If you are looking to get fit, make a regiment that is both reasonable and productive. For example, expect yourself to go to the gym four days a week, and burn 500 calories each time. In this way you do not over burden yourself, and at the same time, keep on track towards a long term goal.

Working out in the morning is a great idea, but it isn't always easy to get up early. If you are determined to work out in the morning, try weaning yourself into getting up early. Get up ten to fifteen minutes earlier than normal and do any kind of physical activity. Continue to do this by getting up a little earlier each week until you are up early enough to do a complete workout.

Exercise can be the eight-letter word that some people just hate. To some, it means hurting muscles, sweating and extreme will power. If exercising means this to you, then avoid it like the plague. Instead, just physically move more than you do already. If that means dancing while you are stirring a pot of beans, then do that. Movement burns calories, so anything more than what you currently do is better for you.

You can get a great workout while you do everyday things such as shopping. Add a bit more walking to your trip by parking further away from your location. Try walking for at least 10 minutes a day to see results. When shopping in the mall, try walking the full length of the mall.

When riding a bicycle, you should aim to keep your speed around 80 to 110 rpm. This will allow you to ride farther with less knee strain and fatigue. To calculate your speed, you should count the number of times your right leg goes to the top of the pedal stroke in ten seconds. Once you calculate this number, multiply by six. This gives you your pedal rpms.

Stand on a sofa cushion with one leg. To improve your balance, assume this posture and have someone hand you heavy items. Pass them back and forth in your hands and give them back to the person assisting you. Improving your balance also improves your posture, so this method has multiple benefits.

To build up shoulder and arm strength you should work on pull-ups. Pull-ups work out different muscles based on the distance between your hands. The further out they are the more the back muscles are used to pull you up. The closer in they are the more they use your arms and shoulders to pull you up. Pull-ups are one of the best exercises to perform because they have very little capability of damaging muscles.
