written sources," explained Thibault.

After an investigation of land deeds to determine prior land uses, preliminary site samples were taken to verify whether artifacts existed. As a result, Thibault stated, eleven sites at eight locations were cited for further archaeological digging.

Thibault explained that the City Square area has been named as Archaeological District for the National Register of Historic Places and since the proposed reconstruction could possibly des-

THE SITE of the Henley Distillery, located on the land now occupied by Charlestown Town, was the focus of an archaeological dig in July. Archaeological findings at the location of this 19th century distillery included a brick fire box and a grid.

opment, which is a joint venture between the Cooperative Services Inc. (CSI) of Detroit, Michigan and the Archdiocese of Boston, is unique in that the residents make the rules.

by Marianne Martin
 In an effort to establish better understanding of what 'cooperative living' will mean to the residents of the City Square Cooperative Apartments, Inc., which is presently under construction at the site of the former Saint Mary's Grammar School and adjacent garage, a general meeting was held for prospective residents on Monday afternoon, August 12, 1985 at the Kent Community School.

The elderly housing development, which is a joint venture between the Cooperative Services Inc. (CSI) of Detroit, Michigan and the Archdiocese of Boston, is unique in that the residents make the rules. CSI, according to Martha Sachs, Co-General Manager of CSI, began as a Consumer Cooperative forty years ago, and ventured into the field of cooperative elderly housing in 1965 with developments in Michigan, California, Maryland, and Revere, Massachusetts. Sachs told the audience that the City Square elderly cooperative should be completed and occupied in late December or early January. The housing will be comprised of 120 units, 89 of which will be one bedroom and 31 will be studio apartments. There will be a total of 13 handicapped units included in the complex.

One problem that is apparent on this site, is the lack of adequate parking. Presently there are only seven parking spaces on the site and, according to the CSI spokesperson, in an agreement with the developer of the Tontine Crescent opposite the development on Warren Street, 18 more parking spaces will be provided. Sachs agreed that parking is "definitely a problem."

Susan Caulfield, CSI Building Coordinator, told the gathering there are certain eligibility requirements for potential cooperative residents. First, individuals must be 62 years of age or older, or be physically handicapped. The income limits are $11,300 for a single person and $12,900 for a couple. Caulfield explained in-

Open Letter To The Residents Of Charlestown

There is a great difference between those people who live in the community and those who only exist. In order for our community to enjoy growth and security, each of you must be willing to rise to your responsibility. It is far too easy for you to complain and moan, then lock the front door.

The Kennedy Center needs your input, your talent, your voice. Elections are being held in September for seats on the Board of Directors. I urge you to consider running for a seat. You can make the difference, if you choose.

So many of you believe you can't change a system. That is only what you perceive to be true. I challenge you to show faith in your community. I challenge you to stand and show the courage of your convictions. Do not be afraid to have a voice and use it. Whether you are 18 or 72, you can run; you can win; you can make a difference. This is our challenge for a better community.

Sincerely,
Stephen Wright

High School Students Work For World Peace

Timothy Burke of Charlestown is one of eight high-school age students who are working together at Bunker Hill Community College on a project that they hope will serve to remind everyone that all men are brothers.

Their project, part of ABCD's Summerworks, is a mural that they designed themselves. Artist in-residence, Chris Demers, is coordinating the students' efforts.

"The kids are very enthusiastic about this project," Demers stated. "The themes of world peace and racial harmony were ones that they were very determined to include in the mural."

The students used the College library to research folk art traditions and universal symbols. The result is a design based on the primitive totem. The mural reaches up over thirty feet high from the first floor lobby of the College into a skylight on the second floor.

The base of the mural depicts the beginnings of life, with lush jungle growth and a lotus bud. Continuing up the totem are masks representing the races of the world. The center of the mural is a sphere with people united around it. At the top of the totem there is a lotus blossom in full glory, signifying peace and love of life.

Other students involved in the mural project are: Ricardo Acevedo of Boston, Willie Calderon of Boston, Peggy Hall of Mattapan, Aldo Hernandez of Roxbury, Wilfredo Potucki of Roslindale, Richard Rodriguiz of Dorchester and Tracey Wilson of Hyde Park.

Waine is scheduled to serve with the 323rd Field Maintenance Squadron at Mather Air Force Base, California.

He is a 1980 graduate of Milford High School.

Mayor Flynn Announces Legislation To Curb Use Of Children In Drug Trafficking

by Marianne Martin

Drug trafficking in and around Boston has become a sophisticated business as those who engage in the activity utilize "loopholes" in Massachusetts General Laws in their favor. One such loophole concerns the use of children and teenagers as runners and lookouts in order to protect the visibility of the dealers. However, Mayor Raymond Flynn announced yesterday, his draft for legislation which would discourage the use of children in drug deals by imposing strict fines and mandatory sentences on those individuals who use children in this manner.

"Drugs are poison in our neighborhoods," stated Flynn who added, "Let the word go out. There will be only one drug war in Boston and it will be against them

(the drug dealers)." Flynn introduced what he called "a weapon in the war against drugs" by filling the "loophole" in the legal system which allows drug pushers to be "immune to prosecution" in their use of children in their operations. Two laws are presently on the books under which drug pushers can be prosecuted with regard to children; one is selling drugs to a minor, and the second is contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Neither law addresses the specific use of children in the drug transaction. The dealers use this loophole as a means of protecting themselves and the children use it to make a few bucks illegally.

Flynn's proposal is aimed at discouraging dealers from using children by calling for a mandatory five year sentence and a fine of between $25,000 and $250,000 for employing children in drug trafficking. The mandatory sentence was included in the legislation to ensure that if the person is found guilty, the sentence cannot be overturned. The fine will hurt the drug trafficking business by making it unprofitable to deal in Massachusetts. The legislation will also provide protection for the children who decide to testify against the dealers, by allowing closed session testimonies.

Bill Weld, United States Attorney, stated that drug dealing has become a "full service" organization, which not only provides food and housing to those involved with drug dealing, but also, bail money if needed. Weld discussed the use of children as lookouts and how they were provided walky-talkies and weapons.

The Head of the Drug Unit and Assistant District Attorney Bill Walsh from District Attorney Newman Flanagan's office, discussed the difficulty law enforcement agencies have had pinpointing the location of dealers. "The sophistication of these drug dealers is such that they know there are no laws on the books against this (use of children)," stated Walsh, who said such a law would give law enforcement agencies the "tools necessary" to fight this activity.

The use of children in drug trafficking is not new. Boston Police Commissioner Francis Roache added, "I've been very concerned about children being exploited. It is a menace that plagues us. This (proposal) is moving us in the right direction." However, Roache stated, the law is not enough. "Let's not kid ourselves, we need the people," added Roache, who praised the efforts of Georgette Watson, founder of Drop-a-Dime, the citizen-run hotline to report drug activity. "We can't do it without the Georgette Watsons out there," stated Roache.

Watson, who has worked on Drop-a-Dime for the past three years, added it is not a fight against drugs, "it has actually been a war and this legislation will help us. Let's make Boston drug free in all our neighborhoods."

To facilitate processing your claim, Treasurer Crane urges you to include your name as listed in the newspaper, your address and identification number (if printed in the paper) on all communications.

Owners of abandoned property need not pay a finder's fee to anyone to claim what is rightfully theirs.

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane has announced that his office is attempting to return nearly $1 million to 4,000 Massachusetts residents under the state's unclaimed money law.

Treasurer Crane noted that this money has been reported to the Treasury by insurance companies doing business within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Included in the proceeds are unpaid life insurance benefits, unpaid benefits on health and liability insurance policies, pension checks and customer overpayments.

Under Massachusetts' unclaimed money law (M.G. L.C. 200A), accounts which have been dormant for at least five years are deemed to be abandoned and must be reported to the Treasury. The Treasury Department then tries to locate the rightful owner or legal heirs to return the money.

"Many of these accounts represent the cash value of life insurance policies which the owners do not realize they are entitled to claim," Crane said. "My office is making every reasonable effort to locate the owners or legal heirs to return these funds to those who are due them."

More than 1,000 accounts range between $100 - $500; 239 accounts between $500 - $1,000; 132 accounts between $1,000 - $5,000; nine accounts between $5,000 - $10,000; and five accounts more than $10,000. The remaining accounts are less than $100. Last spring, Treasurer Crane released the names of 36,000 Massachusetts residents who were owed more than $13 million, most of this resulting from unclaimed savings accounts.

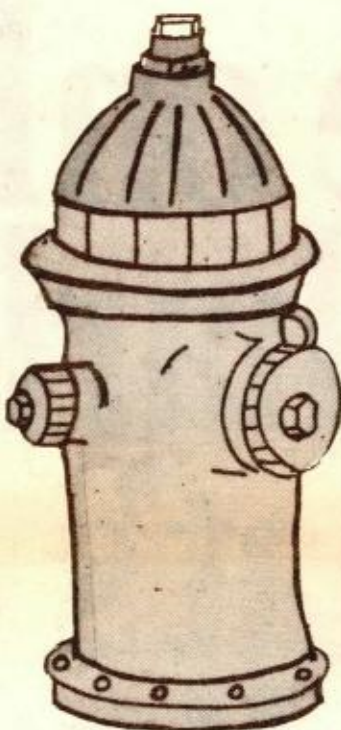

Persons who believe they may have a valid claim, should call the Treasurer's Office at 367-7780 or toll-free 1-800-632-8027.

to any artifacts believed to be located in the area, eleven archaeological "digs" have been scheduled in an attempt to capture a bit of the past. The archaeological team has already begun working in Charlestown and will continue field work into 1986.

One archaeological dig has already been completed at the site of the former Henley Distillery, located under the ramps of the Central Artery near the Charlestown exit, on land now occupied by Charlestown Tow. Thibault related that the distillery, which was active between 1741 and 1775 and again between 1790 and 1868, processed Caribbean sugar cane and molasses into rum. "All that is visible today is the Henley Street sign post," began Thibault, however, once the excavation was underway, physical evidence was discovered supporting the existence of the business.

The archaeologists had hoped to find remnants from vats, stills and hardware. What they found was the remnants of a 19th century foundation for a fire box and some wooden vats, as well as the foundation of a 17th century house which belonged to a Mr. John Smith. However, since the permit did not specify such a discovery, they could not continue but, Thibault stated the team would like to return to the site for further investigation.

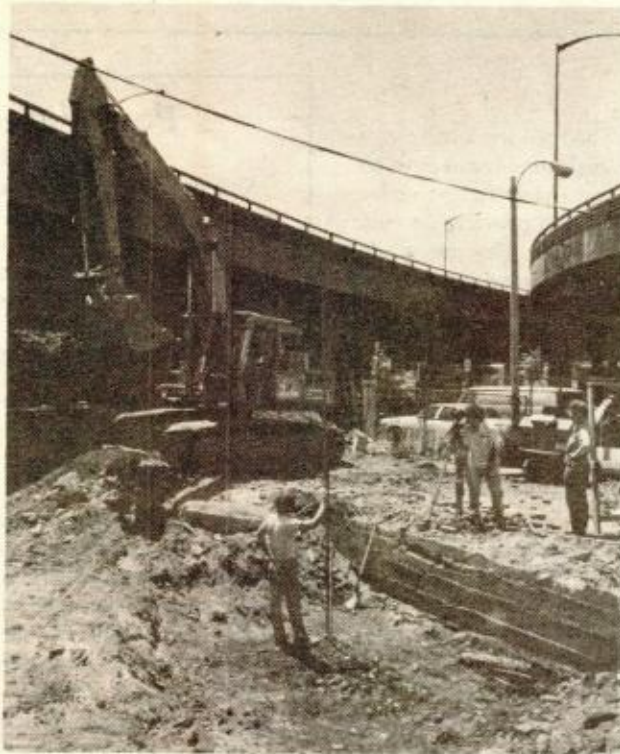

Among the distillery tools discovered were nails, pipe stems, corks, and some wooden plugs called "bungs" which, according to Thibault, were placed in the rum barrels to allow air trapped inside to escape. Another discovery was some rope and hose which were made by melting cloth and rubber together.

Presently, the archaeological team is investigating City Square for evidence of the foundations of four homes once located there. One foundation, which is thought to have been the home of Governor Winthrop in 1629 and later used as a tavern, was called the Great House. The deed research shows that the other homes were owned by Reverend Abbott, Mr. Long and Mr. Breed. While a complete excavation is not possible because of the existing roadway, utility wires, and water pipes, the team should be able to obtain sufficient artifacts from domestic life, such as silverware, pipes, and cookery. They should also be able to define the dimensions of the homes. Thibault explains such evidence should be discovered eight feet under ground.

The team should be working this year until December and resume again next year in April, continuing until October. Among the sites that have been slated for further digs are the former Town Docks and Dry Dock, and several sites of former ceramic and pottery manufacturers.

Thibault reports that the former Dry Dock is the site of the first known dry dock in North America, constructed in 1677 and used continually until it was destroyed by fire in 1835. "Determining the dimensions and materials used in the construction of the Town Dock Wharves and the Dry Dock, will provide a better understanding of early building techniques."

According to Thibault, Charlestown has a long tradition of redware pottery. "There is a lot of clay here and there were a lot of potteries," she stated. "There was, at one time, several dozen pottery shops in the City Square area."

Thibault went on to say that the Charlestown dig is extremely important because it marks one of the few archaeological studies of an entire New England community. For example, Thibault states that the City Square dig will explain how early settlers adapted to the environment; while the digs at the waterfront will investigate "maritime facilities and trade patterns, the wharf building techniques and materials, and the nature of land fills."

After the excavation is completed, Thibault said the area will be returned to its original state. All artifacts discovered will be sent to a laboratory located in the former North End police station. Thibault stated that anyone wishing to either see the excavation sites or artifacts, can do so by contacting her at 332-3290.

Charlestown Summer Collaborative News

by Bob DeCristoforo

You might have watched a movie or TV Show about a "Time Machine" or you may have read a book about one, but this week our kids experienced a "time machine" first hand. The past, the present, and the future are three words to describe the final week of Session II for the kids of Charlestown.

Edaville Railroad in Carver, took us back to a time when the Railroad was the mode of transportation. Our older kids experienced the JFK legacy at the Kennedy Library in Dorchester, and they saw how a large daily newspaper is produced as they toured the Boston Globe. Our guide noted some very interesting contrasts in the way a paper is made now and how it was made in the past. High Tech and the computer have taken their toll!

We all toured the Museum of Science and attended a show at the Hayden Planetarium and here the past, present and future are well displayed. At Sturbridge Village we crossed a covered bridge and went back in time to a New England Village of 150 years ago.

The final week of Session II was certainly our most active. Session III, now underway, will prove to be quite interesting. This special session is filled up and sold out!

As they say at Fenway Park, "Wait till next Year"!

BHA Sports Jamboree At UMass/Boston

On Friday, August 16 and Saturday, August 17, the Boston Housing Authority (BHA) will host a Sports Jamboree at UMass/Boston's Harbor Campus.

The Opening Ceremony is at noon on Friday and Closing Ceremonies begin at 3 p.m. on Saturday. Many local professional athletes are expected to participate in coordinating the games and Doris Bunte, Administrator of the BHA, has invited a number of political figures and other dignitaries to attend the Jamboree and encourage the participants — youngsters from public housing developments throughout the city.

Many corporations and local colleges and universities have contributed to this effort in a variety of ways. Trophies and medallions will be awarded to the winners in both team and individual sports events.

F.A.D. Facts About Drugs

The denial system's main function is to prevent the chemically dependent person from admitting their illness to themselves and others. As a person's drinking begins to produce troubles with himself and those around him, a conflict appears. On one hand, alcohol has become an important and rewarding component in his life. On the other hand, reality is trying to make the drinker aware of a troubled spouse and family relations, work efficiency, etc. There are only two possible resolutions of the conflict: reject drinking or reject reality. Many, many people begin to reject reality. Denial preserves the chemically dependent person's self-worth and dignity and problems multiply.

Society promotes the use of alcohol, yet places a very powerful stigma to those who have a pattern of abuse as a result of use. Alcoholics are labeled "weak," "immoral," or "crazy." This attitude is a major factor in the resistance and denial of chemically dependent people.

Others close to the chemically dependent person usually avoid or overlook evidence of symptoms of the disease. When the family does become aware, they might not have knowledge of the illness and not confront it in a way that will be effective in helping the person. Denial blocks recovery.

Denial is overcome by confrontation (presentation of facts).

- It is specific to that person's life and must cover a wide range of life areas including physical, psychological, social, and spiritual damage to the person's life.

- The behavioral evidence must point to the message "you act like a chemically dependent person because you are one."

- Confrontation must be as persistent as the denial of the person, allowing for no excuses.

- Confrontation emphasizes the importance of dealing with drug abuse first. Other problems are secondary.

Appropriate confrontation is an attack but not on the person. It is an attack on the denial. To help them in this way even if it is a painful process, is caring for the chemically dependent person as human beings deserve to be cared for.

Informational Meeting Held On City Square Elderly Housing

(continued from page one) come includes the person's Social Security, wages earned, and interest from banks, stocks, etc., adding "we do take into account 5% of all assessed property as income."

Despite being a joint venture with the Archdiocese, Caulfield stressed individuals need not be Catholic in order to be eligible, nor do the applicants have to live in Charlestown.

The monthly rent will be calculated as 30% of the total monthly income, minus medical expenses.

Each applicant will enter a certification process, which includes the completion of the application and an interview by three other residents. Since this is a cooperative, the residents interview prospective tenants as a "screening process." Bill Simeone, Chairman of the Revere Membership Committee, stated the interview process is simple — "questions are just asked such as 'what are your hobbies?', 'what type of job did you have?', 'do you play any instruments?'"

Ed Turiello, Parish Liaison for CSI Revere and a Registered Architect, explained the layout of the building and the individual units. There will be four floors in the former Saint Mary's School building and the L-shaped addition will have seven floors along Warren Street and five floors on the Park Street side. The building will have central air conditioning. The one bedroom units will have 10 x 11 or 10 x 13 square foot bedrooms, with living rooms between 12 x 17 and 13 x 17 square feet. The studio apartments will be 15 x 15 square feet with separate kitchen and bath. Handicapped units have bedrooms 11 x 11 with living rooms 11 x 18. All units will have a number of closets and access to storage space on the first floor.

While there will be no formal security personnel hired for the City Square development, Sachs stated there will be a Sargeant's Security Key System installed, which cannot be duplicated because there are no "teeth" or "cuts" into the keys, but they are impressed on the key bed itself. "We have not had good experience with guard services," stated Sachs. "The best security is the people themselves. We've had almost zero instances of security problems in our buildings."

There will be a maintenance person or couple living in the building, who will be responsible for the upkeep of all common areas and general maintenance work. There will be weekly city pick up and bi-weekly private pick up of garbage.

Many of those in the audience had questions and concerns about what would happen to those tenants who became ill, since the City Square elderly housing is for elderly who live independently. Sachs stated no one would be "kicked out" because "most people who get sick, get better" and even those who may be ill can usually maintain their apartments. Sachs went on to say that there were no rules against having support services, such as "meals on wheels", etc. while an individual is ill, but she added that if the individual required "more assistance" they may choose to relocate.

Another concern was that of pet restrictions. Sachs stated that federal law prohibits the co-op from saying "no pets," but there will be regulations established. "Everyone loves their own pet, but not anyone else's," Sachs said the cooperative may ask those wishing to have pets to pay a minimum deposit required by HUD of $100 is requested to cover any possible damages caused by the pet. "We try to keep pets to a minimum because of allergies," adding, "pets are not allowed to roam free and must be leashed or carried."

A follow up meeting has been tentatively scheduled for the second week in September, at which time representatives from HUD will discuss financial restrictions as well as answer any questions potential residents may have. The date, time, and location will be announced in The Patriot.

Volunteers Needed To Model Vintage Clothes

Auditions of volunteer models for "Style Through the Years," Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries' popular vintage fashion show begin August 21. Those chosen will model in a series of evening fashion shows presented September through November and March through May.

Both male and female models will be auditioned. Because of the small size of the clothing, models should be no more than 5'6". Those chosen must be willing to commit themselves to appearing in the fashion shows one night a week September through November and March through May. Because fashions are presented to organizations throughout Greater Boston, models must be able to furnish their own transportation.

Fashions modeled date back to 1863 and include a Parisian ball gown, Southern-belle dress, Victorian wedding gown, vintage bathing suits, a turn-of-the-century gymsuit, World War I uniform, and Roaring Twenties flapper dresses, all with a colorful array of accessories from parasols to high button shoes.

For more information on the auditions, contact Rosemary Ross, Director of Volunteer Service, Morgan Memorial, 95 Berkeley Street, Boston, MA 02116, telephone 357-9710, extension 245.

Legislation To Curb Use Of Children In Drug Trafficking

The proposal only addresses the use of children in the drug transaction. Many expressed concern that there were no steps taken to aid the children who are "victims," in terms of support service agencies to intervene with these children who are exposed to this activity. Many youth develop an immunity to the system after being allowed to go back on the streets or they, as one man stated, are allowed to "fall between the cracks."

Flynn said he would hope that education and summer job programs would encourage youths to seek "meaningful jobs, even though they may not pay as well as illegal ones."

Flynn's proposal is currently being reviewed by law enforcement agencies for their recommendations before Flynn submits the final draft to the Massachusetts State Legislature.

Bank Of New England Awards Summer Grants To Neighborhood Groups

For the first time since it has donated money under the Associated Grantmakers Coordinated Summer Funding Process, Bank of New England this year asked branch officers in the communities to recommend which summer programs should receive funding.

The officers — Stacey Parks of the South Station Branch, Mark Huska of the Neponset Branch, Bruce Montgomery of the Prudential Branch, and Diana Scott Rochefort of the Charlestown branch — reviewed organizations and chose those which could best benefit the communities served by the bank's branches.

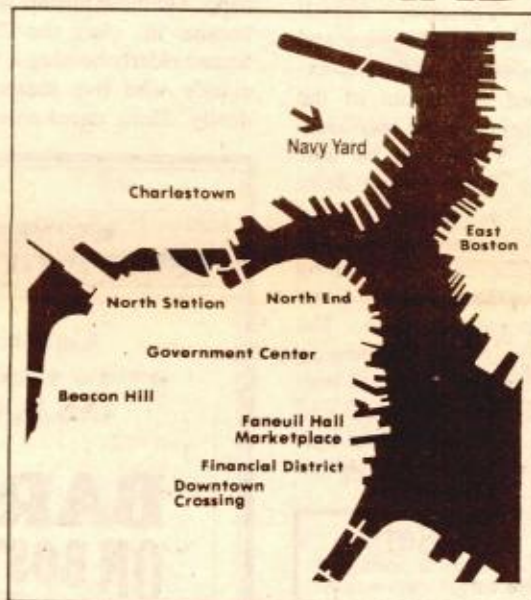

Based on their recommendations, Bank of New England, N.A. granted $1,000 to each of five organizations providing programs from day care and camp activities to academic instruction.

Locally, the bank funded the Boston Public/Community School Summer Program offering instruction in math, reading, language arts, computer literacy, and word processing for 100 low to moderate income pupils entering the sixth grade and also contributed to the Warren Center, which provides educational, recreational and therapeutic programs for severely emotionally disturbed youths from several areas of the city, including Charlestown.
