

The Scroll Of The Wind

The words of Glarth the Prophet of the Forest and the words of Nook, my brother, and my grand father Aldaron the Huntsman of the Forest. These are the words that Aldaron gave me when I was walking about under the trees that are new:

"Why are you walking around? Shouldn't you be preparing the forest for war?"

SO I said: "What war?" And he said: "For a certainly, the forest you see today will be uprooted."

So I went to alert my brothers. So I said this on the day that I came to my brother Revan in the Nova Cave: "Brother, I am no warrior. I am a prophet." And I went on to tell him all the things that Aldaron had said, but I was careful to leave out the bit where the forest will be uprooted. (Because I didn't even believe my grand father). So I enquired of the forest by Nook my brother saying: "Please, tell me, is my grand father really telling the truth or is he just going crazy? Will the forest be uprooted?"

So Nook said: "He is speaking in tongues." So I went to the people and said: "Come, those of you who want to speak in tongues." But only Lokoth the Vulture said: "I will."

SO I immediately rejected her, because of her badness. And I sensed in her heart an evil wish.

(The next day)

So I used the prophet sword to write a new prophecy in the snow.

"The vultures will be cursed if they do not make true all the words of Aldaron my grand father when he said: "The vultures will fly out on Gorgoroth and battle the dragons there." So if they do, I will give them three thrones in the forest. One in the south, one in the west and one in the north. They will be able to enter the forest, but they will not enter the highest forest where Nameless is. Because they are the offspring of discord.”

In the final years of Manwe the Lord of Air and Wind, he gave his rank to the son of Wind Akkar. Now this is what Akkar's youth was like: A wind blew. Yes an especially strong wind blew. Did it blow against the sea? Did it blow against the land? Did it blow against the mountains? Pick one. A, B or C? The answer is.....

C. It blew against the mountains. Because the wind was so strong, it cut a chunk of the rock out of the side of the mountain called Ered Mithrim. (This mountain was cool and peaceful, but today it was NOT). And this great rock fell onto the pool and splashed the water. It killed 63 life forms: Swans and ducks, frogs and mice. Their skulls were fossils in the rocks from that day. Then the years passed over the rock, and it sunk into the watery deep. Then the winds came once more, about 300 years later. And this time it blew the sea, and the sea became like a restless horse. It splashed all over the shores, and it brought up the rock out of the pools, and the skulls of the fossils of the beasts that it had killed. And that rock floated through the marshy lands and came to rest near Ered Wether. (SO the elves called it Weather Rock). But they noticed it had faces of beasts in it. And the wind blew, and it formed a man made of beast bones. This man was called: "Born of Wind." He had no childhood. He was already a grown man. So the elves taught him elvish. And he could speak the language of the wind. So they called him: WindBorn. So Wind Born was howling like a wolf. And the elves got tired of him, so they killed him. And Wind Born was buried in the marshes of Hithlum. But the winds passed over him, and in time, Manwe came to the place where his grave was.

And he said: "This was no coincidence." So WindBorn woke from his death sleep, and had the appearance of a ghost.

flew. When it landed on Ach To, it was given the name: "Man of Wind". In time, Manwe died. And the Wind

 2nd   CoffeeCow 6d 15h 17m 35s 70M080 70M080 70M080	1st   Sled 8d 5h 53m 47s  My first win True Time October 2020 DAMEN SPIKE GAMES HQ	 3rd   Akkar 6d 3h 38m 18s D9CE 9E7702D0P SLED
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

what? His face was see through. In fact, he had the head of a swan and the legs of a frog. "Go, you beast, manifest." Said Manwe. But the beast was unwilling. It walked aimlessly in the land. So in time it flew. Yes, it learned to fly. And it

Man became learned in the ways of men. In fact, he manifested the form of a man and went about like a warrior. He became especially strong, and his name was Skylinr the Strong. And he fought mighty foes and slew them. So he called himself The Killer. But Manwe was aware of his name, and said: "Your name must be from now on 'Harthan', meaning, Harper of the Wind." But Akkar refused, because his name meant Killer, he wanted to stay popular with his killer friends. But he regretted this. So he turned into a bad man, for a while. But then he came back to Orome and said: "O Orome (AKA Aldaron) and Nook, forgive me." So they forgave him. This is what Akkar did: "He was slaughtered, vanquished, by the great mutant orc. And his trident became the possession of Pythas. But he did not know there was a trident of wind (because Manwe never told him)."

THE TRIDENT OF WIND WAS LOST. IT HAS BEEN FOUND? This is to whoever has it: "You will be followed by a windy spirit until you give the trident to Akkar, who is the rightful owner of it!"

A few days ago, before I wrote this scroll, I figured out that my life is not meaningless, in fact, I am a prophet. So I will prophecy, not fight, because my warrior skills have faded. yes, I am no longer a warrior in the forest. But I will fight ONLY IF my brother Revan says: "Fight, Glarthir. You MUST fight!" So I will take up my cosmic sword together with my prophet sword and fight. But if he does not, I will write prophecies in the snow with my sword. Because it is fitting to use my sword for a prophetic purpose!

FUNERAL OF MANWE
(Date to follow)
(Time) idk yet

Why should we not have a funeral for Manwe after all these years? (So I am planning it).

F U N E R A L O F
A N C A L A G O N

(Date to follow)

Prophecy: It is certainly so.

Ancalagon WILL DIE! How?

LOOKS AT GIRL