

SIERRA POLITICS - Published December 29th, 2020

The Rise of Freak Power

By Jacbonsin Mark | Fox News Contributor

Milpool Nixon has captured the fascination of the Sierran People, but what does this mean? | Nixon Press

It hasn't escaped anyone who's paying attention to Sierran politics that there's been a new force on the rise, for quite some time at that. Someone who doesn't like to play by the unsaid rules of politics, or sometimes, even by the common laws of morality we all try our best to abide by. He's been accused of allegedly firing multiple ground burst nuclear weapons, threatening opposition members with many firearms, as shown above, and is prone to loud and profane outbursts in the Sierra Assembly halls, with the media and even on the debate stage. Someone who you're never exactly sure what he's going to do next, and yet you know for a fact it will be incredibly immoral, dangerous, or entertaining. Maybe even all three if you're lucky. He's known to love guns, liquor, and a good night out on the town in the Western State. His rise has been mirrored to Donald Trump's approach during his first campaign, of one who'll say something crazy, and when you call it crazy, he'll just say something crazier. Who am I talking about? Of course, it's none other than Milpool Nixon.

FREAK POWER

Senate or Bust

A flyer put out by Milpool Nixon, denoting his slogan and his intentions to run

With a bit of a wildside, to say the least, Milpool Nixon has taken the Sierra political scene by storm, and seems to have gained a great deal of followers. As a member of the Republican Party, he does stand to gain much in the upcoming Sierra Senate Race, where the Senate race there appears to be between the Republicans and Democrats once again. The age old story of Sierra is once again turning a page. And the Republican National Committee has declared that this is their candidate to run. But just what does Milpool Nixon believe, and what's up with his growing movement, that seems to be called "Freak Power"? Well, let's get down to the facts.

Well, in a recent op-ed written by the Senate hopeful, he expressed his support for a large amount of, shall we say, creative policies. There were plenty of colorful expletives in it, however that's not what I would like to focus on today. Today, we're going to focus on the numerous taxes, plans, and programs Milpool Nixon suggested be implemented in this piece. The first one that caught my eye was a tax on the top twenty percent, for incurring a large amount of money. He's not exactly alone in this mindset, after all it's an integral part of our progressive tax system. However, his next sentence is somewhat out there. "...tax the bottom 20 percent who commit an outrageous amount of crime." Something of an unusual approach, using a tax as a punishment for crime, but I'm just here to report the facts, not make opinions based off those facts. I won't lie, it's highly irregular, but with as strong a support base as he has, in the so called "Freak Community" it's clearly something his constituents would like to see.

He also has a back up plan, just in case his unique approach to taxation fails. For lack of a better term, a sin tax on pornographic imagery, videos, and other facets. He claims that, with a two dollar tax on porn, his actions alone could pay off the entire national debt in as little as twelve months. Now, assuming that the United States debt is around what it was in 2016, around twenty trillion dollars, that would take a fair amount of effort. However, I have to say, I respect his commitment to public service to take this considerable burden upon himself. However, his most unique and probably controversial policy would be the final one of his paper. Something he calls “Retroactive Abortion.” Where you keep the baby, but if they’re “still a scrub” by the time they're eighteen, to quote the man himself, BLAMMO!

One might think this policy, one of such deliberate use of force, would see a wave of people calling for Milpool’s resignation from politics, however, as usual, he’s just chugging along stronger than ever, with great support from his base and the party leadership. After speaking the Republican National Committee, I can say with credible authority that they do not collectively endorse any of these policies, nor should they be seen as core Republican principles. President Ninjjadragon and Vice Presidential Nominee SELDOM237 have both disavowed these policies as well.

Milpool Nixon’s most recent Senate Campaign logo displayed here. A commentator noted that the black and yellow colors could be similar to the colors of the Anarcho-Capitalist flag, shown below. If this similarity is intentional or not, we have yet to determine.

Milpool Nixon has been known to be friendly with the GOP leadership, even if there are several political disagreements. His strength, both in his submitted bills and his grassroots movement he’s created, whether intentionally or not, in the upcoming election is very strong. His opponent, presumably a Democrat, will be hard pressed to bring a viable contest forward. Furthermore, there aren’t that many Democrats in Sierra who are in a position to run, so we shall wait to see what happens there.

There's no doubt that "Freak Power" and its potential in the upcoming election is a force to be reckoned with, and we at Fox News will continue to monitor the situation closely, to ensure that the public receives as much information as possible.