

Chan Later Apologized For His Actions

OfflineTV is a house shared by content creators who are known for their online hangouts, "League of Legends," "Minecraft" and other gaming content on social networks. "Fedmyster," commonly known as Fed was a nefarious game that strayed from the norm according to Yvonne Ng and Lily "LilyPichu" Ki.

LilyPichu also claimed that former OfflineTV manager Chris Chan of sexual harassment. Chan apologized later for his behavior.

OfflineTV posted an announcement on Twitter on Saturday morning "We are committed to creating a space where everyone feels at ease and secure." Fed has been removed off Offline TV. Fed will also not living with us anymore. We are in support of Yvonne and her statement. We also support anyone else who is brave enough to share their story.

Fed posted his apology on Saturday night. "I want to make it clear that my motives were not to be malicious or predatorily," he wrote. "I have flaws I have issues that hinder my friendships, issues with myself, but I am not a predator and I never wanted this to happen."

Gaming companies are responding a wave of sexual misconduct allegations

Ng who is frequently seen on OfflineTV as the house manager, claimed that Fed started with her as a great friend. However this changed when he began to touch her without knowing while he was drunk. She later asked him about the incident, and he replied that it was something he couldn't remember.

"One night, our girls were hanging out, and when the topic of Fed came up, we realized we all had our own stories about him," Ng wrote.

On Saturday, LilyPichu issued a statement corroborating Ng's story and asserting that Fed had offered her a massage while she was suffering from an emotional breakup, and massaged her thighs and upper back. She also claimed that Fed sat in her bed when she was drunk.

"I was not able to deny that Fed had a tangled history with girls from our circle," LilyPichu wrote. "I did not want to acknowledge that our friend might have the capability to do this."

Other women in the home

After some of the fans had the support of Fed on social media, Imane "Pokimane," Anya, the most popular Twitch streamer with 5 million followers, commented about the situation on Sunday.

She said that Fed tried to manipulate her relationship with her lover and put her in a negative light for her friends when she was in the OfflineTV house.

"This was not the last time that Fed would lie about me. I had a lot of doubts about his trustworthiness," she said.

The claims of Pokimane's have not been addressed publicly by Fed. He was unable to be reached for discuss the matter.

The group conducted an informal meeting with Fed, but ultimately felt the need to make the intervention public, Pokimane, Ng and another member, William "Scarra" Li declared in separate statements.

If someone isn't watching in private, and you are aware that they have power, influence and the potential to continue being a sexist and inappropriate person towards women in future, it is important to issue an open warning.

Pokimane said, "We tried many compromises and it was so unfortunate it had come to this."

Pokimane had announced on the 19th of June that she was moving out to live with a group of women. On Sunday, she clarified that one of the reasons why she was leaving was because of Fed.

In her statement on Saturday LilyPichu also accused Chris Chan, her former manager and one of the founding four members of OfflineTV she accused of wrapping his arms and legs around her for hours while his pants were off in the year 2017. She wrote, "I remember his legs being hairy and how disgusted he was."

Chan responded to the allegations on Sunday with an apology, stating that "This violation of personal morals will continue to be a source of pain to me to this day... If extremecraft 's any consolation to those who read this, my animosity toward myself and my actions far surpasses anything I've ever felt throughout my life."
