Many of us Android phone users keep installing and looking different applications and games from the Google Play store on a regular basis. These applications are installed automatically and merely be visible on our phones once we go through the install button. However, there exists a different way to install applications and games, as well as live wallpaper on your phone without the need for a credit card applicatoin store like Google Play. This is why APK or Android application Package files be important.

Whoever has used an Android phone and would rather install plenty of applications and games will likely often hear or read about APK files. The APK file extension is a special file format that work well much like a standard EXE or executable file does on a Windows computer. It becomes an executable program file that installs a credit card applicatoin on your Android smartphone.

These files have become user friendly nevertheless, you first must set up your phone to setup applications from third-party sources. It has an choice for that with your phone's settings, usually perfectly located at the security or applications settings sections. Once you check that, you only need to copy an APK file to your storage device, and you're simply good to go.

However, the tricky part is obtaining a reliable source because of these files. You can't just download files together with the APK file extension from the website. A number of websites which don't run proper antivirus checks and verify the application form files uploaded there. Some of these can easily be viruses and other malware made to give somebody else access to your phone's features like the camera, microphone, your picture gallery and contacts lists, breaching your privacy. If you download APK files from reliable sources though, you shouldn't possess problems.
