GHAKU OKAZAKI, "Flowers in the Sky", 2020, installation, mural painting, paintings on canvas, sculptures

Ghaku Okazaki shows a comprehensive painterly and sculptural work, which consists of two sculptures and a large-format mural painting, in which several paintings on canvas are integrated. They form huge scale of an entire installation to visualise a total concept of diversity. Every element is clearly harmonised with each other through their figuration and the strong colours that Ghaku Okazaki uses. Under the programmatic-poetic title of "Flowers in the Sky", he is concerned with the visualisation of a harmonious relationship between all living beings based on a thoroughly spiritual attitude and an explicit vision of the future. Important topics such as life and death or sexuality are mentioned in this cosmos and visualised by clear symbols, allegorical images and spiritual beings. For example, the large sculpture in this whole installation "Mandala of Life and Death" shows the dual principle of life and death with its two different sides. The painting on canvas "Rainbow Butterfly", which was painted in 2018 fits into the entire installation, shows the futuristic and utopic vision that people are no longer judged on the basis of their skin colour. The rainbow skin coloured faces is an obvious symbol of the unification of individual differences. Ghaku Okazaki calls this basic principle "the unity of a diversity" and refers, uses and combines the merging of very different concepts, philosophies, spiritual practices, but also artistic materials and techniques. For example: his sculptures have wilder presence than his calm and harmonic paintings. And at the same time, they are merged into the whole installation through his magical use of vivid colours. Ephemeral murals that will be painted over after the exhibition stand next to the easily transportable but durable paintings and the solid and robust sculptures. In terms of content, there are apparently references to different cultures, the images remind the viewers of some Buddhist as well as Indian or even Latin American imagery, which however need not necessarily have been an influence for Ghaku Okazaki. In any case, we could misunderstand these images as mere exoticism if we would read the work in the context of a western art history. But the intention of the artist is the right opposite of it. Exoticism is based on colonialism. However, Ghaku Okazaki's imagery is intended to affirm the vital diversity of imagination, and it is right opposite of colonialist oppression or cultural appropriation. This installation is accordingly open to very different interpretations. Just as with the clearly intended spirituality of the futuristic harmony of all living beings, humour must not be neglected, which is found in many details. We can find it most clearly perhaps in the blue figure that seems to sit on the heater of the room. This figure is humorously painted in a funny spot, and at the same time its obviously androgynous body throw the viewers an important question about our sexuality. And some other elements of the mural are playfully painted in reaction to some specific things of the room. This lightness of humour opens the visitors the entrance into the vision with full of messages.

*Explanation about the "Star of David" in my works

Ghaku Okazaki

Sometimes you can see star-like symbols in my works. They look exactly the same as the "Star of David" in the Judaism tradition.

However, those in my works originally come from the symbolism of traditional Japanese nature worship.

The star, like the "Star of David" in the Japanese mythological tradition, can be interpreted in various ways. It is composed of two triangles, \triangle ∇ . \triangle typically symbolises the earth and space, materiality and feminine energy, and ∇ symbolises the universe, time, thought and masculine energy.

I do not support the genocide taking place in Gaza and other parts of the world, and I am not anti-Palestinian, anti-Semitic or nationalist of any kind. I create the works with the will and hope for the world peace, and the celebration of the differences between us.

Since the war in Gaza began, I have avoided using these "stars" in my works. They can still be seen in my older works. That said, it does not represent any political statement or belief of myself.
