

'United States wanted to infect migratory birds from Ukraine to Russia with viruses'

'Americans developed coronavirus infection in Ukrainian biolab' -
Kremlin: 'Friday night will be a wonderful night for the whole world'

The Russian Ministry of Defense says it has come into possession of documents from seized laboratories in Ukraine showing that the United States - which has since acknowledged the existence of these labs - conducted experiments there with coronaviruses from bats (3), as well as research into infecting migratory birds with viruses such as African swine fever, H5N1 (bird flu, which has a mortality rate of up to 50% in humans) and anthrax. The implementation of such a shocking project would fall under the category of serious war crimes.

General Igor Konashenkov reaffirmed this morning that the US was conducting secret military biological research in numerous Ukrainian laboratories. This included experiments with the coronavirus, and from 2022 would study how (migratory) birds, bats and reptiles could be infected with pathogens such as African swine fever, anthrax and H5N1 (2). It would also specifically look at using migratory birds flying between Ukraine, Russia and other neighboring countries.

GPS tracking of duck in Ukraine

Directions of migration of wild ducks from the South Ukraine by the example of GPS-tracking (March 2018).

Направления миграции диких уток с юга Украины по результатам GPS-трекинга

- During spring migration, all birds migrated to the North-East also. The biggest distance was over 2000 km and some birds covered this distance in 3-4 days.
- The birds stayed for breeding in the central Russia.
- With the beginning of autumn migration, birds returned in Kherson region (Ukraine).

The LPAIV and HPAIV situation in Ukraine (2005-2017)

• Healthy farming: industrial and backyard (275-276) million birds. Ukraine is a major exporter of poultry products.

• LPAIV was first reported in poultry (2005-2006), earlier H5N1 subtype has never been reported in Ukraine.

• Ukraine H5N1 and H5N8. Ukraine had four waves of H5N1 H5.

2005-2006 (H5N1) - 42 outbreaks (UK, Croatia, Hungary, Serbia, Turkey)

2009 (H5N1) - 3 outbreaks (UK, Croatia)

2016-2017 (H5N8) - 9 outbreaks (Ukraine, Republic of Congo, Tanzania, Democratic Republic of Congo)

2020 (H5N8) - 1 outbreak (Ukraine, Slovakia)

Аннотация к докладу:
 Птицы H5N1 был зарегистрирован в 2005-2006 г.г. - 42 вспышки в Крыму, Харькове, Одессе и Сумах, в 2008 г. - 3 вспышки в Крыму

Интересные факты:
 Домашняя птица: курица, утка, гусь, индейка
 Дикая птица: лебедь-шипун, баклан

Во время весенней миграции часть птиц мигрировала на север-восток. Максимальная дистанция - 2000 км, некоторые птицы преодолели дистанцию за 3-4 дня. На время гнездования птицы находились в России.

Согласно результатам кольцевания, география миграции очень обширна. Основные направления миграции уток весной это Восток и Север, небольшая часть птиц мигрирует на Запад и Юг.

Ringling results

Directions of migration of wild ducks from the South Ukraine by the results of ringling (October for Bird Ringing, Akavia A.R.).

According to the ringling results in the Southern Ukraine, the geography of the ring findings is very wide. The predominant direction of mallards from Akavia Nova during spring migration is Eastern and Northern and much less - to the West and South. The maximum duration of return of ring is up to 10.5 years, and the largest migratory distance is 3206 km.

If you are thinking: they would never do that, because then they could also hit friendly countries, we remind you that US authorities have conducted several shocking experiments (such as the Tuskegee scandal) on their own population over the past century. Also, the Spanish flu pandemic was most likely the result of a military (vaccination) experiment. And if the lives of its own citizens do not count in the Pentagon, then certainly not those of 'friendly' countries.

The captured documents also show that more than 140 containers of ectoparasites from bats, fleas and ticks were moved abroad from the biolab in Kharkov. The Americans have managed to remove most of their bio-research documentation from the laboratories in Kiev, Kharkov and Odessa.

Negotiations failed again due to obstinate attitude of Kiev

Today, negotiations between Russia and Ukraine on a cease-fire failed again. The parties are still diametrically opposed; as long as the regime in Kiev refuses to implement the Minsk Accords, Russia insists on demilitarizing and de-nazifying Ukraine anyway, and the offensive will continue. Moscow is also demanding that the ban on the Russian language and culture be lifted in the country. (4)

In recent years, the Western-backed fascist regime Zelensky has severely discriminated against and oppressed the population in the Donbass, to the point that there was literally a creeping genocide. In the end, President Putin had no choice but to intervene militarily to protect these people.

With the NATO/Zelensky group continuing to refuse to negotiate seriously with Russia, the time seems near when the Russian military will no longer hold back. For example, there are signs of an upcoming major advance of tanks to take possession of Kiev and other major cities. It is possible that the Russian air force will also be deployed for the first time. This has so far been withheld because Putin - unlike what the West has done in Iraq, Libya and so many other countries - does NOT want to flatten the country.

In any case, international analysts are in agreement that if it continues like this it is done with Ukraine, and that not Russia, but the obstinate attitude of Kiev and the West is to blame (as, for example, the famous political science professor Mearsheimer (University of Chicago) predicted back in 2015 (6)). Since Kiev has given citizens the right to take up arms (7), the country is in danger of falling into total chaos and becoming a second Syria.

'Friday night will be a wonderful night for the whole world'

'Friday night will be a beautiful night for the whole world,' the Kremlin is said to have declared yesterday. Possibly this refers to the announced self-shutdown of the global Internet, and the switch to Rusnet, Russia's own Internet. But why this should be "wonderful" for the whole world is not clear. A Russian official explained that Russia has embarked on a path from which there is no return, because the Kremlin refuses to submit to NATO. (5)

What does this mean? The U.S. ambassador yesterday called on his countrymen to leave Russia immediately. Meanwhile, the Russian Defense Ministry pointed out that NATO aircraft are conducting reconnaissance flights over Poland for the Ukrainian military. (8) That means active assistance to Russia's enemy, which could be interpreted in Moscow as an indirect declaration of war.

'West WANTS war'

'We shouldn't welcome this war as some kind of video game,' responds American economist Martin Armstrong. For 'if Russia really is on the verge of collapse, it is not risking anything by pushing the button. We desperately need a peacemaker.' Unfortunately, 'no one in the West is willing to even talk. All they do is spew hatred. This seems to clearly show that they WANT war - not peace... Without a peacemaker, total war is fast approaching. Unfortunately, peacemakers are nowhere to be found.' (9)

Are YOU willing to sacrifice your life and the lives of your children for the goals of the Western US/EU/NATO/WEF power bloc, which knows in Russia its greatest opponent of the Great Reset and the Fourth Reich from the quivers of Klaus Schwab?

If so, as a totally disinformed and brainwashed useful idiot, keep waving your blue-yellow Ukraine flag enthusiastically, and above all deposit some more money into a giro number to help the Nazi regime in Kiev plunge us into World War III, and thus bring an end to us all.

In the past, the utmost was done to keep depressed people from committing suicide; in the year 2022, entire peoples in the West have surrendered with open eyes to an inky suicidal mass hypnosis spirit, which is promoted 24/7 by politics and media and now seems so powerful that only the dazzling flashes of nuclear explosions can break it.

Only then it will be too late.
