Imagine, after a tiring shift, in which you could not even find yourself time to eat or go to bathroom for hours, you run back and forth, so much that you can't even feel your legs anymore, admissions keep on flooding in and you can't even say no, even though you know you have hit your maximum for the day. It's 4am in the morning now, you are finally done with paperwork and checking on all your patients, you now almost decide to hit the bed and get atleast an hour of sleep and get ready for the morning round. Suddenly a nurse calls you for patient so and so who is crashing, guess what, you checked on the same patient 30 mins ago and all was good. Now, your legs feel numb, your brain feels dead, you are sooo tired, you just wanna give up, and amidst all this now you are required to run the code. .
