A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITORS

At your service

CAN JAMES BOND save us? Perhaps not from the virus, or the nagging feeling of a world still not spinning properly on its axis, but maybe from the sense of melancholy as summer recedes and the autumn nights draw in. We're sure he can, if only for a few hours at the cinema in the next week or so, as Daniel Craig embarks on a final assignment that is rich with the potential to engage and entertain, just as his previous four Bond films have done. He has been described, by many better qualified than us, as the best Bond, certainly the finest interpreter of the role since Sean Connery.

Six years is a long time to wait between films, but Covid didn't help. In fact, Bond was an early casualty of lockdown, the original release date for No Time to Die being April 2020. Needless to say, even a man on Her Majesty's secret service couldn't risk breaking cover while cinemas were closed, but now, after several false dawns, the film will be released in cinemas across the country on 30 September.

On page 8, Craig and the film's producer – and guardian of the franchise – Barbara Broccoli tell us about the trials of bringing the film to the screen. And how Craig has changed Bond. Because his 007 is a secret agent for our times: vulnerable as well as tough; flawed, certainly, but also open to change. Broccoli volunteers that when she hired Craig she wanted a Bond for the 21st century. His successor will need to be a Bond for a post-pandemic world.

Will that world include cinemas? Since March 2020, cinema has been brought to its knees, while the likes of Netflix, Amazon Prime and Disney+ have boomed. In our interview Broccoli explains why she believes a Bond film has to be experienced first on a big screen. Certainly, Craig's farewell appearance will boost an entertainment business ravaged by pandemic protocols. But will that be enough to save the film industry? Will the next Bond be first glimpsed on the small screen?

James Bond is no dinosaur

Ian Fleming's original 007 is woke enough for our times

THIS WEEK SEES the premiere of No Time to Die, Daniel Craig's last Bond film. He's given us a woke 007, who's tender, cries and gets into the shower in his tuxedo to comfort a woman... Coming out of the sea in skimpy shorts made him the sex object, not Eva Green.

Bond's creator, Ian Fleming, died in 1964, shortly before another premiere – of Goldfinger. He was only 56, although a lifetime of booze and fags made him look at least ten years older. He'd lived just long enough to see his creation become a phenomenon and would've been delighted to know the character he'd fought so hard to get on screen was still going strong some 60 years later.

There's a lot of Fleming's Bond in Craig – the damaged public-school thug with a strong sense of justice – but a lot has changed. Would the original Bond survive in our modern world, or would cancel-culture succeed where Spectre has failed so often and finish him off for good?

As the writer of the young Bond novels I hope I have some insight into Fleming. Like most older people today, he'd be bewildered by many of the changes in society. He'd be able to mansplain the correct temperature that champagne should be served at, but he'd be all at sea trying to negotiate the correct use of pronouns. The acrimonious debate over trans issues and the idea that gender is simply a matter of choice would also be a minefield. His solution would probably be to recommend a good spanking, or a spot of barnyard judo followed by some heavy petting.

Fleming is often mocked for his belief that all women secretly desire to be ravished by a strong man. And, yes, many modern TV shows and films present diverse sexualities and male types, but the most popular, like Bridgerton, are still based around the idea of the sexy Byronic, alpha male, the brooding bad boy that women want.

'If he was still around, Fleming would be an eco-warrior'

And Fleming kicked against the old-fashioned, 1950s view that women should be simpering housewives, put on a pedestal and wooed. Many in his books were athletic and independent just like the heroines in the new film. Fleming/Bond (their views were interchangeable) wasn't a complete dinosaur. Yes, Bond had a love of petrol-guzzling cars, but Fleming was a keen naturalist and, were he still around, would probably be something of an eco-warrior.

Yes, Bond was an old Etonian who also went to Fettes (from Boris Johnson's old school to Tony Blair's), but he was also an outsider who went after dodgy millionaires and warmongers. He would hate self-serving, cheating politicians as much as the rest of us. Donald Trump is in many ways a modern Goldfinger – the nominally-determinative name, the orange colour, the love of golf, the opaquely acquired wealth, the two lairs – Trump Tower and Mar-a-Lago.

THAT'S THE THING – while Bond himself has subtly changed with each fresh incarnation, the trappings have stayed constant and taken over our world. Fleming's wild ideas have become such a part of pop culture that they've fed into modern conspiracy theories – every rich and powerful man, from Elon Musk to George Soros to Bill Gates, just has to be some kind of Bond-style supervillain, secretly planning to take over the world. Vaccines that covertly inject you with devices that connect you to a computer network, mind control transmitters disguised as telephone masts, a new life in space for the selected few...

So, would Fleming's Bond outrage millennials if he were to return? Well, he hasn't gone away. Fleming's books are still out there and still selling, and, if Eon keep the best bits of Bond's character and quietly forget those that have dated, he could easily go on for another 25 films.

FROM THE RT ARCHIVE... 23-29 SEPTEMBER 1995

WHAT WE WATCHED

RT was promising an "orgy of Austen" as Andrew Davies's adaptation of Pride and Prejudice began on Sunday. There had been a lot of hype, with newspapers speculating about daring bed scenes and full-frontal shots of Colin Firth as Mr Darcy. So how had it earned this reputation without an episode yet being shown? Producer Sue Birtwistle admitted her guilt, saying she'd told Davies that the book was "about sex and money", something he'd repeated in an interview. "I lived to regret that remark," she said. Still, the sight of Firth in a clinging wet shirt did become a classic TV moment, while the series remains beloved by Austen fans.

WHAT YOU SAID

John Dixon of Exeter was getting paranoid about a scheduling clash: "The new series The X-Files and The Roswell Incident (28 August, BBC2 and C4) were of interest to the same audience. In keeping with the spirit of these programmes, I feel a conspiracy theory coming on: the schedulers must be in cahoots with video manufacturers, trying to force us all to buy two VCRs! The truth is out there. Probably." This unfortunate occurrence didn't, though, dent the popularity of Mulder and Scully, with The X-Files running until 2002, with a revival in 2018. DAVID BROWN

WE'VE BEEN EXPECTING YOU, MR BOND

The world has waited long enough for his 007 swansong... now that it's here, star Daniel Craig and producer Barbara Broccoli look back on 18 months of Covid delays and 15 years of being Bond

INTERVIEW BY JANE MULKERRINS

TEAM 007
James Bond star Daniel Craig with co-producer
Barbara Broccoli
at the "Bond 25"
launch in 2019

BOND NEVER WALKS into a room, does he? He runs into a room, or he comes in through the window," Daniel Craig muses. "And you're not doing one take, you're doing five. So, you have to do that coming-in-through-the-window over and over again." Being James Bond is, he says, with dramatic understatement, "pretty physical".

And he should know. He's been coming in through windows, diving off bridges and wrestling on top of moving trains over the course of five films for 15 years now. In his tenure as cinema's most famous spy, Craig has, among other injuries, lost teeth and gashed his face during fight scenes for Casino Royale, tore a muscle in his shoulder on Quantum of Solace and finished filming Spectre with a broken leg. While shooting his latest, No Time to Die, in Jamaica, he severed three tendons in his ankle and was flown to the US for surgery.

None of us, fictitious spies included, is getting any younger. Bond is officially retired at the start of No Time to Die but the trailer and behind-the-scenes clips of this, the 25th film in the franchise, give no suggestion that 007 has swapped running along cranes and blowing things up for lawn bowls and early-bird specials. So, he gets pulled back into service pretty swiftly? "Maybe," teases Craig, briefly. "Yeah, of course he does."

'Bond does what it takes to keep people safe. That resonates'

BARBARA BROCCOLI

"Swiftly" is not a word anyone would use in relation to No Time to Die. Initially planned for April 2020, it finally hits cinemas this week, six years since the last Bond outing, Spectre. This globe-trotting superhero met his match in a real-life global threat to humanity and as he emerges into a post-lockdown world, some might worry that however high the stakes he faces, they're small beer compared to how the audience's lives have been upended.

But Bond movies have a licence, nay a duty, to thrill. To its producers, the communal big-screen experience remains sacred. All through the pandemic, they held their nerve, resisting any suggestion that they shrink his world to small-screen size with an on-demand release.

Barbara Broccoli, the 61-year-old daughter of legendary Bond producer Cubby, who co-produces Bond with her half-brother Michael G Wilson, declares it a "cinematic masterclass that has to be seen – at least for the first time – on the big screen". She says this conclusion to Craig's >

ALAMY; SHUTTERSTOCK

◁ five-film arc is a celebration of his specific take on the character.

“Bond’s working for Queen and country and will do whatever it takes to uphold and keep people safe,” she says. “That has a very strong resonance now, when we have had to rely on so many people to try to keep us going during this terrible 18-month period, particularly the NHS workers, the people in service for the greater good. That’s what Daniel’s Bond exemplifies. In celebrating him, we celebrate everyone who has kept us going.”

Beyond Bond, retirement is still thankfully a way off for the actor. Nevertheless, there’s no getting around it: Craig is now 53, not in his 30s, as he was when he first took on the mantle of MI6’s most famous employee. “All right, all right, there’s no need to labour the point!” he roars at me, then, mercifully, laughs. “Getting into shape for it was a lot harder than 15 years ago,” he admits. “Back then, I did it in three months, but this time, it took me about a year.”

IN A VAST HOTEL SUITE in New York’s SoHo, Craig is suitably dapper in a navy suit and open-necked shirt – despite his most un-Bond-like high-top trainers. He’s perched on one end of an enormous green sofa; at the other sits Broccoli, who, way back in October 2005, hired him to become the sixth official incarnation of Ian Fleming’s iconic secret agent.

Craig looks fit, healthy, craggily handsome but slimmer and less beefy than one might expect. “For Casino Royale, my back story was that he’s just come out of some sort of special service – SBS or the SAS, whatever it is – but he’s a soldier, he’s just getting his ‘double-O’. He squeezes into a suit.

“My intention, if I ever got a chance to do more of them, was to find the sophistication, to find the fact the suits were fitting better. Hopefully by the time I’ve finished it, he’s wearing the suit, the suit’s not wearing him.”

While Craig doing more Bond films was never really in any doubt, he admits he wasn’t sure exactly how many there would be. “I remember talking to Barbara in the back of a car in Berlin, right after the success of Casino Royale. I’d completely put everything out of my mind, and I said, ‘How many more of these are we going to do?’ She said, ‘Four!’ I was like, ‘Really?’”

And, for a moment, it did look as if he might not make it to the contracted five. In 2015, in a now notorious interview to promote Spectre, he claimed that he’d rather slash his wrists than do another Bond. When I broach the subject today,

ACTIVE SERVICE

L-R, announced as Bond by Broccoli in 2005, making his 007 debut in Casino Royale in 2006 and filming No Time to Die

“I can’t force it. People ask me stupid questions, and I find it very difficult to give straight answers. That’s probably a fault of mine. My wife [fellow actor Rachel Weisz] is a ninja at it. She’s the most charming human, and I’m in awe of how she does it. But I can’t do that.” Well, Hollywood is always going on about “authenticity”, I note. “Yes, I’m an authentic grump,” he grins, merrily.

HELPFULLY, THIS ERA of Bond has harnessed this characteristic; Craig’s taciturn portrayal of Fleming’s broken, damaged spy is a stark contrast to previous slicker, quippier portrayals from Sean Connery to Pierce Brosnan. “We were looking for someone who would redefine Bond for the 21st century,” says Broccoli. “Casino Royale is the origin story, and it’s rich with depth of character. We wanted someone who would really pull it off, and Daniel was the only person in my mind. I was determined that it was going to be him – and of course he didn’t want to do it.”

Craig sighs. “It seems silly now,” the actor admits. “I was working, I had a career [notable turns include BBC2’s Our Friends in the North and the gangster film Layer Cake] but I was also aware enough of people I knew who were really famous, and how their lives were different. I wasn’t quite sure whether I wanted that.

“I could recognise that it was a big, big deal, but my first reaction was ‘No. That’s very nice of you, thank you, but no.’ Also I thought, genuinely:

Broccoli gallantly swings in to Craig’s defence.

“That was our fault,” she admits. “It had been a long shoot. He’d had an injury. And then we said, ‘Why don’t you just do a week of press at the end of the shoot?’ This would be like saying to somebody, when they’ve run a marathon, as they cross the finish line, ‘When are you running your next one?’” She repeats, “It was our fault.”

Craig admits, “To be completely honest, I was thinking: I don’t know if I can do another one of these. I finished filming Spectre with a broken leg. To your point about being in my 50s now, I thought, ‘Do I have this in me? Do I want to go through all of this?’ I needed a break.”

He adds, a little sheepishly: “But a little more skill in the answer might have been better. I was joking, but it came across as ungrateful.”

Broccoli interjects: “They’re not used to you joking.” Craig shrugs. “I know. That’s the thing. They think I’m serious about everything.” He rolls his blue eyes.

This jocular, good-humoured if slightly blustering form is apparently his MO. But there persists a widespread public impression that he is moody and unsmiling. “I’m just not very show-bizzy,” he cries, thrusting his spade-like hands to his sides to give me some ironic jazz-hands.

DANIEL CRAIG

really? I think you might have got it wrong."

That remained his answer... until he saw a script for Casino Royale. "I got to the line when he asks for a vodka martini. The barman says, 'Shaken or stirred?' and the script said: 'Do I look like I give a f***?' I went, 'I'm in!'" (The expletive got watered down to "damn" in the final film, but the point stands.)

"Daniel has given Bond an inner life," says Broccoli. "His Bond is allowed to be vulnerable. We see him bleed, we see him cry, we see him struggle with the emotional rollercoaster that Bond has gone through over the last five movies."

After the two biggest-ever Bond movies – Sam Mendes's Skyfall (global box office: $1 billion) and Spectre ($880 million) – fears about their follow-up were stoked when writer/director Danny Boyle and writer John Hodge both left No Time to Die in August 2018.

"We sat down and said, 'You know, maybe we don't have the same vision for the movie,'" says Broccoli of Boyle's departure. "We're all adults, and we said we can't be making two different movies. So we decided to move on."

A month later, new director Cary Fukunaga, then best known for the HBO drama True Detective, was hired. Craig reckons Fukunaga and Mendes share some similarities. "They both know how important emotional plot is," he says. "When you come to write these films, you go big. You go big with the stunts, you go big with the cars, the locations, and you go big with the emotions. And this is about love. It's about family."

It was Craig's idea to bring the barnstorming Emmy-, Bafta- and Golden Globe-winning Fleabag and Killing Eve writer Phoebe Waller-Bridge on board for a comedic script polish. "She's um... what's the word – not rude, but she's impish," he ponders. "She's got a devilish humour. Her influence permeates a lot of this film. She walked that fantastic line of keeping it as a thriller and being very funny."

But, he emphasises, "Phoebe didn't come in to change Bond. She came in to spice it up for sure, but she's a Bond fan – she wasn't about to take him in a different direction." Nor, he says, was she brought in to bring more of a 'female' voice to a franchise previously pilloried for sexism and misogyny. From the outset, Craig has worked with producers to ensure the old dinosaur's worldview was challenged by strong women, not least Judi Dench's M and, in a coup for the 2012 Olympics, the Queen.

"There are certain things attached to Bond of which we would say: 'No, you can't do that any more,'" he concedes.

Such as? "Well, his attitude towards women and how the women are treated in the films. But I don't make apologies for the character I play. He's really flawed. He's got a real problem with relationships. But I think that's interesting."

There will not, I'm assuming, be Bond Girls in bikinis for this 25th iteration? "Call them that at your peril," warns Craig. "With Léa Seydoux [who plays Dr Madeleine Swann], and Ana de Armas [CIA agent Paloma], we leave it up to the audience to decide, but we know where we stand." What about nudity? "Oh, I'm naked most of the way through the movie," he quips. "He's more naked than the women; I've designed it that way. I mean, look at Casino Royale."

Oh, I have, I assure them both – many, many times. "Gosh, it's very warm in here, isn't it?" says Craig, and I see, with enormous satisfaction, that I've succeeded in making James Bond blush.

SO, HOW COMFORTABLE is he with the level of objectification that has become his mantle in Bond, thanks in large part to those blue swimming trunks? "I'm OK with it. I knew what I was doing. They showed me some shorts, some swim trunks, and I went, 'Those'. Because of Ursula Andress, and because of that look, I wanted to flip it on its head."

Bond is not, however, about to explicitly address the #MeToo movement. "We're very conscious of what's going on in the world at the moment, but we're still storytellers, we're still trying to entertain an audience," he says. "We're not trying to shove a political message, or any message, down anybody's throats."

There are, of course, those who wish that they would, with the appointment next of a female Bond, or an actor of colour taking the role. Who is Broccoli considering for the seventh iteration?

"I'm still here, you know!" cries Craig, throwing his hands skyward in mock horror. OK then, would he support a more diverse appointment as his replacement? He sighs again. "The answer to that is very simple. There should simply be better parts for women and actors of colour. Why should a woman play James Bond when there should be a part just as good as James Bond, but for a woman?"

FOR THE LOVE OF MONEYPENNY

Naomie Harris on being Bond's equal – and Daniel Craig

BACK IN APRIL last year, No Time to Die was the first major movie to be kicked into the long grass by Covid-19. The cinema industry would never have forgiven its distributors if a blockbuster of this magnitude had slipped into TV on-demand libraries like so many other releases. Now that Daniel Craig, in his fifth outing as 007, finally strides into cinemas, it's almost akin to an announcement that the pandemic is in retreat: Bond is back and normal life can resume.

"I feel relief and also pride," says Naomie Harris, who plays Moneypenny, M's secretary. "It is a phenomenal movie."

She adds that "Covid Bond" is very much a 21st-century Bond, reinvented as a modern man.

We all know Bond is a hero, but an 18-month-long hiatus is going some, even for him. "There

There is no human being who understands the character of Bond as well as Daniel. He lives, eats, breathes it. That is why he's so good. He understands it as no one else."

Perhaps Harris is modestly underestimating her own reading of a storied character in the legendary franchise. Moneypenny now has a first name (Eve) and she's not as ready to, shall we say, fawn over her boss, as she once did. It's Harris' third time playing the role, after Skyfall and Spectre. "When you meet her in Skyfall, she is feisty and full of energy, with a sort of puppy love for Bond. By the time of this film, she has proved herself. We see what works for her and what she isn't going to risk her life for. She still has this love for James, but it's a deep loyalty and respect."

Harris is under no illusions of the importance of a woman of colour taking such a central role. "I think it's incredibly important. Growing up as a black woman, on-screen images and representations were so few and far between, so to play such an intelligent and capable woman who can inspire other women – and young women – is hugely important. It's a role I have always wanted to play, and it has meant so much to me. The film is part of British culture and that's why it's so influential. To play a role that shows the strength of women is a privilege."

‘He lives, eats and breathes it. That is why he’s so good’

has been a lot of frustration," says Harris. "Everyone wanted to release the movie sooner but this is a film designed to be seen in a cinema. It would have been a disservice not to release it as a cinematic film. There is a whole journey undertaken when you watch a movie together with strangers. It makes it much more fun and this is one of the best Bond movies of all time. It will not disappoint."

Harris hails Craig for his hands-on approach. "He is one of the film's producers and he has made sure his voice has been heard, using the power that he has to make an impact on how Bond evolves.

ACCORDING TO HARRIS, the strength of women on and off screen in the film industry has changed beyond recognition, thanks in part to the #MeToo movement. "After decades of abuse of women within the film industry, there has been a complete culture shift, over an incredibly short period of time, say a matter of five years. Now you get producers standing up at the start of a shoot saying, 'There will be zero tolerance of any bullying or harassment here.' It's a completely different environment." Thanks in part to actors like herself? "I can't credit myself with being part of it, but I'm proud of coming into this profession, setting my own standards and sticking to them."

She'll also be in cinemas this autumn as the villain in Marvel sequel Venom: Let There Be Carnage, but even being part of that universe can't compete with the force field of a 007 movie. "Bond is unlike anything else I have ever worked on," she says. "Maybe it's because it's British and follows a British way of making films. And there is no other franchise that has lasted this long. I have never been part of anything that is so loved and so anticipated. What makes it different is that at the helm of Bond is a brother-and-sister team who make the decisions. With Marvel, it's a collective of producers. One is a family and one's a business."

How about a fourth turn as Moneypenny? "That's in the hands of the producers. But if it's my last outing, I'll leave with gratitude. Bond has changed my career and opened so many doors to me. I have nothing but gratitude." ROSIE MILLARD

Let's dance!

Greg Wise 55, ACTOR & Karen Hauer

Greg, what made you want to sign up for Strictly?

GREG WISE I'm doing it for my sister [Clare Wise, who died from cancer in 2016]. I was her carer for the last months of her life and she left the world in a glitterball coffin. And what's amazing about it is, our first day of rehearsal was the fifth anniversary of her death. She is absolutely behind me, pushing me on, and hopefully I will make her laugh a great deal over these weeks – if I last that long.

That's a very poignant reason for doing the show...

GREG I'm not going to wear a black armband and do all of that, but this is the reason I'm doing it. I think what is really useful about this is that I've spent so much time in the past five years publicly speaking about death and grief, and how we all have to talk about it. And of course, so many people over the past 18 months have suffered tremendous loss. There's been death and there's been grief that is also coloured with shame and guilt, because you haven't been able to be with the ones you love.

Before Strictly came along, you and your wife, Emma Thompson, had a break booked for the autumn. Is it true that was meant to be your first holiday together for seven years?

GREG Yes. One of the things about the work we do is that we have to be able to pivot really quickly, because things come in and you have to make a decision. Em's done three films back to back since January. But a month or so ago, we sat down and went, "OK, so, we've got this planned, we've got that planned, we really wanted to do that. Well, it's all gone. Excellent. This is the shape now." But if I get kicked off Strictly early, we're still going to go on holiday.

Do you and Emma watch Strictly together?

GREG We were staying at our cottage over lockdown last year and we don't have a television there, but when we came back to London, we of course watched the last few episodes of the last series because Bill [Bailey] is a good chum.

Did Bill give you any advice and sway you to do the show?

GREG Bill has been very kind in the past few months, when I was working out whether I wanted to do it. He was saying, "Well, you know, it's this, and it's that." But it is – in Bill's words – "top japes".

Karen, how does it feel to be back on Strictly this year, despite Covid restrictions still being in place?

KAREN HAUER It feels good. I feel really grateful to be working, and to be doing what I love, because it was taken away from all of us. This is my therapy, you know – this is what I've lived by for 30 years and this is the job that I love. It was really hard to be stuck at home, but now I get to be on this amazing stage, and for my tenth year as well. I'm really happy to be back.

How have your training sessions been so far?

KAREN We've had a few, which have been nice, actually. I guess in the beginning, for me, it's about assessing what Greg can do. We're getting used to each other, and he's getting used to my teaching techniques. He likes working hard, which is a major plus for me. He already has a really good frame – so far, so good.

Greg, being a part of Strictly comes with lots of extra attention. Are you ready for that?

GREG For the first time ever, I've got myself a press agent, someone who can keep the rottweilers away! I've spent the past 30 years of my career trying to avoid all of this, but maybe when I'm dancing, I'll be a character. Perhaps I'll be playing someone who's learning how to dance...

Tilly, tell us – what do your parents make of you doing Strictly?

TILLY RAMSAY I think my mum is really nervous, but excited – and just trying to show the excited part. And, gosh, Dad is over-the-moon excited. Honestly, every day, without fail, I wake up to him calling me, playing the Strictly theme tune and trying to dance around my room, and I'm like, "No, stop!" It's sweet the first couple of times, but when it gets to a couple of months in, you're like, "Please, stop!"

You and your dad make lots of TikTok videos of the pair of you dancing. Are you on a mission to get him to sign up for Strictly in future?

TILLY I think it'd be great to see him dance [on the show]. He's actually really upset that I've got a new dance partner. You know, he's been my dance partner for a long time now [on TikTok], and he said, "But you will still dance with me?" And I'm like, "Maybe you'll have to go and find a dance partner, Dad."

Nikita, what have you made of Tilly's dancing?

NIKITA KUZMIN She is very, very fast and she has a very good attitude towards learning, which is awesome. We've been laughing a lot. Honestly, if we just keep up this same mood and we keep on laughing, that's the most important thing.

TILLY He's a very good and patient teacher. It's definitely tough. After five minutes of training, I was so hot because I was really going for it, but I did genuinely enjoy it.

And how have you found the glitz and glamour of Strictly?

TILLY It's definitely very new territory for me. I'm not one to have lots of make-up and dresses and stuff. I've only ever worn heels before for my 18th birthday. We're learning in trainers, and then we're going to perfect it in the heels. It's slightly out of my comfort zone, but that's what it's all about – pushing yourself.

Have you got any other commitments at the same time as Strictly?

TILLY [laughs] I'm starting university, studying psychology! Luckily, quite a lot of that is online and the first term covers a lot of my A-level course, so it's pretty relaxed. And there are no exams or anything this term. My main focus is dancing, but it's slightly unlucky timing. I've got a great support system at home and we'll learn to take everything with a pinch of salt.

Robert Webb 48, ACTOR AND NOVELIST & Dianne Buswell

Robert, you performed a very memorable Flashdance routine for Comic Relief in 2009. Was that an accurate reflection of what we can expect from you on Strictly this year?

ROBERT WEBB We haven't even touched the surface of my abilities. With Dianne's help, I should be pressing my fingers against the boundaries of my own talent [laughs]. I mean, since I've been watching a lot of Strictly – and I've been watching a lot of Strictly – I can see that Flashdance wasn't a tricky routine at all. It was a lot of fun, but it was basically a sort of charity shindig. I'm also watching it back more critically than I used to; it's actually really quite sloppy and easy-peasy!

Dianne, what did you make of Robert's Flashdance routine?

DIANNE BUSWELL It impresses me even more every time I watch it, and I can see the potential in that. He's more than capable, absolutely, and I'm very excited to push him to his limits. He's very coordinated, and I think he's going to really sell each dance to its maximum potential. I'm thrilled.

Robert, you had open-heart surgery a couple of years ago, and you've said that it gave you a bit of a different perspective, not only on life but also your career. Is that what ultimately led you to sign up for Strictly?

ROBERT It was one of lots of good reasons, really. It wasn't obvious to me to do the show, I must say. I mean, as much as anything, curiosity got the best of me. What would it be like to say yes? And when I decided to do it, I was really happy with that decision. I think I'm going to have a brilliant time.

Did you ask for any medical advice before you decided to take part?

ROBERT I had an echocardiogram quite regularly after I came out of hospital, but I did text the cardiologist and said, "I'm going to do this very energetic thing on live TV..." She gave me a stress echocardiogram, where I got an injection that stimulates adrenaline. That basically replicates being in a house fire – or being on live television doing a dance – and my heart behaved perfectly, so she was very happy with that.

I exercise fairly regularly now, and I know what my heart does when I'm doing energetic things, but I just wanted to add in what it's like when there's also a lot of adrenaline rushing around. I just wanted to be absolutely sure. And it's all good. Nobody needs to flinch when it looks like I'm exerting myself.

Are you prepared for all of the extra attention that being a part of Strictly brings?

ROBERT I don't know how much you can prepare for that, really. I've been in shows that people like, but never a massive programme like this. But it should be all right.

When the driver dropped me off at the wrong bit of Elstree Studios, I asked somebody, "Can you tell me where they're doing Strictly?" And they went, "What department are you? Are you lighting? Are you wardrobe?" It was literally the first time I've ever said this sentence: "I'm one of the... celebrities."

They were like, "Oh, sorry, love." So, you know, there's no chance of me getting too carried away.

Dianne, what's it been like behind the scenes at Strictly this year?

DIANNE It's amazing. I feel like last year, it was all new, wasn't it? It was all a bit scary.

But this year, I find that it's almost a new normal. It's been fine so far. We still have restrictions in place to keep us all safe, and to feel like we just know how it runs now. And it's running very smoothly.

ROBERT As a viewer, watching last year, it was really lovely, actually. There was a really nice vibe of "We're getting through this, the show must go on" kind of thing. I loved watching it.

‘I did text my cardiologist to say, ‘I’m going to be dancing on live TV...’

TOM FLETCHER

Tom Fletcher

36, McFLY SINGER

& Amy Dowden

Tom, your McFly bandmate Harry Judd won Strictly in 2011, and ten years on you’re now taking part!

TOM FLETCHER He just can’t let go of it.

It’s my turn now, Harry! [laughs]

No, it’s lovely – obviously I got to share that experience with him.

I was watching him every week. It was a huge moment for our band, and I’ve wanted to do it ever since.

Not only did Harry win Strictly, but your wife, Giovanna Fletcher, won I’m a Celebrity last year. So, no pressure...

TOM I know, I know!

Yeah, there’s a little bit of pressure, which I’m trying not to think about. But they’ve both been very supportive. I mean, I do have to walk past my wife’s jungle crown and sceptre every day, so there’s a little bit of pressure, but I just want to enjoy it.

How has the training been so far?

TOM So far, so good. We’ve only done a few steps, but it’s going well.

AMY DOWDEN He hasn’t had a long day training with me yet. Maybe he’ll feel differently later! But he’s looking really good, and I’m really impressed with how quickly he’s picked it up.

TOM I guess the worst that can happen is, I’ll forget what I’m doing in front of 12 million people on live TV. I think I’m prepared for the worst to happen, so I’m being cautiously pessimistic, and then I’ll be pleasantly surprised [laughs]. I also wear my heart on my sleeve. I’m not afraid to cry in front of people, so you’ll probably see some tears.

You’re touring with McFly at the moment. How are you going to fit training in?

TOM Amy’s coming on the tour, so she’ll soon be sick of McFly songs.

AMY Absolutely not! I’m a fan. I actually went to watch them when I was younger.

Amy, your BBC documentary Strictly Amy: Crohn’s and Me had an amazing reaction. What motivated you to make it?

AMY I just really wanted to help raise awareness. There’s so much stigma around talking about Crohn’s, I just wanted to do justice for fellow sufferers, really. It was probably the scariest thing I’ve ever done, but also the most rewarding.

Nina Wadia 52, ACTOR AND COMEDIAN & Neil Jones

Nina, you've said that this is the perfect year to do Strictly...

NINA WADIA Last year felt restrictive because there was all the isolating and this and that, but this year there's a sense of people being allowed to do what they love again. I've always loved the idea of dancing.

You also mentioned that you needed a professional who was a bit strict...

NINA You weren't meant to say that to him!

NEIL JONES She told me I wasn't allowed to be strict! But I can be now, that's great.

NADIA I do want someone who is going to say, "We really need to get it right", and then just enjoy it. I think that's the best way, isn't it?

Are you going to be putting the hours in?

NEIL We'll be dancing a lot.

NINA When I asked him the other day, I said, "How many hours do we rehearse? Is it nine to five?" I think he said, "Nine to ten... at night!"

Was that something you weren't expecting?

NINA I really wasn't. I was like, "Maybe a couple of hours, then some lunch, another couple of hours, a movie and then maybe some stretching."

You have cited Bill Bailey as someone you really enjoyed watching on Strictly...

NINA I think what Bill has done, which is so incredible and special, is show that it's anybody's game. Anyone can learn to dance at any age.

How far are you aiming to go in the competition?

NINA We're here to win! That's it. [laughs]

NEIL Yeah. And it's your birthday present, right?

NINA It's true. It's my birthday on the day of the final! I'm getting to that final! I didn't want to pay for a party, so Neil said, "Well, then just win Strictly instead."

She holds a glass of white wine in her right hand, with her index finger resting against her lips in a contemplative pose. Her hair is styled in a short, wavy blonde bob. The background features a dark, patterned wall and a large, abstract painting with warm tones. A wicker chair is visible in the lower right corner.

The birds and the bees...

It's the conversation no parent looks forward to having – so thank goodness Sex Education is sparing our blushes. But do the show's stars Gillian Anderson and Jason Isaacs allow their teenage kids to watch it?

INTERVIEWS BY JANE GARVEY

SEX EDUCATION is back for a third series on Netflix. Many British teens will have already devoured it all by now. But I'm making the bold assumption you're not a teenager. If you've never seen the show, a brief explainer is required. So, take a deep breath: somewhere in a magical part of the world that may or may not straddle the English-Welsh border is a school, Moordale Secondary, that has more in common with the schools in 1980s teen movies than good old Waterloo Road or Grange Hill. There's no talk of Ofsted, let's put it that way.

Its pupils are a delightfully varied bunch, some of whom do indeed look as though they may well have left secondary education some time ago. (Don't panic – it's not as bad as Travolta and the gang in Grease.)

But if you must quibble about mere details like this, you're missing the point.

Though you're in good company.

Gillian Anderson, who plays the show's sex therapist Doctor Jean Milburn, was initially baffled by it all herself: "I had the same conversations with my partner in just not understanding that actually, in this day and age, and with the demographic Netflix was going for, that the viewers wouldn't care [about realism]."

So leave your pedantry behind, novice viewer, and embrace this parallel ▷ ◁ universe, where just about anything is possible, whether you like it or not.

Anderson is arguably the biggest name, but Sex Education is not a star vehicle. It's very much an ensemble piece with a host of great actors. The "grown-ups", who include Samantha

GILLIAN ANDERSON

Spiro and Jim Howick (Ghosts' cheery scoutmaster Pat), are now joined by Jason Isaacs as Peter Groff, the profoundly irksome brother of Moordale's ex-head-teacher, the rather pitiful Mr Groff (Alistair Petrie – see page 25).

But Dr Jean's relationship with her decent and sweet-natured son Otis (Asa Butterfield) is at the heart of the action. He's a pupil at Moordale, and in previous series has used some of his mother's expertise to run a well-intentioned sexual advice clinic with his friend Maeve (Emma Mackey), often from the quite creepy abandoned toilets in the grounds. Which, considering you can be excluded from some British schools for a week for sporting the "wrong" haircut or having the temerity to wear trainers, is really quite something. Oops, I've done it again. This is Not Real Life, I must remember that.

SUPERFICIALLY SUPER-COOL, JEAN is a bundle of contradictions, which is one of the reasons Anderson loves to play her: "How is this woman all of these things? She's a professional therapist. She's written books. How is she going through her son's drawers and listening outside his door? She is incredibly complex and confounding sometimes." In this series, Jean is also heavily pregnant. At the age of 48.

Her on/off partner Jakob (Beck star Mikael Persbrandt) has had a vasectomy. So how has this miracle occurred?

"It is unlikely," Anderson acknowledges, "but not apparently impossible at all. If you watch the show to the end, you will find out how." I try again, but she's not having it. "No, I'm not telling you anything." Ummm. I suppose I'll have to stick with it then, because I'm baffled. Surely the child's not the result of a brief encounter with her wearying ex-husband, Otis's dad Remi (James Purefoy)? Otis will be horrified...

Meanwhile, Jason Isaacs's career has taken him from playing Lucius Malfoy in the Harry Potter franchise to a serious role in a forthcoming and critically acclaimed film about a school shooting, Mass. Bagging a role in Sex Education was significant, though: "It was the first job I did out of lockdown. I'd been like everyone else, slobbering around the house in sweatpants, wondering was the world coming to an end? Would I ever do my job again?"

He's clearly delighted to be a part of this but feels it's impossible to say why it's been such a hit with its target audience: "Success has many mothers. There are many people who tell you why something works. But no one really knows. I've done a billion interviews about Harry Potter where people ask me why they're successful, and I've heard my fellow cast members wax lyrical about whatever theme it is and whatever's in the zeitgeist at that moment. But nobody really knows, otherwise we'd all be doing it."

Sex Education's cast are black, white, straight, gay, bisexual, asexual and non-binary. Isaac (George Robinson), a wheelchair user introduced in series two, is back for this series. And he's in no way a benign, cosy figure, but quick-witted and dry. The adults are all at least as messed up as the teens. The scripts are sharp, natural and, despite the heightened setting, as close to real life as any comedy-drama ever gets. Issues already covered include abortion, sexting, female orgasms, sexual assault, consent, coming out, bullying, and porn.

Ah yes, porn. Most of us are well aware that children are poorly placed to make much sense of it, but we prefer not to engage our offspring in conversations on the subject. Where to start? What to say? Sex Education is all about debunking myths, busting taboos and inclusivity. It may not always get it right – but I bet many parents the world over are very glad it's trying.

Isaacs and his wife, actor and producer Emma Hewitt, have two teenage daughters, Lily (19) and Ruby (16). Is he happy that they, and their peers, get their sex education from the show?

He couldn't be clearer: "I'd hate to sound like a snake oil salesman, but actually I think Sex Education is the best thing ever to happen to sex education. I don't think any parent could do it better. I don't think any book could ▷

BACK TO SCHOOL

Steve (Chris Jenks) and Aimee (Aimee Lou Wood) are an item, but will Maeve (Emma Mackey) ever get together with Otis?

◁ do it better. There are so many images and messages and stories out there that misrepresent the world and confuse and scare people about what they should and shouldn't be doing."

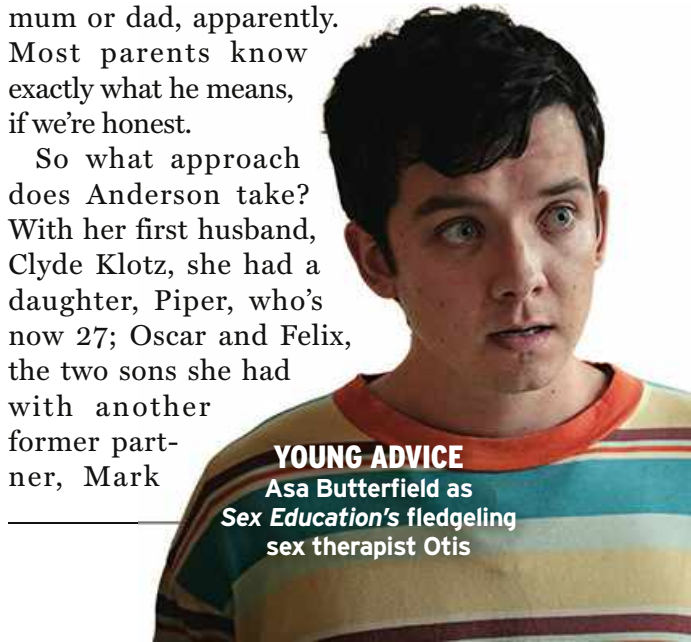

And porn? "The impression that sex is this thing that happens between grotesquely shaped people, that it makes people scream, and that women like being treated roughly..."

HE COULDN'T SOUND more like the average beleaguered parent of 21st-century teens. So does he talk to his daughters about it all? "I don't understand the argument that any young person would be comfortable with their parent talking to them. That's not a conversation any dad or frankly any mum wants to have with their child. But I do think by watching Sex Education, they realise there's every shade of desire, and the most important thing is conversation." Well, yes. But just not with your mum or dad, apparently. Most parents know exactly what he means, if we're honest.

So what approach does Anderson take? With her first husband, Clyde Klotz, she had a daughter, Piper, who's now 27; Oscar and Felix, the two sons she had with another former partner, Mark

HEADMASTER'S REPORT

Michael Groff, the Moordale headmaster suspended in series two, is a man who looks as if he smells of dead man's tweed and whose snap response to his son's failing grades was to send him to military school. Thankfully, Alistair Petrie (The Night Manager), who plays Groff, adopts a much more open approach. "People ask me, 'Should we watch the show with the children?' I'd say, if you've got teenagers, sit down with them and watch it. Yes, you need a cushion. Yes, you'll be hiding behind it. But do it. I'm a passionate advocate because it'll open lines of communication. You'll be able to laugh and share the awkwardness."

The scenes depicted in the show are a far cry from Petrie's schooldays. "I was at an all-boys school, where sex education was non-existent," he says. "I didn't really meet a member of the opposite sex until I was about 17."

Groff has had a catastrophic fall from grace: his marriage is in bits, as is his relationship with his gay son Adam (Vigil's Connor Swindells). Yet as we watch him deal with his crises, a feeling emerges in our prefrontal cortex. Could it really be... empathy?

"He's forced to have a very good look at himself in the mirror and decide if he likes and understands what he sees," Petrie says. "He started as the antagonist, a bully, but rather than write him off as that, what's interesting is to try and discover why someone is a bully."

A father to three sons, Petrie has relied on his own experience as both parent and son to feed his performance. "All parents make mistakes. It's part of being human. My father made some mistakes, and when I became a father, I was determined not to repeat them. As an older man, I had to do a lot of reflecting about my father's shortcomings."

Has he felt a paternal responsibility to the young cast? "We're all big kids at heart, happy playing dress-up. At first I was just going to go in quietly, do my business and let the kids do their thing. The first day was a massive set-piece – the entire youth movement was there. The energy, the joy and the yelling were brilliantly uncontrollable. I had a book under my arm and thought I'd sit in the corner. Ncuti Gatwa [Eric] turned around and threw his arms in the air with this massive grin. Within ten seconds we were playing some absurd game. It was them that made me feel welcome."

So they don't bombard him for life advice? "I'm not the old actor in the corner anecdote-ing away, suggesting how marvellous things were back in the day. But I've been asked practical questions. One was, 'How does a mortgagework?' " KELLY-ANNE TAYLOR

LOST CONTROL
Suspended head Michael Groff (Alistair Petrie)

Griffiths, are now 14 and 12 respectively. All three live with Anderson in London.

Their mother is now globally famous for playing a sex therapist, which she jokingly nods to in her Twitter bio of "Shag Specialist". On Instagram, she invites submissions of photos under the hashtags #penisoftheday and #yoni-oftheday, inspired by the suggestive art in Jean's home. It all sounds very promising. She's surely our woman!

'I told my children they weren't allowed to watch it'

GILLIAN ANDERSON

But no, she says she doesn't always get it right either: "It's embarrassing, and you end up saying things that you think afterwards, 'Why did I say that?' It's a lose/lose situation. In my own experience, I think they need to know that even if it's awkward, they can come and say anything they need to say, or admit to anything they need to admit to. And unless we extend that safety net to them, they're not going to say that."

Does she know whether her younger children have watched Sex Education? "I hope they haven't. When it first came out, I told them they weren't allowed to." I hate to break it to Anderson, but I think there's a chance they might have seen it.

"I have no control over what they do at their friends' houses. I have no control over what their friends show them. And I have had conversations with them about certain aspects of the show. The degree to which the show is colour-blind and accepting of everybody, no matter how they wish to show up in the world, is one of the most important things about it."

Would she have liked the programme to have been around in her adolescence? Definitely: "Oh my God! When you just want to die and curl up and not go to school or reveal yourself... to be able to witness those same experiences in other human beings that you can also look up to, because they're dealing with it in their own way, and trying and failing... I wish it was out there when I was younger."

As SEX EDUCATION hadn't been invented in her youth, where did she get her own information from? There's a pause. "Uh... Good question. I don't remember whether I had lessons at school or not. I don't believe I had it at home. I probably had it from boys."

Right. Which may not have been without certain disadvantages? "Exactly."

Anderson does acknowledge, though, that she probably wouldn't have changed her behaviour, even if she had been armed with all the best advice available. "There was nobody in my life that was going to be able to tell me not to do something. If I wanted to head in a direction that wasn't good for me, nobody was going to tell me otherwise."

‘It was very easy to fall in love’

Patricia Hodge on replacing Diana Rigg as *All Creatures
Great and Small*’s Mrs Pumphrey – and falling for the charms of Tricki Woo

INTERVIEW BY LAURA CRAIK

PATRICIA HODGE IS sipping tea and effusing about one of her co-stars. “He really is like no one you’ve ever met in your life,” she swoons. “An absolute sweetie. It was very easy to fall in love with him.”

Who could be worthy of such praise? Given Hodge’s illustrious 50-year career on stage and screen, she could be talking about anyone. Hugh Grant, perhaps, with whom she worked on 2018’s A Very English Scandal as Jeremy Thorpe’s mother, Ursula? John Hurt, star of 1977’s The Naked Civil Servant? Or perhaps Nicholas Ralph, Samuel West or Callum Woodhouse, her current co-stars in Channel 5’s All Creatures Great and Small?

The answer is none of the above. The object of her affection is Derek, the pekinese dog who is Tricki Woo to her Mrs Pumphrey in the hit series. But what Derek may lack in height and articulacy, he appears to more than make up for in charm.

“Derek just loves humanity,” says Hodge. “He loves being held. Sometimes he purrs so loudly that they have to take him out when he’s not in shot, because you can hear nothing else. The dog handler is an amazing woman called Jill [Clark], and Derek is one of her own. He was a rescue. Jill said that from the moment she took him in, he’s had this placid nature.

He’s wonderful. Whenever we’ve finished a scene, I don’t want to let him go.”

Hodge joins the cast after the producers wrote to her asking whether she would be interested in taking over the role from Dame Diana Rigg, who passed away in September 2020, after filming on the first series had ended.

“They sent me a very gracious letter, explaining that with the loss of Dame Diana, they had to make a decision about whether to lose this popular character altogether, or keep her on,” Hodge explains.

“My opening question was, ‘Do you want me to step into Diana’s shoes exactly?’, because I would have found that difficult. And they said, ‘No – absolutely make her who you think she should be.’”

DID SHE INSTINCTIVELY know how to play Mrs Pumphrey? “I had to work on it a bit. I understood the nature of her, but I wasn’t sure what she looked like. The make-up department sent through some images, then I went up to Yorkshire for the day and tried various costumes and make-up. I didn’t want to use a wig. We worked with my own hair because I wanted her to be real in that sense.”

Hodge met Rigg several times, and recalls their last encounter. “I was doing a play in the West End, and she came to a matinee. I didn’t know she was in the theatre until there was a knock on my dressing-room door. She came in to see me, and she was so wonderfully generous and kind, and I was so touched, because obviously I admired her so much. That meant a lot, and I’m very glad that I have that memory.”

Hodge’s Mrs Pumphrey is a wonderful creation: polished, haughty and deliciously arch. “Oh, I only eat a Fortnum’s myself, but Tricki is a little less fussy,” she says in one episode, after her notoriously indulged pooch is offered a home-made biscuit by Mrs Hall.

“I can’t judge how she comes across, but she’s not an aristocrat,” Hodge muses. “She’s a wealthy woman whose backstory is that she was married to a very successful Northern industrialist of some sort. She has a very grand lifestyle, but she lives alone, and therefore she loves being a pillar of the community, and queen bee to a certain extent. But there’s no sense of self-importance there. She’s a very generous woman who loves being a hostess because she can, while making people’s lives better as a result. But her entire life is the dog.”

‘I would have found it hard to step into Diana’s shoes exactly’

At 74, Hodge is old enough to remember the original version of All Creatures Great and Small, first aired on BBC1 in 1978, and also knows many of the original cast. “I worked with Peter Davison [who played Tristan] on a TV comedy series called Holding the Fort. I’ve also crossed paths with Christopher Timothy [who played James], and worked with Robert Hardy [who played Siegfried] several times. So I knew them all. Lynda Bellingham and Carol Drinkwater I knew as well. I knew the whole team.” ▷

Hart in Miranda; and (below) as Jeremy Thorpe's mother Ursula in A Very English Scandal

◁ While she agrees that not all reboots stand the test of time, she was “captivated” by Channel 5’s version. “They’ve done it beautifully. I love its storybook quality: it’s almost like watching a picture book come to life.

“Nostalgia has an important part to play at the moment. We all feel a bit insecure. So many lines have been rubbed out; so much that we anticipated has changed direction. Life is moving very fast, at a pace that we almost can’t keep up with, and therefore it’s good to be reassured with shows like All Creatures, Call the Midwife and Downton Abbey, which hark back to a time when life was that much simpler.

“But in all those shows, it’s the human interaction that makes them timeless. Things move at a slower pace. Modern-day dramas have to cut from this to that, but these actually expand. Moments expand, and there’s a great deal of delicacy. You get the complexities of human nature. The slower pace allows you to peel back and look more closely, in the same way that a really great novel is all about the details.”

IT’S A PRIVILEGE speaking to an actor who has seen television go through so many changes. “Time is so squeezed now. [At the BBC], we used to be able to rehearse for a week or two before every episode of something. Not any more. You have to go in and just produce it in the moment, and if something’s already up and running, you’ve got to work out exactly what the tone is, if it’s dark or comedic, gentle or tough. You have to pick it up by osmosis, really. It’s very difficult.”

Hodge has played some wonderful roles in her career – including Mary Fisher (in The Life and Loves of a She-Devil), Jean Brodie (on stage), Diana Cooper (in Edward and Mrs Simpson) and Ursula Thorpe – but is perhaps most fondly remembered as Miranda Hart’s mother Penny in the BBC comedy Miranda, for whom everything was “such fun”.

“I do like playing eccentrics,” she smiles. “You can reach outside yourself and have more fun.” Yet she has never seemed to be pigeonholed. Was that deliberate?

“It’s really nice that you’ve observed that, because I have tried to avoid it. Often they want you to do what they know you can do. Out of the things you’re offered, all you can do is try and create as much variety as you can. But people want to pigeonhole you. They remember what they want to remember.”

Does she feel that roles for women have become more fully rounded in recent years? “I do think that there are more dramas created with interesting women at the heart of them. But there are still limitations within that, beyond a certain age. The roles now for people of my age are generally the maiden aunt who sits and makes waspish comments from the side of the ballroom, or else you’ve got dementia. That’s why I go back to theatre, which gives you more opportunity to work with a good script.”

I suggest that maybe when Phoebe Waller-Bridge gets older, parts for older women will improve. “We’re all banking on Phoebe,” she smiles.

TWO YEARS HAVE elapsed since she last appeared in front of a live audience, but in October, she’ll be on stage in the Theatre Royal Bath’s production of Noël Coward’s Private Lives, opposite fellow All Creatures cast member Nigel Havers.

“They’ve delayed it by an entire year, which is not a very good idea at our age,” she deadpans. “Theatre is where you learn the most. You’ve got a live audience, and they will tell you whether it’s working or not, so it’s where you grow the most. And that’s what interests me – the process of acting.”

The Olivier award-winner is passionate about supporting theatre, pointing out how much revenue it brings in to the Treasury. “It’s one of the things we’re most notable for on the world stage. It’s heartbreaking that theatres were shut for so long.” Since theatres opened, she has been to see Carousel at Regent’s Park Open Air Theatre, and The Comeback at the Noël Coward Theatre: “My son Alexander wrote it and performed in it,” she smiles. Her other son, Edward, is a teacher.

She is thrilled about the world opening up again. “I never got neurotic [during lockdown]. I was very careful, but I didn’t get myself in a state. I made sure I kept myself fit and active, walked three miles a day, ate carefully and nourished my mind reading things I’d never normally have time to read.”

Her next project is BritBox’s detective drama Murder in Provence, due out next year. “Of course I didn’t go to Provence,” she laments. “My parts were done in Oxfordshire, in wonderful mock-ups of Provençal brasseries. But oh, I wouldn’t mind eating a real croissant.”

Just don’t feed it to Tricki Woo.

YOU CAN HELP THE PEOPLE OF AFGHANISTAN

At the time of writing, UNHCR staff are continuing to work on the ground across Afghanistan, and currently have access to all 34 provinces. They will stay for as long as the security situation allows it, to protect and assist the hundreds of thousands of people who've been forced to flee within the country and made vulnerable by the conflict. Humanitarian needs are growing fast for the increased number of people displaced and time is running short. UNHCR's team in Afghanistan urgently needs your support.

People's most immediate needs are safety and protection, shelter, food, sanitation and drinking water.

Please will you give £82 to help UNHCR teams provide lifesaving humanitarian support to the people of Afghanistan?

The situation is complex and dynamic, and the next few weeks could see a further increase in humanitarian needs. We are concerned about the risk of serious human rights abuses and violations in the communities most affected by the fighting and about the impact of the violence on women and children.

António Guterres, the UN Secretary-General, said in a statement:

"I want to express my grave concern at the deepening humanitarian and economic crisis in the country and the threat of basic services collapsing completely."

"Today, almost half of the population of Afghanistan – 18 million people – need humanitarian assistance to survive. One in three Afghans do not know where their next meal will come from. More than half of all children under-five are expected to become acutely malnourished in the next year. People are losing access to basic goods and services every day. A humanitarian catastrophe looms."

The situation is deeply alarming, but there is something you can do to help.

With a gift of £82 today, or whatever you can afford, you could help UNHCR get lifesaving supplies through to the people who most need them.

Your support can help save lives.

School exclusions are on the rise, and it's not just teenagers. But one woman is turning tantrums into good behaviour – and keeping kids in the classroom

INTERVIEW BY LIBBY PURVES

OSCAR IS SIX, tiny, charming and clever and on his third “fixed term exclusion” from school. He risks being permanently expelled for his aggressive tantrums.

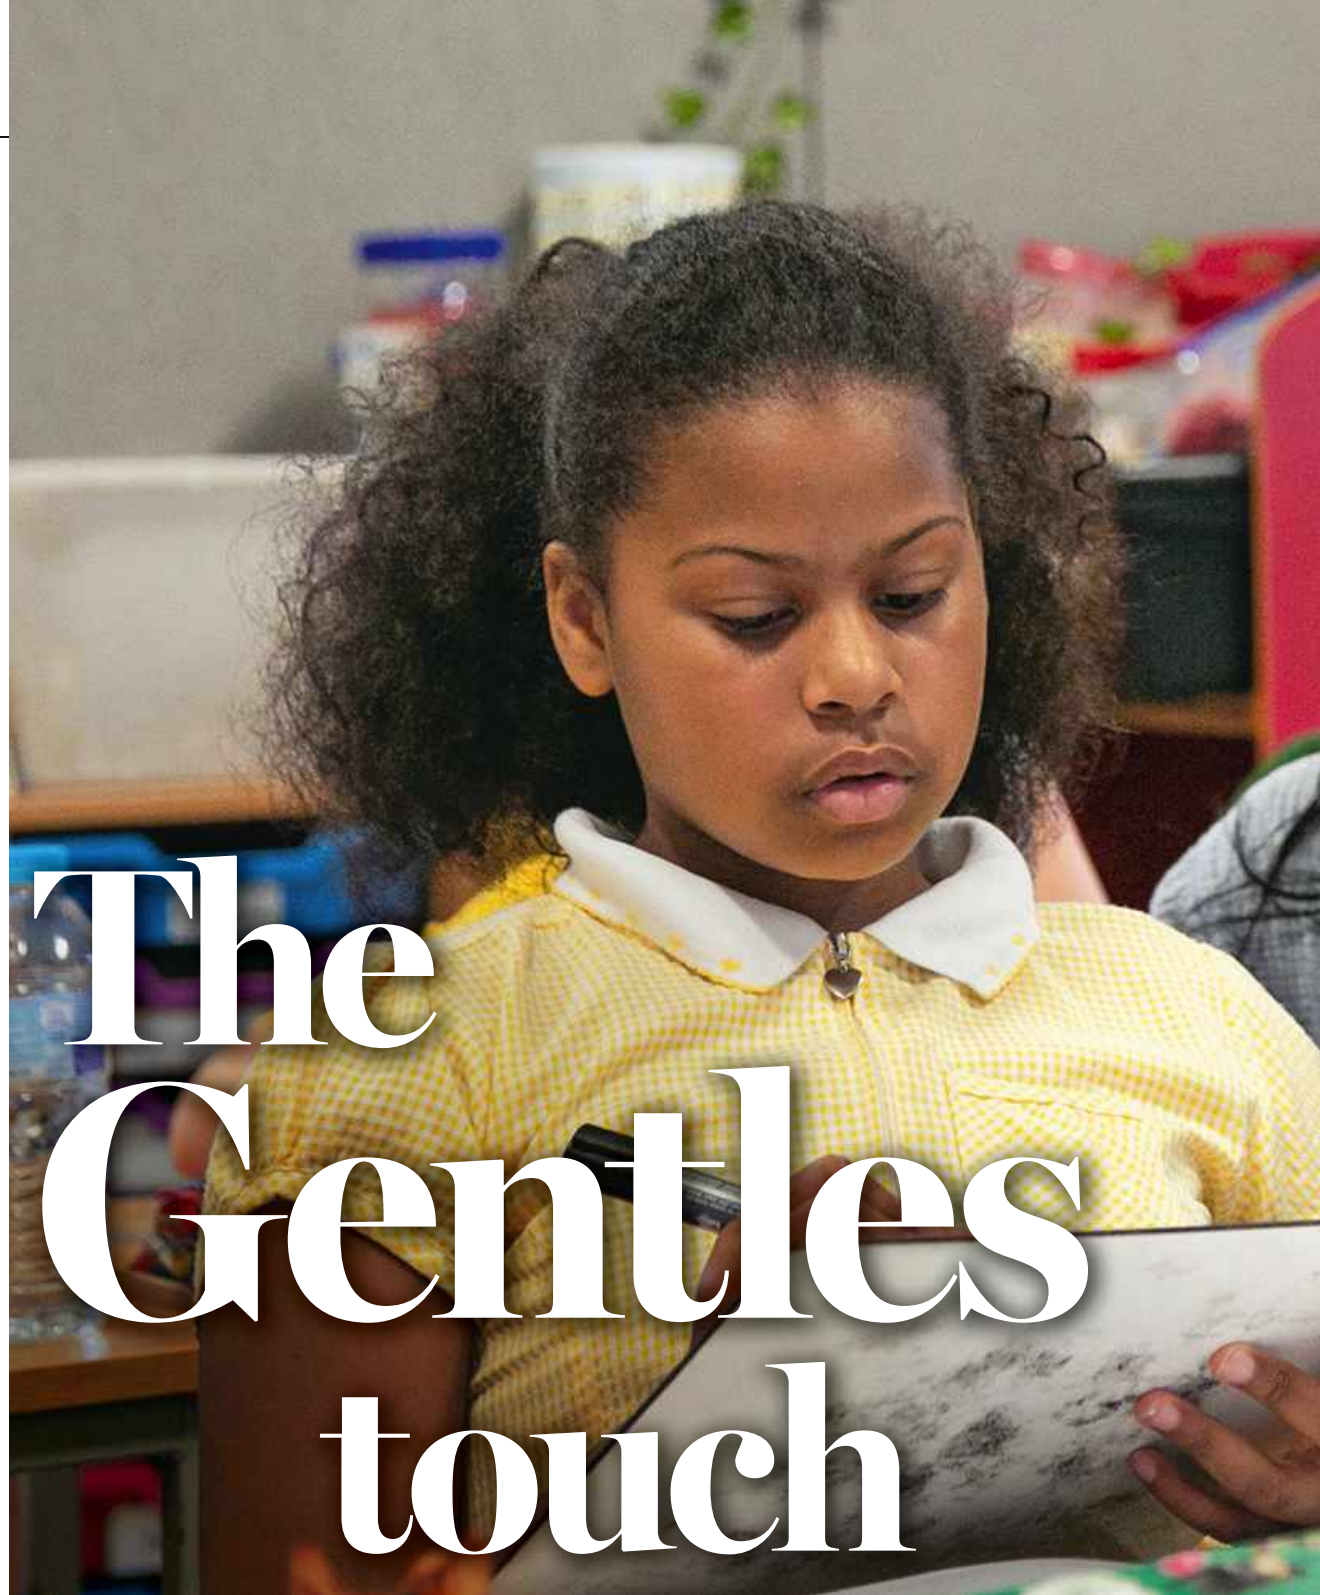

Jack, aged eight, hunches in the playground with no friends: sometimes, due to his rages, his whole class has been evacuated from the room for their safety. Olivia, nine, turns in seconds into a mass of scowling, pushing fury. All are losing education and distracting classmates: watch with dismay as a maths teacher tries to explain improper fractions while a child volcano seethes under her uniform, brewing another eruption.

News of the rise in permanent exclusions in England – the highest in a decade before the pandemic – might suggest teenagers with knives, but it's the cosy, colourful world of early school that is seeing disruption, injuries, and heartbreaking decisions to remove troublemakers. Heartbreaking because exclusions can blight a whole future.

We see Oscar, Jack and Olivia – with the permission of their remarkable parents and teachers – in Don't Exclude Me, a two-part BBC2 documentary about the work of behaviour consultant Marie Gentles, who has been asked to help a primary school in Southend.

Gentles is a calm, smiling, firm and wise presence: talking to her even I feel my stress levels drop. She sits in a classroom watching like a benign cat, missing nothing. Face to face with an angry child she quietly insists on attention and eye contact, and explains in words and gestures that it isn't them she dislikes but their behaviour. She assures them she can help.

“Behaviour is communication,” she explains. “Feelings running loose. It's our duty to help them understand and control it”. Despite the psychological depth of her work she comes at it without jargon, in words a raging child can understand. She worked for ten years at a Pupil Referral Unit – or PRU – after a traditional teaching degree, in which she reflects, there wasn't much talk about behaviour management.

“When I first started I was startled, scared – I remember these tiny children, when they kicked off, being really scary. You felt your heart beating faster. Now, when I look at a pupil I just see the behaviour as a shell. Inside it, they're people, individuals. You don't want to crush the person inside, just help control that storm of feelings.”

THIS IS NOT the voyeuristic “poverty porn” of shows like Benefits Street. The school is well equipped, with good teachers (both male and female) and concerned parents. We watch staff accepting guidance from Gentles: one says that you'd think it would be hard to be told how to do your job, but actually it's good to ask for help. The children's parents work with Gentles at home too, as she demonstrates how to react, reinforce good behaviour and not despair at setbacks.

“I feel passionately about behaviour, and it's good that we're talking more about it. But dealing with it, you inevitably get emotionally entwined yourself. So, as a parent or teacher, you need to understand that you are reacting, too. The child's aggression makes you feel you're failing. As a teacher it can make you just want to exclude, to get rid of all these emotions.”

Small Oscar grumpily admits an attack. “Well done, you were honest about that!” Step by step she coaxes him towards the achievement of apologising to his victims. He glows proudly. Of Olivia, Gentles says, “She's soft inside, but daren't show her vulnerable centre.”

Her emphasis on language is fascinating, teaching the children to describe feelings. At the far extreme I've seen prison inmates decades older who lacked such loving attention, being liberated by drama exercises shouting Shakespearean insults and saying it's a relief to have words.

“When I started work at the PRU,” she says, “99 per cent communicated their wants and needs by actions, and didn't know what to say: they just knew they didn't feel great inside, so told the world through behaviour. They needed to understand that feelings are OK but you can say them, and conduct yourself well in public without denying them.” She teaches even the smallest the word “consequences”, that outbursts have results. “Then he/she can accept them.”

Some hark back to the days of slapping, being put in the corner, sent to bed with no supper.

CALMING INFLUENCE
Marie Gentles, seen here with Olivia (left) and Nevayah (right), brings an air of patience and understanding to even the most turbulent classroom. Inset below: Jack is just one of the children benefitting from Gentles's intervention

‘You don’t want to crush them, just help control feelings’

MARIE GENTLES

Worse “consequences” than Gentles’s benign ones. “It doesn’t work if they’re issued out of anger, or don’t happen, or get overly used so you have nothing left. Balance them with reward and praise. Let them separate the naughty, bad, scary behaviour from who they really are.”

It may sound soft, but when you see this kind, firm woman gently telling an infuriating child “We’re going to work together on you not getting up and leaving class”, it palpably works.

But it requires time, patience – and adults. Class sizes rise, weary teachers resign, budgets are squeezed, a consultant is seen as an “extra”. At home, both parents may have to work; screens become babysitters. Gentles is – typically – balanced about that.

“Technology enhances our children in a lot of ways, but definitely has an impact on the upcoming generation’s social and emotional development. I speak to heads who say ‘Our reception cohort is fantastic at telling me how to use the interactive whiteboard, but have no social skills at all.’ And parents say ‘Oh, my child has to play on my phone as we walk round the supermarket’. Sometimes they don’t know how to just be.”

SHE HAD “A standard childhood, not poor but not wealthy, middle child, good schools, Mum and Dad together. The main difference was that my mother and two aunts took foster children, so I had a lot of people to watch. You don’t just learn from best practice, but from the opposite!”

It isn’t about theory. “Mum was using all the strategies that I do, just not describing them in words.” Gentles has two children of her own now, aged 18 and 13, and yes, she sometimes snaps. “Just last week I was working really long hours, tired, and I’d asked the eldest to do a few bits and he hadn’t... grrrr! But after that moment I was able to recognise that I was communicating through my fed-up behaviour. Because I understood that, I could calm down, get round the guilt.”

I observe that as a fraught young mother I learned that you have to apologise to small children when you’re snappy, because how else will they learn what an apology is? She agrees, laughing.

I raise the frequently cited cause of bad behaviour, ADHD (prescriptions for the drug Ritalin to treat attention deficit hyperactivity disorder have risen sharply). Gentles is diplomatic. “I’m not a medical professional. But what I can say is that in a child who is emotionally all over the place, their behaviour can look very similar to ADHD. They don’t know how to regulate themselves. It can seem almost identical.”

As for the other common worry, that boys especially need to run off energy and some schools simply don’t have the space, she sighs. “Education is a square box. Not every child fits. A young child may need to burn off energy, but if it’s time for the maths lesson, then it’s time for the maths lesson! You learn to manage your behaviour and be praised for trying to. It makes everybody happier.”

Driving on the edge

Lewis Hamilton and Max Verstappen are on a collision course

IT'LL BE DIFFERENT this time. We'll rise above it. We'll be mature and calm. We'll retain our mutual respect. We'll race hard but fair. No rancour, no enmity, no feuding: just a great deal of hard, serious sport, and may the best man win.

It always starts that way. It started that way this season, when it was clear that either Max Verstappen or Lewis Hamilton would win the Formula One world drivers' championship: Verstappen for the first time or Hamilton for a record-breaking eighth.

But there is a strange and terrible power that brings people together in such circumstances. Verstappen and Hamilton first crashed at

'F1 gives us intense and unforgiving rivalry'

Silverstone in the summer, an incident that forced Verstappen out of the race. Hamilton was given a ten-second penalty on the grounds that he was mainly, but not fully, responsible for the accident. He went on to win the race anyway.

Verstappen and Hamilton had a potentially far more serious crash in Italy two weeks ago: Verstappen's car landed on Hamilton's head, which was protected by the new-fangled and initially deeply unpopular halo device: "Thank God for the halo that saved me," Hamilton said.

Verstappen tweeted, "The incident could have been avoided if I had been left enough space to make the corner." But motor-racing doesn't operate on the principle that everybody is obliged to get out of Verstappen's way: he was allotted the blame this time, and given a three-place grid penalty.

The real culprit, of course, is the force that brings drivers together when they are rivals for the title. Both want the same thing with a desperation few people experience, and both are equipped with potentially lethal bits of machinery. How could trouble not happen?

A crash-by-crash history of Formula One tells us again and again of occasions when rivals collided. Sometimes it's done on purpose; sometimes both parties simply run out of time and space together. Either way, it's as inevitable as the forces of Greek tragedy.

In 1994 Michael Schumacher drove into Damon Hill, taking both cars out of the race and ensuring that Schumacher won the championship. Three years later, Schumacher was involved in an almost identical incident with Jacques Villeneuve. This time Schumacher broke only his own car and Villeneuve won the championship. Schumacher was blamed and given a trivial punishment.

Ayrton Senna and Alain Prost were involved in drastic crashes in successive seasons. After the first in 1989, Senna was disqualified and Prost won the championship. At the same track in Japan a year later, Senna and Prost crashed at the start; this time Senna won the title.

In previous seasons Hamilton has been involved in crashes with Nico Rosberg, his team-mate at the time. Such incidents offer us all, especially Hamilton, opportuni-

THE MESSI FACTOR

What's the difference between 11 great footballers and a great football team? Perhaps the answer is Lionel Messi. He was the factor that brought success to Barcelona. Perhaps he'll do the same now for Paris Saint-Germain and transform them into Champions League winners. This week they must take on Manchester City: a match between two great stylists in urgent need of substance.

Champions League Football: Paris Saint-Germain v Man City Tue 7pm (k/o 8pm) BT2, 8pm 5 Live ties to give thanks for the technical innovations that have made the sport so much safer.

That sense of security, though, makes drivers less likely to back down in the face of threat. These days we're used to seeing drivers walk away from the most terrible crashes: let's hope we stay used to it. Formula One gives us rivalry: intense, unforgiving and unrelenting. It provides us with great sport. And occasionally, it takes us beyond sport, when the risks are real and all sense of play has been banished. Sometimes sport is a very serious business.

FILM OF THE WEEK

Way out western

The Good, the Bad and the Ugly ★★★★★ 18
Saturday 9.20pm Channel 5

IT'S NOT JUST ABOUT the twangy 60s guitar, but it helps. The Good, the Bad and the Ugly is the 1966 finale to Italian director Sergio Leone's loosely grouped "Dollars" trilogy, following A Fistful of Dollars (1964) and For a Few Dollars More (1965). It's certainly the longest and most expensive of the three, with the budget swelling from $200,000 to $1.2m over the dusty, gun-and-spade-toting triptych, and for many it's the best spaghetti western of them all.

The film gives the western genre – previously dismissed by many critics as a "horse opera" or "oater" – a new lease of life, as it hacks out a morality play among the heat, dust and dynamite of its Spanish locations. And with the help of celebrated Italian cinematographer Tonino delli Colli, Leone mints to maximum effect the perspiring close-ups and panoramic long shots that were to become his trademark.

Set during the American Civil War, it sees Clint Eastwood's poncho-modelling cheroot chewer (The Good) joining forces with Eli Wallach's Mexican bandit Tuco (The Ugly) to beat Lee Van Cleef's mercenary Angel Eyes (The Bad) to a stash of fabled Confederate gold, while deadly conflict rages on around them.

THE ACTOR WHO gained the most from this pasta boom was undoubtedly Eastwood. Previously best known as Rowdy Yates from the TV western series Rawhide, Eastwood came to Europe, divested himself of his "cowpoke" baggage and was reborn as the "Man with No Name" – or "Blondie", as co-star Wallach calls him – for whom less really does mean more. Eastwood straddles all three films, but Wallach and Van Cleef are just as vital to the success of The Good, the Bad and the Ugly.

Equally important is Ennio Morricone's score – he rewrote the soundtrack rulebook, tore it up then rewrote it again, with a fruity, "Wah, wah, waah!" My favourite scene remains, predictably, the mariachi-scored Sad Hill Cemetery face-off, one of the finest widescreen arrangements of cast in any action movie climax. Morricone died in July 2020 aged 90, and this is the perfect opportunity to revisit his exquisite score and the incredible wordless vocals of Edda Dell'Orso.

Channel 5 is going Eastwood crazy on Saturday, with a documentary about his life and movies at 7.55pm, and a trio of his other hits: Every Which Way but Loose at 1.35pm, Joe Kidd at 3.50pm and Two Mules for Sister Sara at 5.50pm.

ON THE EDGE

Monos ★★★★★ 15 Thursday 11.25pm Film4

Much-hyped at Sundance and other festivals, this is a verdant but deadly Colombian-American co-production. In an unyielding and unnamed mountainous jungle location, a troop of teenage soldiers (nicknamed Swede, Bigfoot, Dog and so on), are entrusted with guarding a captured American engineer (Julianne Nicholson). Written, produced and directed by Alejandro Landes, Monos (Spanish for "monkeys") is a paranoid vision of internecine conflict. The action pivots on switched allegiances, and anyone who knows Lord of the Flies or Heart of Darkness will recognise the violence that sits alongside the youthful, sexually charged edge of adolescence. Mica Levi's score brings a unique otherworldliness to a one-of-a-kind adventure. AC

Black Narcissus ★★★★★

12.20-2.00pm BBC2

U

DRAMA Showing today with The Life and Death of Colonel Blimp in a double bill of classics from Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, this is one of the most striking examples of studio-controlled artifice in film history. Jack Cardiff's lush colour images enhance the beauty of the stylised Himalayan scenery, and also bring a grandeur to the events at a remote mountain mission, where the visit of English agent David Farrar causes passions to run dangerously out of control among the nuns. Kathleen Byron's eye-rolling jealousy awakens the occasionally sleepy plot and her scene with Deborah Kerr on the bell tower is unforgettable. DP (UK 1947)

Every Which Way but Loose ★★★

1.35-3.50pm C5

12

COMEDY DRAMA Kicking off a day of Clint Eastwood films on C5, this coarse offering sees him play Philo Beddoe, a travelling prizefighter whose best buddy is a beer-swilling, lowlife orangutan named Clyde. Eastwood just about manages to avoid being made a monkey of by his scene-stealing co-star, but his romantic hankerings after singer Sondra Locke don't add much to the brew. It's hardly one of the films for which Eastwood would most like to be remembered, but it did such good box-office business that he was tempted back for a sequel, Any Which Way You Can. DP (US 1978, edited for language, violence, HD)

Despicable Me 2 ★★★★★

4.45-6.45pm ITV2

U

COMEDY This animated sequel finds the no-longer-despicable super-criminal Gru (voiced by Steve Carell) faced with a new evil threat. Drafted by the Anti-Villain League (whose stuffy boss is voiced by Steve Coogan), Gru has to call upon his cunning to scupper the plans of a shady figure intent on world domination. Aware of how important Gru's little yellow helpers, the Minions, were to the original film, directors Pierre Coffin and Chris Renaud place them centre stage, at one point turning them against their beloved master. It's just one of the nifty twists that bring added fun and jeopardy to an already exciting plot. Despicable Me 3 is showing tomorrow. TeS (US 2013, HD)

Two Mules for Sister Sara ★★★★★

5.50-7.55pm C5

WESTERN Clint Eastwood plays a quizzical, slightly bemused cowboy in this immensely enjoyable Don Siegel caper, saving nun Shirley MacLaine from a fate worse than death in the Mexican desert. The two leads are perfectly paired, and MacLaine in particular turns in a great comic performance as her ill-fitting habit begins to slip. Siegel keeps the tension and pace roaring along as he pitches his stars into the midst of the Mexican Revolution and all its attendant mayhem, though

FILM OF THE DAY

The Mercy ★★★★★

8.35-10.10pm BBC2

12

DRAMA James Marsh's film takes its title from the name of the trimaran skippered by Donald Crowhurst, who mysteriously disappeared during a Sunday Times-sponsored round-the-world solo yacht race in 1969. Stoutly and saltily played by a stoic Colin Firth, Crowhurst was a weekend sailor and fatally ill-equipped for his voyage when he left Teignmouth in Devon. Cracking under the mental strain, he began to falsify his logbooks and his boat was eventually found drifting in the Atlantic – although his body was never recovered. Marsh's film plays as a true-life mystery and salt-etched character study, with Firth ably supported by Rachel Weisz as Crowhurst's hand-wringing wife and the mother of his four children. For more on the subject, seek out the 2006 documentary Deep Water, which weaves reconstruction with archive, and for a more esoteric account, there's the 2017 film Crowhurst starring Justin Salinger. (UK 2017, edited for language, HD)

DID YOU KNOW?

"I like playing strange characters," says Firth, when asked about his role choices. "Normal people are just not very interesting."

some may find the final, gory battle scene out of kilter with the light-hearted tone of the rest of the movie. SH (US 1970, edited for language, violence, HD)

Super 8 ★★★★★

6.50-9.00pm Film4

12

SCI-FI Named after the old film format used by home-movie hobbyists, this 1970s-set adventure follows a bunch of schoolkids who accidentally capture footage of a train crash while filming their own low-budget zombie flick. In an age of relentlessly spectacular, often emotionally vacant blockbusters, it's a pleasure to see a big movie thrumming with genuine feeling for characters touchingly poised on the cusp of adulthood. Writer/director JJ Abrams has clearly soaked up the early work of his fellow producer Steven Spielberg, and he reproduces not only the visual style of Close Encounters and ET but also their affecting humanity. TJ (US 2011, edited for language, violence, drug abuse, HD)

Twister ★★★

7.05-9.20pm 5 Star

PG

ACTION Speed director Jan De Bont takes destruction to a whole new level in this daft but breathtaking salute to the meteorologists who chase tornados through America's Midwest. Bill Paxton stars as a TV weatherman who is drawn back to his former profession as a storm chaser to help estranged wife Helen Hunt place a tornado-measuring invention in the eye of a storm. Don't worry about the laboured storyline or the lack of chemistry between Paxton and Hunt; just sit back and gape at the wondrous special effects that allow cars, houses and even the odd farm animal to be sent spiralling through the air. JF (US 1996, edited for language)

The King's Choice ★★★

12

DRAMA This is the story of Norway's King Haakon VII and how he stepped beyond his ceremonial duties to steer his country's future in the face of advancing Nazi forces. The corridors and palaces of power are brought to visually sumptuous life by director Erik Poppe, but the events unfold in long, talky scenes that fail to convey the gravity of the situation. Jesper Christensen is wonderful to watch as the king, a man forced to make a stand, and his scenes with his impetuous son (Anders Baasmo Christiansen) have more of an impact than the rare, and poorly executed, depictions of combat. JL (Nor/Swe/Ire 2016, violence, HD)

ROMANTIC COMEDY Writer/director Judd Apatow cemented his reputation after The 40 Year Old Virgin with this very modern romcom. Seth Rogen plays a harmless pothead who impregnates Katherine Heigl's media career girl during a drunken one-night stand. Prompted to give the relationship a go, our odd couple learns lessons about responsibility and life in general, but to hilarious rather than schmaltzy effect. Thanks to quality, near-the-knuckle repartee and believable chemistry between Rogen and Heigl, Knocked Up proves that comedy doesn't have to dumb down for its demographic. AC (US 2007, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

All the Money in the World ★★★

THRILLER The kidnapping of 16-year-old John Paul Getty III, heir to his grandfather's multi-billion-dollar fortune, was one of the biggest news stories of the 1970s. Director Ridley Scott's account stars Michelle Williams as the boy's mother, who pleads with family patriarch Christopher Plummer to pay the ransom. Plummer is hugely impressive as the ruthless tycoon, and there's strong support from Mark Wahlberg as his ex-CIA adviser. However, the film could have been better if Scott had paid more attention to the truth and not settled for this sedentary, rather uninvolved version of events. TeS (US/UK 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

The Da Vinci Code ★★★

10.00pm-12.55am C5

MYSTERY Ron Howard's trio of film adaptations of Dan Brown's bestselling books make for perfect escapist entertainment – especially for those missing their European city breaks. This first outing guides us around Paris and London, with Tom Hanks in the role of intrepid symbolologist Robert Langdon. Assisted by a French cryptographer (Audrey Tautou), Langdon finds himself up against a dangerous religious faction as he uncovers the mysteries of the Holy Grail. Locations ranging from the Louvre to Shoreham Airport add globe-trotting glamour to the head-scratching quest, and Paul Bettany dials it up to 11 as a mad monk. The two sequels (2009's Angels & Demons and 2016's Inferno) repeated the formula, but with diminishing box-office returns. (US 2006, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Charade ★★★★★

PG

THRILLER This wonderful comedy mystery from director Stanley Donen nearly out-Hitchcocks Hitchcock. With twists so clever you'll never guess, and the dream pairing of Cary Grant and Audrey Hepburn in ravishing Parisian locations, what more could you possibly want? There's a caper plot that never lets up, a wondrously romantic score (by Henry Mancini), star-making turns from Walter Matthau and James Coburn, and set pieces that deserve classic status, including Grant and Hepburn falling in love on a Paris river boat. Quite simply, this movie's got the lot. TS (US 1963, HD)

The Chronicles of Narnia: The Voyage of the Dawn Treader ★★★★★
1.55-4.05pm E4

PG

FANTASY Wonderful escapism flows nonstop in the best of the three Narnia films. In this most Tolkienesque of CS Lewis's tales, the younger Pevensie siblings, Lucy (Georgie Henley) and Edmund (Skandar Keynes), and their insufferable cousin Eustace (a brilliant Will Poulter) are whisked aboard the ship of King Caspian (Ben Barnes) as he searches for the seven lost lords of Narnia. Director Michael Apted deploys the usual mix of adolescent derring-do and impressive special effects to create a thrilling and swashbuckling spellbinder. AJ (US/Aus 2010, some violence, HD)

Diamonds Are Forever ★★★

12

SPY Sean Connery originally said "Never again" to reprising the role of agent 007, but after George Lazenby's sole effort in On Her Majesty's Secret Service he was lured back for a fee of over $1 million, which he donated to the Scottish International Education Trust. This is one of the weakest Bonds, with its tiresome smuggling plot and Connery going lazily through the motions. The Las Vegas sequences have some dash, however, and Bruce Glover and Putter Smith make an intriguing double act as the gay hitmen Wint and Kidd. AT (UK 1971, may be edited for content, HD)

007 is back, page 8

Robots ★★★

4.00-5.45pm ITV2

U

COMEDY This inventive romp through a world populated entirely by androids uses inspired computer animation to revitalise a familiar story. Ewan McGregor brings boyish charm as the voice of idealistic small-town robot Rodney Copperbottom, who journeys to the big city to make his fortune as an inventor. A number of ingenious set pieces unfold against the colourful and lovingly designed environment, while the comedy is light and mischievous. Robin Williams is especially funny as dilapidated street bot Fender, though some of the movie's in-jokes may be too obscure for younger viewers. SF (US 2005, HD)

Sahara ★★★ 6.40-9.00pm Film4

ACTION Matthew McConaughey stars here as author Clive Cussler's creation Dirk Pitt, an adventurer and salvage expert who stumbles upon evidence that a long-lost American Civil War battleship may have ended up in the desert in West Africa. Along for the ride are sidekick Steve Zahn and Penélope Cruz as a World Health Organisation doctor investigating a possible plague outbreak. The convoluted and at times incomprehensible plot throws in a local dictator, Tuareg tribesmen and the odd camel, but the action sequences are strong, the locations and villains suitably exotic, and the whole thing remains good fun. BP (US/Sp/Ger 2005, some violence, HD)

Pitch Perfect 2 ★★★

12

MUSICAL COMEDY Who'd have thought that a film about a cappella singing would be such a big hit, but the original Pitch Perfect confounded all expectations. Three years later came this sequel, with Elizabeth Banks taking on directing duties as well as reprising her fun role as a contest commentator. Anna Kendrick and Rebel Wilson also return as members of the Barden Bellas, who enter an international contest that no US team has won before. Sassy and smartly written, the film starts strongly but waffles badly through the middle hour, before rediscovering its mojo in an invigorating competition climax. DA (US 2015, some swearing, HD)

Die Hard 4.0 ★★★★★

12

THRILLER Twelve years after he last donned the white vest in Die Hard with a Vengeance, Bruce Willis returned as John McClane in this unabashedly retro blockbuster. As cyber-terrorist Timothy Olyphant (Deadwood) threatens to hack America to a standstill, McClane is once more the wrong guy in the wrong place at the wrong time. Willis enjoys a witty rapport with Justin Long's hacker, and among the impressive set pieces is a fighter jet playing chicken with an 18-wheel tanker truck. This loud and relentless throwback to 1980s excess is gleefully aware of its own silliness. JR (US 2007, violence, swearing, HD)

Southside with You ★★★★★

1.20-2.35am BBC2

12

ROMANTIC DRAMA This charming depiction of Barack Obama's first date with his wife, Michelle, takes place over the course of a single day. It portrays the future President (Parker Sawyers) and First Lady (Tika Sumpter) as smart, ambitious 20-somethings, and follows them as they stroll around Chicago's South Side during the summer of 1989, chatting about their lives and dreams. In terms of plot, writer/director Richard Tanne's film is relatively slight, but it's also warm, engaging and likeable, while the leads share real chemistry. SC (US 2016, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

12 Angry Men ★★★★★

2.50-4.45pm Film4

U

DRAMA Henry Fonda stars in as well as produced this marvellous tale of a lone juror holding out for a not-guilty verdict, with the other 11 men ready to convict. The film benefits immeasurably from debut director Sidney Lumet's masterly sense of cinema: the action takes place entirely in one room, yet Lumet finds an infinite variety of visual set-ups and angles with which to tell the tale.

The Fault in Our Stars ★★★

6.35-9.00pm Film4

12

DRAMA Adapted from John Green's young-adult novel, this likeable tear-jerker is as mawkish as it is heartfelt. Shailene Woodley plays a precocious teenager living with thyroid cancer. She falls for optimistic charmer Ansel Elgort, who is in remission after losing one of his legs to bone cancer. Woodley has a smile that lights up the screen and is utterly believable, even when the story is not. Elgort is also endearing in his role, despite being burdened with some mushy dialogue. It's unlikely to win over cynics, but most viewers will be reaching for the tissues. SC (US/Can/UK 2014, edited for content, HD)

Passenger 57 ★★★

9.00-10.50pm ITV4

ACTION In this silly but enjoyable Die Hard-style thriller, Wesley Snipes plays a security expert on the same plane as criminal Bruce Payne, who is being held in police custody. When Payne's henchmen free him, it's up to Snipes to save the day. Despite the hand-me-down plot, director Kevin Hooks wrings suspense out of some expertly staged set pieces. He is helped by charismatic turns from Snipes and Payne, and a solid cast including Tom Sizemore, Bruce Greenwood and a young Elizabeth Hurley. JF (US 1992, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Cold in July ★★★★★

9.00-11.10pm Great Movies

15

THRILLER New to Great Movies tonight, this slice of pulp fiction stars Michael C Hall (Dexter) as a Texas family man who accidentally kills an unarmed intruder. After a run-in with the dead man's vengeful father (Sam Shepard), both men begin to suspect there's more going on than meets the eye. Jim Mickle's film basks in its 1980s setting, complete with mullet hairstyles and a John Carpenter-styled synth score. With its nods to the films of Walter Hill and Sam Peckinpah, it builds to one of the best-executed shoot-outs in recent memory.

Alan Jones (US/Fr 2014, violence, swearing)

Contraband ★★★

2.20-4.05pm Talking Pictures TV

U

THRILLER Directed by Michael Powell from a story by Emeric Pressburger, this neat Second World War film recalls Alfred Hitchcock's Sabotage and The Man Who Knew Too Much. The plot sees Conrad Veidt's Danish sea captain tangling with German spies in London. Powell makes brilliant use of the blackout and includes one cheeky sequence where hundreds of unwanted plaster casts of Neville Chamberlain get shot to pieces. It would have been Deborah Kerr's first feature film, but all her scenes were left on the cutting-room floor. AT (UK 1940, BW)

Timecop ★★★ 11.05pm-1.00am c5

18

SCI-FI You get two Jean-Claude Van Dammes for the price of one in this gleaming, campy yarn from director Peter Hyams. The Muscles from Brussels encounters his younger self when he's sent back in time to catch a senator (Ron Silver) who's trying to change the past for his own monetary ends. The special effects may look hopelessly outdated and the time-travel logic makes little sense, but the film delivers as a slice of no-brain entertainment, as Jean-Claude causes as much Van Dammage as possible. AJ (US 1994, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity)

FILM OF THE DAY

Boy Erased ★★★

11.15pm-1.05am BBC2

15

DRAMA Russell Crowe and Nicole Kidman bring A-list star power to this warmly topical family drama, playing a well-to-do Baptist couple in Arkansas who think they are doing the Christian thing when they put their son (Lucas Hedges, right) into "gay conversion" therapy. "I think about men," the boy admits. "We cannot see a way that you can live under this roof," says his bear-like dad. However, the refuge where he is sent is no place to get better, as he is subjected to cruel exercises designed to "straighten" him out. Adapted from Garrard Conley's memoir, the film was written, produced and directed by the multitalented Joel Edgerton, who also brings a touch of creepiness to his role as the facility's religiously motivated chief therapist. PG

WESTERN With this superb follow-up to Gunfight at the OK Corral, director John Sturges charts the moral decline of lawman Wyatt Earp from upright marshal to relentless avenger. He's portrayed brilliantly by a grim James Garner, with Jason Robards providing a fantastic contrast as Doc Holliday. Neglected on its release, this movie prefigures the darker, anti-romantic westerns that were to come. It's now appreciated as a near masterwork, a requiem for the Old West, and certainly the old western. TS (US 1967, some violence)

Star Trek VI: the Undiscovered Country ★★★★★

PG

SCI-FI Having directed Star Trek II: the Wrath of Khan, Nicholas Meyer returned to the franchise for this equally memorable instalment. With a plot that mirrored world news events of the time (not least the dissolution of the Soviet Union), the story sees Kirk (William Shatner) and the Enterprise crew encounter treachery during prospective peace negotiations with the Klingons. Some clever Shakespearean touches heighten the drama, while the humanistic messages, affectionate lampooning and epic visuals make this one of the best of the series. AJ (US 1991, violence, HD)

Old Boy ★★★ 9.00-11.10pm TCM

18

THRILLER This faithful remake of Park Chan-wook's 2003 Korean movie stars Josh Brolin as an alcoholic advertising executive who is kidnapped and held in solitary confinement for 20 years. During that time, he's framed for the murder of his ex-wife, and his young daughter is taken into care. When he's released, he determines to find his abductors and uncover their motives. Director Spike Lee follows the plot of the original film almost to the letter, replicating many of its bloody, violent set pieces, but he never quite delivers the same levels of atmosphere or menace. TeS (US 2013, violence, HD)

A Cure for Wellness ★★★

11.20pm-2.10am Film4

MYSTERY In director Gore Verbinski's rather meandering shocker, Dane DeHaan plays a financial whizzkid sent to retrieve his ailing boss, who's undergoing treatment at a strange clinic in the Swiss Alps. However, once he delves into the spa's miraculous remedies, formulated by Jason Isaacs's mysterious medic, events take a turn for the weird. Verbinski choreographs his game cast through a meticulously stylish nightmare that echoes classic Hammer horror as it builds to a delightfully arcane climax. AJ (US/Ger 2017, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

FILM OF THE DAY

Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy ★★★★★

15

THRILLER With the latest James Bond movie in cinemas today (see feature, p8), BBC4 devotes an evening to the cloak-and-dagger world of the secret agent. Gary Oldman gives a credibly rumpled portrayal of retired British Intelligence operative George Smiley in this feature adaptation of John le Carré's 1974 spy novel. Corners are cut to condense the plot about the search for a suspected Soviet mole (is it Colin Firth? Ciarán Hinds? Toby Jones?), but Let the Right One In director Tomas Alfredson stays true to the labyrinthine spirit of the book. You can almost smell the furniture polish in the gloomy behind-closed-doors world of the service. (UK 2011, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

CRIME An ex-con (Sean Connery) sets out to burgle a luxury apartment block, unaware that he is under surveillance from law-enforcement agencies. The implicit ironies of the set-up – that the agents can't see the larger picture of a major robbery for all their attention to the smaller details – are never quite forged into the intended satire, but director Sidney Lumet injects proceedings with a certain sarcastic humour. Martin Balsam is outstanding as a gay antiques dealer and Christopher Walken makes one of his first film appearances. TH (US 1971, violence, edited for language)

The Devil Rides Out ★★★

15

ANDREW COLLINS FILM OF THE DAY

Invictus ★★★

11.25pm-1.30am BBC1 (not in Scotland) 12

DRAMA Individual acts of sporting endeavour often make for great cinema, but team events tend not to. Thus, it must be with an open mind that you approach Clint Eastwood's hymn to the drop-kick. When South Africa's Springboks beat the New Zealand All Blacks to the 1995 Rugby World Cup it was doubly remarkable: the team weren't much cop and were mostly white, conspicuously so in the first year after Apartheid's end. Matt Damon imbues team captain Francois Pienaar with his trademark decency, and hope for the future is provided by Morgan Freeman as Nelson Mandela. The crowd scenes are well marshalled by Eastwood, the fake rugby less so, but this is mostly a story about healing and forgiveness. (US/SAfr 2009, swearing, HD)

Rocky III ★★ 10.45pm-12.30am ITV PG

DRAMA Sylvester Stallone's boxing saga was starting to look somewhat stale by this point, although more sequels – and Michael B Jordan's excellent Creed spin-offs – were still to follow. Rocky's opponent here is played by Mr T (before he became a star in The A-Team), who takes the champ's crown, forcing him to dig deep to reclaim it. Stallone is once again joined by Carl Weathers, Burt Young and Burgess Meredith, as well as Talia Shire as his long-suffering wife, but the story is predictable and it all goes a little flat outside the ring. JF (US 1982, violence, HD)

Anchorman 2: the Legend

Continues ★★★ 12.10-2.10am C4 15

COMEDY Nearly a decade after Will Ferrell brought us his moustachioed misogynist newsman Ron Burgundy in Anchorman, he returned for this rib-tickling sequel. Estranged from wife Veronica Corningstone (Christina Applegate), Ron is thrust into the arms of a New York network exec (Meagan Good) and her rolling-news channel. Ferrell's penchant for silliness is at its best earlier in the movie, with some satirical swipes at the dumbing-down of TV news. While Burgundy may have lost a bit of his shock value this time around, some of the gags still feel scathingly current and there are some fun celebrity cameos peppered throughout. SP (US 2013, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

THE MASTER RETURNS

The Problem with Jon Stewart

Available from 30 September

Let's be frank: The Daily Show with Trevor Noah hasn't really worked. Partly that's because liberal America's favourite comedy news show is so strongly associated with its former host. Now Jon Stewart returns with a new project that perhaps takes some inspiration from the work of Daily Show alumnus John Oliver: each week, Stewart and guests tackle a single political or social issue, working towards advocating a solution. A parallel podcast offers more detail on that week's talking point. JS

FIGHTING THE GIANTS

Goliath Available from 24 September

A legal drama that's always revolved around its star, Billy Bob Thornton, has pulled off a canny bit of casting for its final season. Not many actors can match Thornton when he's in high dudgeon, as he is here playing crusading attorney Billy McBride. The main character's last hurrah is to take on a family business that's making millions from keeping Americans addicted to opioids: alongside Bruce Dern and Haley Joel Osment as two members of the nefarious corporate clan is the mighty JK Simmons as the big bad boss. He and Thornton going toe to toe is a challenge the scriptwriters take on with relish. JS

In this strong comedy pilot, Amy Manson is Suzie, a 30-something loser with an appalling DJ boyfriend and a best mate (Hanna Stanbridge) who is very upfront about the inconvenience of having a baby. Aged 15, Suzie gave a baby up for adoption, now her grown-up daughter (Mirren Mack) has come back into Suzie's life, ready to form a classic odd couple. It's frankly written and very well cast. JS

EPIC ADAPTATION

Foundation

Available from 24 September
Buckle up for a proper science-fiction spectacular, based on a holy text of the genre: Isaac Asimov's series of stories, written between the 1940s and the 90s, have been the subject of numerous aborted dramatisations but now arrive on Apple TV+ with the sort of budget their scope requires. Jared Harris is Hari Seldon, the mathematician whose theories about the behaviour of large populations predict the demise of the Galactic Empire – and spur him to work towards an alternative. As right-thinking people fight to save interstellar civilisation in a torrent of fabulously mounted set pieces, the series' producers hope their grand visions will be rewarded: the plan is for Foundation to run for 80 episodes. JACK SEALE

STRIKE A POSE

Legendary

Available now
In the wake of drama series Pose (iPlayer) comes this reality contest celebrating the "ballroom" culture of the LGBTQ+ community in New York. Eight "voguing houses" compete to remain in the series and ultimately take home a $100,000 cash prize, with success determined by judges Leiom Maldonado, Law Roach, Megan Thee Stallion and The Good Place (Netflix) star Jameela Jamil. With fierce outfits and ever more spectacular dance and catwalk challenges, it's one to add to your weekly treat list if you're a fan of Pose or RuPaul's Drag Race (iPlayer). JS

NOW

A FAMILY AT WAR

Succession

S1 & S2 available now
Is this one of TV's greatest dramas? It's certainly one of the best shows of the past five years. Ahead of the highly anticipated third series, which arrives on 18 October, catch up now with the machinations of the Roys, a US media monarchy led by ageing billionaire tyrant Logan (Brian Cox). For two series his children have been jostling for position beneath him, in the expectation that he can't keep running the company for ever... never has television made horrible people so fascinating, as a stream of bitter showdowns subtly rearranges the pieces on the chessboard. JS

NETFLIX

NEW SCANDI MYSTERY

The Chestnut Man

Available from 29 September
Danica Curcic was the best thing about Netflix's intriguing, frustrating Danish mystery drama Equinox; now she's the lead in a crime drama with a malevolent streak. With the high-profile case of a missing child lurking in the background, two detectives investigate murders that are apparently linked, since the crime scenes feature "chestnut men" – twigs and chestnuts fashioned into creepy little avatars that might hold the secrets of a serial killer. Aside from the spookiness the subject matter naturally brings, this show absolutely loves a good, creepy forest. JS

BETTER THAN FICTION

True crime docs

Available from 27 September
Three new documentary series cover three different areas. Surviving R Kelly has new revelations about the R&B singer's alleged sexual misconduct as well as marshalling existing accusations into a shocking, coherent whole. The Devil You Know profiles YouTuber and online cult leader Sherry J Shriner, a purveyor of wacky lizard-alien theories. The First 48, meanwhile, tracks homicide detectives during the all-important first two days of an investigation. JS

THE LAST RESORT?

The White Lotus

Available now
It's just finished weekly showings on Sky Atlantic, but the box set of this much-discussed US drama has been on Now from the get-go. We're in Hawaii, where a luxury resort plays host to Americans who share certain traits, while the staff are tormented by the awfulness of the people they serve, and by the knowledge that their lack of money means they're trapped. It's an acid satire about how those with money see themselves, and how they really are. JS

SJP & CO ARE BACK
And Just Like That..., the reboot of Sex and the City, launches this autumn and looks set to air via Sky and Now

STREAMING LATEST

New TV – and a fresh take on old favourites

● Next year will see Kelsey Grammer star in a reboot of Frasier, which is set to be the jewel in the crown of new streaming service, Paramount+.

Launching in the UK in 2022, it will be available via Sky and reportedly, available to Sky Cinema customers at no extra cost. Other new shows and films on Paramount+ include a TV sequel to The Italian Job, a series based on the video game Halo and two new South Park films. Mission: Impossible 7 and A Quiet Place II will be available 45 days after their respective cinema releases.

● HBO is byword for quality TV, so there's been a lot of buzz across the pond about HBO Max, the network's new streaming service that launched in the US last year.

Although it's set to launch in Europe in late October, it was recently confirmed that it would not be launching in the UK. This doesn't mean missing out on HBO shows such as Succession, Game of Thrones, Chernobyl and the upcoming Sex and the City reboot And Just Like That, as many of HBO's biggest shows are available via Sky and Now in the UK.

Frasier

● New streaming service Peacock is going to be made available to Sky subscribers for free when it arrives in the UK later this year. After launching in America in 2020, Peacock now boasts over 54 million subscribers with shows such as Suits, Modern Family, Parks and Recreation as well as originals including crime drama Dr. Death, starring Christian Slater and Alec Baldwin.

● During the last 18 months, many Disney films – including Black Widow and Raya and the Last Dragon – have been simultaneously released in cinemas and on their streaming platform, Disney+. Now, that is set to change – at least for the rest of 2021.

Black Widow

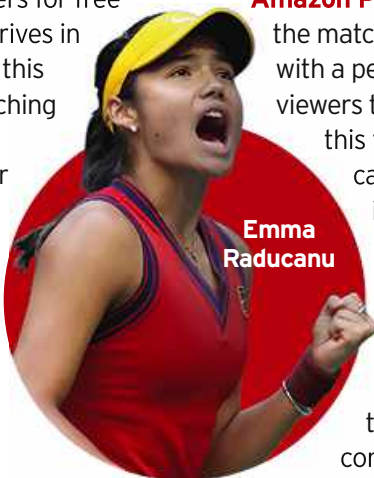

Films such as Chloe Zhao's Marvel movie Eternals and Steven Spielberg's remake of West Side Story will now be shown exclusively in cinemas for 45 days before also being available on Disney+.

● When Emma Raducanu reached the final of the US Open, Channel 4 was quick to strike a deal with

Amazon Prime Video to show the match – and it paid off, with a peak of 9.2 million viewers tuning in. Earlier this year, Channel 4 also came up trumps when it aired live Test cricket – the first time it had been on free-to-air television for 16 years. Conversely, the BBC received complaints about its live coverage of the Tokyo

Olympics in the summer after the majority of UK television rights went to Discovery+. Now, sports rights look set to get even more fragmented, with streaming service DAZN poaching boxing rights from Sky, with a five-year deal to show major matches in the UK. According to the BBC, DAZN has its sights set on becoming “a sports destination platform” in the UK over the next year. FRANCES TAYLOR

ROMANTIC WEEPIE

Supernova ★★★ 15

From 24 Sept, Sky Store;
27 Sept, DVD/Blu-ray

This story of later-life love between a middle-aged couple follows laconic English pianist Sam (Colin Firth) and his American author partner Tusker (Stanley Tucci). As they drive through stunning Lake District scenery on their way to stay with old friends, the couple's warm bickering gradually makes clear that one of them is terminally ill, and this get-together is to be their last. While the story lacks an element of surprise, Firth and Tucci are on top form, making this a journey worth taking. ANDREW COLLINS

VIM AND VIGOUR

In the Heights ★★★★★ PG

From 27 Sept, Sky Store, DVD/Blu-ray

This all-singing, all-dancing summertime scorcher takes the hit Broadway musical from Lin-Manuel Miranda and Quiara Alegría Hudes and turns it into something joyously cinematic. Set in New York City's predominantly Latino neighbourhood of Washington Heights, it tells the story of a bodega owner (Anthony Ramos), who dreams of a better life back in the Dominican Republic, and his love for an aspiring fashion designer (Melissa Barrera). The cast makes Miranda's masterful rhymes crackle and pop, the dance routines are to die for and director Jon M Chu (Crazy Rich Asians) delivers a sure-fire spirit-lifter. EMMA SIMMONDS

INTOXICATING LIFE LESSONS

Another Round ★★★★★ 12

From 24 Sept, Sky Store;
27 Sept, DVD/Blu-ray

Director Thomas Vinterberg helms this Oscar-winning comedy drama from Denmark, in which four schoolteacher friends make a pact to spend their working days in a state of controlled inebriation. Mads Mikkelsen is mesmerising as a man who, having virtually faded away, learns to enjoy life again. Vinterberg captures the hilarious highs and devastating lows of a wonderfully daft experiment, as the characters slur and stumble their way to a sensational ending. ES

HEART-WARMING DRAMEDY

The Starling ★★★ 12 From 24 Sept, Netflix

Melissa McCarthy leads this quirky grief dramedy, playing a woman whose husband (Chris O'Dowd) is committed to a psychiatric facility following the death of their infant daughter. Kevin Kline is the therapist-turned-vet who helps her process her feelings, while the titular bird makes an unlikely antagonist, terrorising McCarthy when she's in the garden. The material is a good fit for McCarthy, who nails the gentle comedy of a weary but resilient woman, and heart-rendingly captures the sadness that underpins her every interaction. Although the film ultimately plumps for mawkishness over emotional authenticity, it remains an amusing watch. ES

Attack of the Hollywood Clichés

From 28 Sept, Netflix

Fans of Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema will enjoy this round-up of classic (and overused) movie tropes. Produced by Charlie Brooker and presented by Rob Lowe (above), it looks at favourites such as the romcom "chance encounter" and the horror movie "final girl". A host of stars and critics offer insight into the history, context and sometimes damaging nature of such clichés, with one actor offering a theory for the ubiquity of British baddies: "We're cheap!" CALUM BAKER

CROSS-CULTURAL SATIRE

Limbo ★★★★★ 12

From 23 Sept, MUBI

In British writer/director Ben Sharrock's sensitive drama, a group of asylum seekers find themselves marking time on a fictional remote Scottish island as they await the outcome of their applications to stay. Central to these is Amir El-Masry's promising young Syrian musician Omar, who is eaten up by sadness, fear, and a sense of failure. Sharrock leavens the desperation of his story with compassion and absurdist humour, crafting what must surely be one of the best films ever made about the refugee experience.

IS IT A BIRD? IS IT A PLANE?

Man of Steel ★★★ 12

From 26 Sept, Amazon Prime, Netflix

Henry Cavill made his 2013 debut as Superman in this fresh origin story for the superhero, which lands on both Amazon Prime and Netflix this week. Cavill certainly looks the part, but the rest of the cast has little to do, which is a shame when you have the likes of Amy Adams (as Lois Lane) to call on. Nevertheless, it builds to a spectacular smackdown, as Superman goes up against Michael Shannon's General Zod in Metropolis. JEREMY ASPINALL

EPIC FANTASY ADVENTURE

The Green Knight ★★★★★

From 24 Sept, Amazon Prime

Dev Patel delivers a career-best performance in director David Lowery's sublimely weird medieval fantasy about what makes a hero. Offering a liberal adaptation of Arthurian myth, the film follows Patel's Sir Gawain, who impulsively accepts a challenge to battle the mysterious Green Knight (Ralph Ineson) and sets in motion a wildly bizarre adventure. Digging into themes of masculinity, honour and morality, Lowery shoots with the same visual poetry that he brought to Ain't Them Bodies Saints, and The Green Knight excels as a hallucinatory puzzle that will scramble your brain in the best possible way. ANN LEE

SENSITIVE DRAMA

Cowboys ★★★★★ 15

From 28 Sept, Now/Sky Cinema

This delicate drama about a trans child's struggle for acceptance stars Steve Zahn as a troubled dad who disappears into the wilderness with his son, Joe (Sasha Knight), who, it transpires, was born "Josie". With the police hot on their trail, they make for the Canadian border via the wilds of Montana. Writer/director Anna Kerrigan unspools this modest story with warmth and understanding, and nimbly explores the issues surrounding gender identity and parental anxiety. JOSH WINNING

HAS ELVIS LEFT THE BUILDING?

Orion: the Man Who Would be King ★★★★★ 12

Available now, BBC iPlayer

Director Jeanie Finlay's documentary tells the story of Alabama orphan Jimmy Ellis, who was unable to launch a singing career despite having a voice just like Elvis Presley's. After Elvis's death in 1977, Ellis was persuaded by Sun Records' Shelby Singleton to adopt the persona of a masked character called Orion, and managed to convince Elvis fans that Orion was the King. More than a mere fable about an Elvis impersonator, this is a thoughtful and revelatory rock 'n' roll story. JA

HOW DOES EQUITY RELEASE WORK?

Read our step-by-step guide below to find out more, or order your FREE guide written by RT's Paul Lewis

Equity release allows you to release money from your home while still continuing to live in the home you love. The money that you release is tax-free and you can choose to access it as a lump sum or as smaller amounts over time – whichever works best for your individual situation.

STEP 1 Understand your needs

Have an understanding of what you would like the money for. This means you won't borrow more than you need to. You could release from a minimum of £10,000, up to 58% of the value of your property, dependent on the age of the youngest homeowner and value of your property. Once any outstanding mortgage has been repaid, the money that you release is yours to spend as you wish.

STEP 2 Contact a specialist

It's important that you speak to a specialist equity release adviser to give you advice. Some advisers are tied to particular products, but through the Radio Times equity release service you will get access to almost 700 plans from the whole of the market. This is because we work with the UK's largest equity release broker, Age Partnership<sup>1</sup>, who have access to exclusive plans.

STEP 3 Make an informed decision

Your adviser will help you understand all of your options, including alternative methods for accessing the money, such as downsizing or a standard mortgage. They will tell you everything you need to know about equity release, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

STEP 4 Get a personalised quotation

Your adviser can provide you with a personalised illustration so you can understand the features and risks. Your quotation is free and you are under no obligation to proceed. Only if you choose to proceed and your case completes would a typical fee of £1,795 be payable.

It's important to know that equity release may involve a home reversion plan or a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property. Equity released, plus accrued interest, is to be repaid upon death or moving in to long-term care, and you are required to pay off any existing mortgage.

A chilling performance

The North Water's frozen Colin Farrell makes me shiver

LET'S FACE IT, most of us are pretty much immune to those highly paid thespians who wang on about their craft: the risks they've taken, the weight they've had to put on, the language they've learnt, the double bass they've mastered. Yawn. Sometimes I want to remind them we're all slumped on the sofa with a grab-bag of crisps, a smartphone and a remote, we've had a long day, and we're just dancing through the channels looking for a bit of diversion before bed, and you know what – we actually don't care that much, thanks all the same.

And then there's The North Water. It's BBC2's five-part adaptation of a novel by Ian McGuire, set on a 19th-century whaling ship. I'd read the feature about the series in Radio Times and I thought I was more than prepared for it. Colin Farrell said he'd had to think seriously about accepting the role of harpooner Henry Drax; we were told in no uncertain terms that this was a genuine attempt to depict a bloody, violent world. Ho hum. I still wasn't convinced. We all know actors say this sort of thing when they're plugging something, don't we?

It turns out I was wrong. Sorry, Colin. If you aren't already watching The North Water – and you think you can take it – I urge you to start immediately. And promise me you won't take your eyes off the screen. This is no time to be half-watching, as you idly scroll through Autumn boots or try to make sense of an allegedly amusing Tik-Tok a teen's suddenly shoved under your nose. You can save that approach for the enjoyable pap you're spoon-fed most of the time. Sometimes I think we get the television we deserve. CONCENTRATE.

'I urge you to start watching immediately – if you can take it'

In fact, I've been concentrating so hard, I think I've caught a whiff of that testosterone-fuelled ship. Was Old Spice around in the mid-19th century? Any idea when shampoo was made widely available to seafarers? And kudos to the costume department here – I'm also fascinated by the gear they're wearing. Jack O'Connell, Stephen Graham and the rest of this (very) motley crew all look the part. Somehow, hats with ear flaps will never be the same again. And were those high-necked woolly jumpers in any way waterproof?

I KNOW MONEY ISN'T everything, but sometimes, it's joyous to see that hard cash has been spent on properly transporting viewers – in this case right inside the Arctic Circle, where life is cheap and some men are utterly vile. None more so than Farrell's Drax, a brutish, lank-haired hulk with psychopathic tendencies.

A memory flashed across my mind. Rural Ireland. A gentle slice of traditional Sunday-night fare. Yes, THIS Colin Farrell had once appeared in lovely, homespun Ballykissangel. He's certainly a long way from that whimsical world here – only displaying anything approaching humanity once so far – and that was when he spoke with relative tenderness to a whale he was preparing to finish off. We can't say we weren't warned: this really isn't for the squeamish. But I do know I'll keep watching.

PAY UP AND PLAY THE GAME

Fever Pitch! (Monday BBC2) charts the creation of the Premier League, a 1992 innovation that glamourised and commercialised football in what we aficionados call the "top-flight", and led to lots of mature gentleman without the necessary physique wearing close-fitting, over-priced replica football shirts. A succession of experts and ex-pros give us the benefit of their wisdom, and we're reminded of some truly dire ideas that didn't go the distance – anyone remember pre-match dancing girls (right)? And the awful Sky slogan: "It's a whole new ball game!"?

It's yet another documentary where contributors settle into their chairs, glance around them and exchange banter with somebody off-screen. I'm not sure why this was ever thought to be illuminating. Could you please stop?

Cycling World Championships

2.00pm BBC2

SPORT The sport's biggest names descend on Flanders for the 94th annual Road World Championships. This is spring classics country, but instead we have autumn classics in today's women's elite road race, and tomorrow's men's, both of which take in the short but brutal cobbled climbs for which the region is known.

Lizzie Deignan leads the GB women's team's challenge, while the men have quality at either end of the age spectrum. At 36, Mark Cavendish is still a sprinter to reckon with, but look out for two 22-year-olds who have both had break-out seasons – Tom Pidcock and Ethan Hayter. SIMON O'HAGAN

Global Citizen Live

5.30pm, 9.20pm, 12 midnight
BBC1, 10.10pm BBC2

MUSIC "Defend the planet, defeat poverty" is the motto of this Live Aid-style charity concert taking place across the globe.

For UK viewers, coverage begins at 5.30pm on BBC1, where Emma Willis and Ade Adepitan introduce sets by the likes of Kylie Minogue, Rag n Bone Man and K-Pop stars BTS. The latter will come live from Seoul, while Elton John will play at the foot of the Eiffel Tower, which sounds worth catching.

There's more coverage on BBC2 at 10.10pm with Stormzy in London and an eclectic bill at Central Park in New York, ranging from Lang Lang to Lizzo. DAVID BUTCHER

Boxing: Joshua v Usyk

from 6pm Sky Sports Box Office

SPORT It was at Arsenal's Highbury stadium that Henry Cooper fought Muhammad Ali back in 1966, drawing a then record crowd for a UK bout of 46,000. Now Tottenham Hotspur's ground plays host to a heavyweight contest expected to be witnessed by 60,000 – Britain's Anthony Joshua against Ukrainian challenger Oleksandr Usyk.

Much has changed in boxing in 55 years, not least the arrival of pay-per-view. To watch tonight's fight on Sky Sports Box Office will cost you £24.95. Most takers will surely be urging on Joshua, in the hope that victory will lead to the ultimate showdown – a fight against GB's other great heavyweight, WBC title holder Tyson Fury. SO'H

PICK OF THE DAY Strictly Come Dancing 7.00pm BBC1

ENTERTAINMENT The nights are starting to draw in and life is still not quite back to pre-pandemic normal, but who cares when there are glitter and spray tans and sexy tangos and elegant waltzes to distract us? Oh, it's so good to have you back, Strictly.

A full complement of 15 celebrities is taking to the floor this year (Covid permitting). We've seen them do a few steps in the launch show's group dance but this is where it gets serious – although the humiliation of being first to leave is saved for next week's show.

According to the bookies, Tom Fletcher, Robert Webb and Rose Ayling-Ellis are expected to perform well, but as seasoned Strictly viewers know, it's not simply about nimble footwork – personality, humility and humour also help get those votes rolling in. JANE RACKHAM
See feature: page 14

STREAMING NOW

While we wait for the new series of Borgen to make its way to Netflix next year, here's something to tide Scandi political drama fans over for a while:

The Inner Circle, which is new to Walter Presents/All 4.

David Ehrling (Niklas Engdahl, right), Sweden's Minister for Enterprise and Innovation, is on holiday with his wonderfully unimpressed family when he receives a phone call from the prime minister: she's standing down and David thinks he's being anointed as her successor. But with greater power come more opportunities to become wrapped up in scandal, which an opening flashforward heavily implies has overwhelmed our man completely. With strongly drawn spin doctors, journalists and shady businessmen in the mix as well, it's a convincing portrait of political manoeuvres conducted by lost, fallible human beings. JACK SEALE

Britain's Forgotten Wars with Tony Robinson

8.20pm C4

HISTORY New series The harrowing photographs of RAF pilots John Peters and John Nichol went round the world after their Tornado was shot down on the first day of the Gulf War in 1991 and they became Saddam's prisoners. They're a lasting symbol of the conflict that Tony Robinson presents as a significant war, now overshadowed by the Iraq War and Afghanistan. One soldier reflects that people don't remember successful conflicts so well. Is she right?

As well as a reappraisal of Saddam's motives for annexing Kuwait, Robinson also considers the determination to "use a sledgehammer to crack a nut" against him. CAROLINE FROST

Paul O'Grady's Saturday Night Line-Up

9.35pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT Viewers seem to have mixed feelings about this show. Some enjoy seeing celebrities being candid, saucy and rowdy, while others have dismissed it as puerile nonsense. But it's worth watching for the anecdotes. I liked Omid Djalili's story about the public confusing him with Stavros Flatley, and Brian Cox's reasoning for who out of Djalili, Sally Lindsay, Howard Donald and Arlene Phillips would be most likely to change career.

The quick-fire round can be funny, too. With all the squabbling, pushing and shoving as they try to arrange themselves in the correct order, it's like a chaotic children's party game. JR

Hurt Locker Hero

11.05pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Of the many films that have been made about the War on Terror and its ramifications, few can match this 2017 profile of Iraqi Army bomb disposal expert Fakhir Berwari for intimacy and immediacy. Armed with a penknife and some pliers, he approaches bombs and booby traps with the same reckless assurance that enables him to uncover land mines with a broken pickaxe. But, when Isis threatens his hometown of Duhok in 2014, Berwari joins the Kurdish Peshmurga.

Watching this maverick in action is the only way to understand his commitment to the cause of reclaiming a battleground for the ordinary residents of Iraqi Kurdistan.

DAVID PARKINSON

Bettany Hughes's Treasures of the World

7.20pm C4

HISTORY Our guide to ancient human creativity takes to the sea as she turns her attention to the Mediterranean (in an episode postponed from last week), which she describes as "the lifeblood of civilisation". Her first stop is a sea cave under Gibraltar where people have left offerings in what's probably been a shrine for more than 2,500 years. On Malta she considers the island's pivotal place in the Med's history, including yet another trip under ground to see some still-working technology from Islam's golden age, before she lands on the Italian island of Ischia to try out its Roman thermal baths.

The final destination on this trip is the "mystical hallowed sanctuary" of the Greek island of Delos, where Hughes is thrilled to be allowed to stay overnight on the summer solstice. It looks truly magical. GILL CRAWFORD is in a tight spot

PICK OF THE DAY Vigil 9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA OF THE WEEK I'm forbidden by the BBC to discuss any part of the finale of this submarine-set thriller. Not the plot, nor the characters and certainly not its conclusion. Which doesn't give me a lot to go on. It's not like I can make observations about the views out of the portholes. Perhaps I should give my opinion using semaphore flags? Or I could just discuss the merits of Crimson Tide and The Hunt for Red October instead?

All I can really say, I guess, is that there's still big danger on board the boat, what with sonar operative Matthew Doward (Lorne MacFadyen) having now been revealed to be up to no good. What remains to be seen, though, is whether Amy (Suranne Jones) will be able to expose him. As we saw last week, she's in a confined space where water levels are rising rapidly – a frantic situation with obvious parallels to the trauma she endured in her past. She's currently managing to take big gulps of air, but as tensions increase further, you might well forget to do the same. DAVID BROWN

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1

ANTIQUES Usually, when an item is valued on Antiques Roadshow, the owner is so dumbfounded they simply mouth "wow" a few times. Or brush it off with a "Well, I'm not going to sell it", which we don't always believe. So, it's a real joy to hear a gentleman respond to the news that his treasure is worth up to £3,000 with a wry smile and a quip: "That's amazing... but I think she paid £4,000 for it!"

Tonight we are at Edinburgh's Royal Botanic Garden, where the experts also see jewels belonging to the Russian Imperial family, a Maori treasure box, three paintings of women by female artists, and an astonishingly valuable Scottish football trophy. JANE RACKHAM

Mortimer & Whitehouse: Gone Fishing

8.00pm BBC2

ENTERTAINMENT Bob is cooking lunch by the side of a lake in Wales as Paul approaches, singing to himself. Bob asks why he's in a good mood. "Fishing," says Paul, simply. "You know, companionship, fresh air, the joy of living. And look at that! Some sort of muck in your frying pan."

Yes, it's one of Bob's "mucky treats" involving smoked salmon with a mash made from potato crisps. (You can find some of his recipes on the show's website but I'm not sure that one will make the cut.) It's part of another reflective, funny programme that is at one level about catching carp and at another about living cheerfully in the shadow of death: Bob meets a fisherman with cancer doing just that. DAVID BUTCHER

Chris and Meg's Wild Summer

8.30pm BBC2

TRAVEL Chris Packham has had laser eye surgery and says he now feels like the Six Million Dollar Man. Unfortunately for us, there's no slow-motion Steve Austin-style running on this sunny trip to the Cairngorms. Rather, he's striding off with real purpose ahead of Meg to catch sight of nesting ospreys.

The pair certainly have more luck on this mission than they do later on at Strathspey, where they're hoping to spy some pine martens. Each makes a prediction as to how long they'll have to wait, but so protracted does their visit become that Chris remarks wryly that he feels they have a greater chance of seeing Dean Martin. DBr

The Last Mountain

9.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Filmed over the course of 25 years by Chris Terrill, The Last Mountain charts how, in 1995, Alison Hargreaves, one of the greatest ever female mountaineers, died on K2 in Pakistan, leaving behind a husband and two young children.

Her son Tom would become an outstanding climber himself ("A mountain warrior," as his father puts it) and his spirit infuses the film, through interviews and social media posts. But history repeated: Tom was killed in 2019 trying to scale Nanga Parbat, 100 miles or so from K2. We follow his sister Kate as she travels to the mountain as part of a powerful tale about the extremes of nature, adventure, freedom and risk. DB

STREAMING NOW

Once upon a time, Faking It was a fun reality show on C4 in which people tried to acquire a new skill in record time. Now the same title has been repurposed for an unrelated strand on Discovery+ with a darker aspect. It features psychologists and analysts examining the behaviour of those guilty of or accused of heinous crimes, sifting for the telltale signs that might have given them away. The latest instalment is Gary Glitter: a Faking It Special, which has plenty of footage to work with as it reveals the clues to the singer's monstrosity that were there all along.

The same approach is taken in The Murder of Grace Millane, looking at Jesse Kempson, who is in a New Zealand prison for killing an Essex gap-year tourist. The experts examine Kempson's police interviews in unpleasant but fascinating detail.

JACK SEALE

The Bangers: Murder at the Farm

9.00pm Sky Crime

DOCUMENTARY New series Louis Theroux has spent his career profiling odd, often dangerous personalities, so it's no surprise to see his name attached to this exploration of the White House Farm killings. After all, psyches don't come much more warped than Jeremy Bamber's. But, in this instance, he's behind the camera as executive producer.

The result is a more traditional true-crime doc that features interviews with friends of the Bangers, as well as police and lawyers involved in the case. But an attempt to study the psychology of the family unit as a whole feels fresh, as do contributions made by a local resident who swears that Jeremy is innocent. DBr

Foxy's Fearless 48 Hours with Rob Delaney

10.00pm C4

DOCUMENTARY New series Bear Grylls, who has made a whole industry from these celebrities-out-of-their-comfort-zone series, might be consulting copyright lawyers as Jason Fox's version comes to Channel 4. We know how the genre works: tough guy takes softy celeb to the wilderness and makes them face their fears. But the fact that Foxy's first guest is writer/comedian/actor Rob Delaney (co-creator of Catastrophe) makes this well worth watching.

As they tackle challenges in North Wales (tombstoning into a quarry pool, jumping off a viaduct, etc), Delaney is philosophical and very funny about it all: "If this is where I have to meet my maker, there are worse places." DB

Being James Bond

10.20pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY Daniel Craig's time as the martini-favouring agent of chaos has offered a solid, muscular clutch of film adventures, with his first outing, Casino Royale, still cited by many fans as the best in the franchise's 60-odd-year history.

As his tyre-squealing journey ends with the release this week of No Time to Die, Craig says, "I'm incredibly proud and fortunate to do this," although 15 years of biff-bang as "Bond-James-Bond" have certainly taken their toll on his body.

I wonder if the famously taciturn Craig, in conversation with his 007 co-producers Michael G Wilson and Barbara Broccoli, will say, "You expect me to talk?" MARK BRAXTON
See feature: page 8

Endeavour

8.00pm ITV

DRAMA Those with a working knowledge of slasher films will understand the significance of the surname Loomis. There were Loomises in Psycho, Halloween, Scream and now also in this horror-movie influenced case for Morse, which finds the DS holed up in a snowstorm at an abandoned hotel, which we're told was the scene of a psychopath's killing spree years ago. Oh, and it just so happens to be situated near Haddonfield, though I'm assuming it's not the same town that Michael Myers made notorious.

Pretty soon, there are new stabbings to deal with, all of which take place atmospherically in the shadows and to the accompaniment of a thud-thud heartbeat on the soundtrack. And while things do at times teeter on the edge of ludicrous, star Shaun Evans is never anything less than compelling as the now alcohol-dependent detective. DBr

RT Ep 1. Actor and comedian Rob Delaney joins Jason Fox - aka Foxy from SAS: Who Dares Wins - in rural north Wales to take on three challenges over two days. The first stop is a 40m-high abandoned viaduct that Foxy wants Rob to jump off. The next morning, training day begins with some tombstoning, as Rob takes on a cliff jump into a flooded quarry. If Rob is successful, the next task is to cross a 300ft-long highline spanning a 250ft drop from which, halfway across, they must drop into the abyss. And if Rob survives these two challenges, then the viaduct jump awaits. See page 65.

PICK OF THE DAY Gordon, Gino & Fred Go Greek 9.00pm ITV

ENTERTAINMENT One French plonker, one cocky Italian and one Greek god – well, that's how Gordon Ramsay describes the laddish trio – embark on an irresistibly silly and saucy Greek odyssey. But wherever they are, the show's formula – a mix of bickering, bromance and bravado – remains the same.

They're island-hopping aboard a smart catamaran this time, so there's plenty of opportunity for Fred Sirieix to parade around in his budgie smugglers, and for Gino D'Acampo to reveal that he likes to keep his "games room nice and tidy" (don't ask). They're as juvenile and competitive as ever, whether it's driving a tuk-tuk around the narrow streets of Mykonos, making bougatsa and moussaka in Santorini, or diving for lobster off Crete.

However, there is one moment when an emotional Gino talks very movingly about the death of his mother. Suddenly, the joshing and macho posturing evaporate. You get the feeling that these three men really are great friends. JANE RACKHAM

BOTTOMS UP
Gordon Ramsay, Gino D'Acampo and Fred Sirieix enjoy a beach barbecue on the Greek island of Mykonos

The Perfect Pitch

DAYTIME CHOICE New series

Bearing in mind the vagaries of the British weather, this may be a bit late for those planning a 2021 staycation. But then, as a TV show, it's more about its entertainment value than a serious evaluation of our campsites.

Each day this week, six excitable camping connoisseurs arrive at a site (today it's Low Sizergh dairy farm in the Lake District) to experience its facilities and then rate them.

Initially, there's a lot of whooping and jolliness, but their enthusiasm begins to pall when they attempt a "fun" raft-building activity on Windermere meant to promote team harmony. Nobody gets voted out, but it did remind me of C4's Coach Trip. JR

Jamie Oliver: Together

8.00pm C4

FOOD Gnarly: it's one of Jamie's favourite adjectives (he dropped pukka about 20 series ago). The dictionary definition is "twisted" or "dangerous", and he uses it to describe food with charred, almost burnt, knobbly bits. That can be cauliflower, sprouts, chicken or potatoes but here, in a Mexican-themed feast, it's pork belly – slow-cooked until golden and, yes, gnarly – served in handmade tacos with all sorts of spicy, vibrant side dishes.

However, sometimes it's the tiny foodie flourishes – like last week's mint sugar – that catch your eye. An intriguing sounding spicy dust made from chocolate, chilli, all-spice and cinnamon sprinkled on a semifreddo could whet your appetite. JR

The Architecture the Railways Built

8.00pm Yesterday

DOCUMENTARY Historian Tim Dunn gets seriously good value from his rail pass as he journeys to London, Manchester and Sweden for tonight's mix of serious documentary and wide-eyed trainpottery. The latter is more evident as Dunn delves into the hidden past of London's Charing Cross, a terminus that welcomes 30 million passengers a year.

He's fairly happy investigating the French-inspired hotel that fronts the building, but he threatens to explode with nerdy joy when he visits the cathedral-like halls that support the station. Off limits to the public, these vast, empty spaces look like they could be in ancient Egypt rather than central London. CERI THOMAS

The Goes Wrong Show

8.30pm BBC1 (not N Ireland)

COMEDY The team behind The Play that Goes Wrong mount a second series of their shambolic shows-within-shows for BBC1.

Ructions at the Cornley Drama Society mean Robert Grove has taken over as director. Their production this time is a family saga that opens after the First World War – and keeps re-opening because Robert insists they go again until they get it right. In practice, things get worse with each repeat of Summer Once Again... Again. Lines are mangled, chairs collapse, wigs catch fire. It's not subtle, but it is expertly done by a cast who know how to convey the rising panic of actors determined to persevere, whatever the chaos. DAVID BUTCHER

STREAMING NOW

Any show picks up when Lorraine Ashbourne appears, even the already very funny Alma's Not Normal (see below). Her turn as Alma's blunt grandmother Joan (far right) continues a long TV career in which comedy and drama have been easily interchanged: the latter in Public Enemies (Acorn TV), in series two of Unforgotten (BritBox) and as Barbara Castle in series three of The Crown (Netflix); the former, albeit with a heavy dramatic undertow, as the alcoholic Carol in Nana's Party, a memorable series two episode of Inside No 9 (iPlayer). Ashbourne might have found her biggest audience to date, however, in a show that caused a sensation when it debuted on Netflix last Christmas: in the period saga Bridgerton, Ashbourne is the wily housekeeper Mrs Varley. JACK SEALE

Silent Witness

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA Another security pass is needed at the Lyell Centre, this time for Simone Tyler, a forensic ecologist brought in to help following the murder of a promising boxer.

This newbie staff member is played by Genesis Lynea, familiar for her stint as Casualty's forthright Archie Hudson. Simone is nowhere near as confident and thinks she'd be better off among the fossils at the Natural History Museum, where she originally honed her expertise. Nikki and Jack, however, believe that Simone ought to switch her focus to the dead bodies being examined in their lab. Find out what decision she makes about her future when the story concludes tomorrow at 9.00pm.

DAVID BROWN

Inside America's Treasure House

9.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Covid, Black Lives Matter and political uncertainty sent many arts institutions into a tailspin in 2020: "it's like a wildfire across the cultural landscape," says one Metropolitan Museum of Art staff member, whose job is to encourage donations that help keep the lights on in the New York City museum. But with a financial shortfall of some $150 million, sacrifices must be made.

Yet the Met's work continues. In the final episode, we meet the young Korean-American intern wowed by medieval art in the Cloisters and witness preparations for a huge Costume Institute exhibition (although there's no Met Gala to drum up funds). GILL CRAWFORD

Alma's Not Normal

10.00pm BBC2

(11.45pm in Northern Ireland)

SITCOM With Alma's escort work starting to pick up, she finds herself flush with cash for the first time in her life. After a shopping spree that has more than a touch of Ab Fab about it, she books a meal at a posh restaurant in her continued efforts to bring her family together. "Let's not ruin this by being ourselves," she says, in one of writer Sophie Willan's many perfect throwaway lines. But with drug-addict mum Lin (Siobhan Finneran) and grandma Joan (Lorraine Ashbourne) never more than minutes away from butting heads, any joy is short-lived.

It might not be as brilliant as the standout pilot episode, but Alma is pin-sharp when riffing on tense familial dynamics. FRANCES TAYLOR

CAN SHE GET AN AMEN?

RuPaul is all dressed up and ready for the new series

RuPaul's Drag Race UK

10.35pm BBC1 (11.15pm in Northern Ireland; 12.20am in Scotland)

ENTERTAINMENT An assault on the retina, eardrum and the nation's taste sensors, Drag Race returns for a third sashay down the runway – and very welcome it is too. It's astonishing that these Isles can yield so much talent in this field, but RuPaul and his people have harvested another dozen drag queens to cavort, dazzle and "lip-sync for their life" across the ten weeks.

I'm particularly taken by the terrifying horror-show that is Charity Kase; "sexy mama" Choriza May, who brings a splash of Newcastle and Valencia; the "Danny Dyer of drag" Scarlett Harlett; and Cardiff disco diva Victoria Scone, the show's first "Afab" ("assigned female at birth").

What's endearing is their genuine awe to be in the presence of RuPaul, an immaculate and benign goddess as ever, and those moments when the queens' façade of fierceness slips to reveal their vulnerability. Tonight, Matt Lucas adds some twinkle to the judging panel. PATRICK MULKERN

LET THEM EAT CAKE
Noel, Paul, Prue and Matt oversee more mouthwatering marvels

PICK OF THE DAY The Great British Bake Off 8.00pm c4

FOOD There's no smile like the smile of a baker whose showstopper has worked. After weeks of planning and hours of toiling, the glow of relief when judges love the result is a pleasure to watch – one of the things this show reliably delivers. But it delivers disasters, too...

This is biscuit week and the final challenge is to make working replicas of childhood toys. We get gingerbread pinball machines, rocking horses, windmills – even a snooker table complete with balls and cues. They're creations to gladden the hardest heart – just as long as they don't fall to biscuity pieces.

Elsewhere, the bakers have worked out ways to the judges' good books: deploy ginger for Paul and for Prue, use the booze. Harder is navigating the teasy-banter bits. Noel Fielding this week sports a ponytail like a goth Steven Seagal, but his wit is as offbeat as ever: "I didn't go to school," he jokes at one point. "I was raised by pangolins." DAVID BUTCHER

Live Champions League

7.00pm BT2, 7.15pm BT3 (k/o 8pm)

SPORT A fixture with the allure of Paris Saint-Germain v Manchester City (BT2) is worthy of the final of the Champions League. But here they are meeting in the group stage, and the pressure is on PSG. The French side, newly endowed with Lionel Messi, could only draw 1-1 at Bruges in the opening round, while City were thumping Leipzig 6-3.

It's a similar story with FC Porto v Liverpool (BT3), the Reds going into the match on the back of a home win, their opponents having begun their campaign with an away draw.

Tomorrow, Manchester United are home to Villarreal (k/o 8pm BT3) in a repeat of last season's Europa League final, while Chelsea are at Juventus (k/o 8pm BT2). SIMON O'HAGAN

EastEnders

7.30pm BBC1

SOAP Gray's storyline may have started out as an admirable attempt to address the trauma of domestic abuse, but it's now turned into a schlock serial-killer plot that's more concerned with who he's going to bump off next. So far, he's got away with murdering Chantelle, Tina and Kush, but it's now looking as though Whitney ought to be watching her back, as the swivel-eyed solicitor is getting more than a little obsessed with her.

The latest development sees Whit being offered a job singing on board a cruise ship, but Gray immediately tries to talk her out of going. And when his words fail to convince, he decides to take matters into his own hands... DAVID BROWN

Saving Lives at Sea

8.00pm BBC2

DOCUMENTARY Thankfully the RNLI call-outs don't often end in tragedy but when they do, it affects the crew for ever. "It's not why you sign up – you feel you've let the family down," explains one of the St Agnes team. They had a fatality last November, so hearing that two young lads are struggling in the water – a time-critical shout – at the same place this summer brings back terrible memories.

We're also reminded that you don't have to be a man to do this job. We join two of the many female volunteers, one on the south coast and the other in Whitby, North Yorkshire, as they risk their lives to rescue others.

JANE RACKHAM

Silent Witness

9.00pm BBC1

DRAMA There are some who watch Silent Witness for the forensics, but I see from Twitter that there are plenty who are more focused on the team's personal lives. And in the wrap-up of this latest mystery, there's much emotional baggage being rummaged through, as Jack has a heart-to-heart with niece Cara, while Nikki reveals that she's still in a long-distance relationship with US diplomat Matt. Though I can't help but wonder whether we're building towards something more romantic between her and Jack, what with them cosily sharing some takeaway pizza.

There's still another two-parter before this series ends, so who knows what they'll be getting up to between now and then? DBr

STREAMING NOW

A second series of Only Murders in the Building (Disney+) has been commissioned, as the comedy drama continues to accrue admirers. A shaggy dog story about a trio of previously unconnected neighbours – Selena Gomez (right), Steve Martin and Martin Short – in a sumptuous old Manhattan apartment block, who band together to investigate an apparent suicide, it's got an open-hearted honesty and curiosity about it, as well as a stream of funnies from Martin and Short.

This week, yet more likeable, interesting characters arrive as we go home with the cop who signed off the case, but who now revisits it upon hearing the podcast our heroes are making; and we meet the mother of the mysterious Mabel (Gomez). Then, inevitably, another big clue arrives and the narrative trundles happily on.

JACK SEALE

Kim Philby: His Most Intimate Betrayal

9.00pm, 10.00pm BBC4

DOCUMENTARY Ben Macintyre unpeels the layers of Moscow's ultimate double agent in this gripping documentary from 2014. At one level, Philby's story is the classic espionage adventure: the gentleman spy who charmed everyone at MI6 – and hoodwinked them to an almost farcical extent. Colleagues didn't just like him, they hero-worshipped him. Macintyre traces Philby's streak of cruelty, notably in his betrayal of his oldest friend, Nicholas Elliott, who defended him until it was too late.

What keeps striking you, though it shouldn't come as a surprise, is the clubbiness of the British spy world then, like a Monty Python spoof of the establishment. DB

Never Mind the Buzzcocks

9.00pm Sky Max

COMEDY The revived comedy quiz is back in the zone, with raucous laughs coming from outside the box as much as the quiz itself. An introductory health and welfare chat reveals captain Daisy May Cooper's "only apples" diet, while contestant Yungblud insists he has been "running with a bin bag on" – the latter's story about Rod Stewart tops the one written on the cards.

Greg Davies has settled comfortably into the presenter's chair, Cooper's sparring with Noel Fielding has plenty of comic mileage and a new Mick Hucknall Photobomb round tickles teams and audience alike. The Unsubstantiated Gossip looks like keeping the legal teams busy, too... MARK BRAXTON

Back to Life

10.35pm, 11.05pm BBC1
(11.05pm, 11.35pm in Northern Ireland)

COMEDY DRAMA Only six weeks out of prison and Miri is still missing some key life experiences. Technically, she's been learning to drive for 20 years but never passed her test – and, despite her love of alpacas, she's never seen one in person.

So in this final double helping of Daisy Haggard's comedy drama she decides to tick off her to-do list, with the day doubling as a "farewell date" with Billy (Adeel Akhtar) as the police close in after another murder.

Is this truly the end for Miri? Hopefully not – and based on the final scenes, I'd say there's some life in this story yet.

HUW FULLERTON

A House through Time

9.00pm BBC2

HISTORY For a programme about dusty social history, this series can be unexpectedly emotional. Watching former residents of a Leeds house come to life at the hands of David Olusoga, we get a strong sense of the interconnectedness of people, the struggle of ordinary lives, and the heartbreak or fulfilment that people found.

That may sound corny but you feel any one of Olusoga's subjects could be the stuff of a Play for Today or an art-house movie. Except, of course, we often don't learn what they did before they came to the house or once they left it.

So what we get are sometimes no more than vivid glimpses of lives – this week including a merchant navy officer torpedoed in the Second World War, a war bride from Greece, a Yorkshire Post film critic and a psychologist who came to Leeds for the nightclubs. DB

The pick of today's TV

Television Wednesday

SIBLING CRISIS
Sisters Helen and Theresa (Rachael Stirling and Anna Maxwell Martin)

PICK OF THE DAY Hollington Drive 9.00pm ITV

DRAMA New series Misery and pain drive this psychological drama, particularly the kinds that lurk under the neat surface of suburban life. Rachael Stirling and Anna Maxwell Martin play married sisters who live next to each other on a close of pristine houses. We join them at a family barbecue where tensions sizzle like bangers on a grill.

Theresa (Maxwell Martin) is worried about their ten-year-old children going to play in the park, but is overruled. "Fun, remember? Fun!" her husband Fraser (Rhashan Stone) chides. But fun is the last thing anyone is having, and Theresa's foreboding is borne out when the kids don't return as promised.

Instead, she finds them at local woods, seemingly fighting, and perhaps hiding something in a bin. Later it emerges that a neighbour's child has gone missing. As secrets start to spill out, there's a stilted horror to it all – something Maxwell Martin excels at – with a definite sense of worse to come. DAVID BUTCHER

The Repair Shop

8.00pm BBC1

CRAFT When Kirsten Ramsay is confronted with a jumble of pieces that once formed a 2,000-year-old Chinese statue, she can barely contain her excitement, because it's the oldest item ever to visit the barn. Her anxiety about its state is obvious, too. But it's interesting how lengthy, painstaking restorations give the experts time to reflect on the stories behind the item.

She's not the only restorer working on broken limbs: the "Teddy Bear Ladies" have two dolls belonging to Special Olympics gold medal-winner Jess Hiles, who wants one doll to be fitted with a running blade. Everyone's in pieces when they're reunited. JANE RACKHAM
The view from Will Kirk's sofa: p162

Your Home Made Perfect

8.00pm BBC2

PROPERTY Architects with cunning, stunning ideas compete to remodel more problem homes while Angela Scanlon gasps from the sidelines. For once this series opener doesn't involve a couple; instead, it's a mother and son from east London, whose cramped, cluttered house was due to be done up years ago, until family tragedy struck.

It doesn't offer much of a canvas for the rival architects to work on – or much of a budget. As they pitch their ideas through the wonder of virtual reality (always a great sequence), we learn about how to make compact spaces flexible. But for all the cleverness, you'll still end up wondering – where does all the stuff go? DB

Location, Location, Location

8.00pm C4

PROPERTY The home-search stalwart is back for a 36th series, but there's no sign of the presenters slowing down. In fact, at one point Kirstie Allsopp chides Phil Spencer, who's itching to be on the move. The reason for his hopping up and down? The frenzied London market, where properties are flying off the shelves and competition is fierce. Can K&P snare a deal for two sets of first-time buyers in south London?

Serial renters Alan and Rachel want their own home, but have set their net too wide to pinpoint what they need. Meanwhile, Jess and Zac have seen over 60 properties so far, but Zac summarises their predicament neatly: "We sound like a pair of indecisive idiots." GILL CRAWFORD

Jay's Yorkshire Workshop

9.00pm BBC2

CRAFT Like The Repair Shop, this is a warm hug of a programme. The combination of craftsmanship, humbling stories, teamwork and the nurturing vibe from furniture makers Ciaran, Isabelle and Saf has made it a real hit with viewers.

The local heroes Jay Blades is thanking tonight are 12-year-old Henry, who saved his father's life; Brenda, who runs a non-profit furniture service for people in need; and "music man" Pav, who cheers up the community with his infectious energy. The reveals are always touching but, this being the last episode of the series, the team's heartfelt farewell words to each other bring tears to everyone's eyes. JR

STREAMING NOW

Less edgy than the British series it was based on, the American take on Mistresses debuts on Disney+ today having first been shown in 2013. Jes Macallan, Yunjin Kim, Rochelle Aytes and Alyssa Milano (right) play friends united by their tendency to indulge in illicit or controversial romantic relationships, across four series of soapy intrigue that doesn't require too much thought from the viewer.

Also new on Disney+ from today is the ninth series of excellent US mockumentary sitcom Modern Family – even if it was a bit more excellent in the earlier series – and two series of The Great North, an animated sitcom starring Parks and Recreation's Nick Offerman as a divorced fisherman bringing up four children in Alaska. Will Forte, Aparna Nancherla, Jenny Slate, Megan Mullally and Alanis Morissette are also in the voice cast. JACK SEALE

Grand Designs 9.00pm c4

PROPERTY Dan and Nina Rowland have an advantage over many of the ambitious new builders featured on this series. He's an architectural designer; she's an interior designer.

Having spotted the potential of a 1.5-acre plot with a huge but rather swampy pond near Chichester, West Sussex, they set about "floating" a three-storey sustainable home over it. Their idea was to build a larch-wrapped five-bedroomed house where the kitchen hung over the pond so the family could simply open the doors and enjoy the water and the creatures it would attract.

It was inevitable that there'd be budget problems but, like so many others, they didn't foresee the disruption caused by repeated lockdowns. JR

Hitmen: Reloaded

9.00pm, 9.30pm Sky Comedy

SITCOM Mel Giedroyc and Sue Perkins return in the knockabout sitcom where they play professional killers prone to deathly mishaps. As we rejoin them, Fran (Sue) and Jamie (Mel) are pursuing a drug-trafficker-cum-football-mascot through a stadium for a scene that culminates with a bleakly satisfying visual gag.

It's a good start and the comedy feels more assured generally, as the pair head to a school reunion (with shades of Grosse Pointe Blank). "We've come a long way from those girls who left that place with an A-level and three STDs between them," says Fran. Katherine Parkinson and Sanjeev Bhaskar also star, the latter as an old schoolmate who now works in stationery. Or does he? DB

Outsiders 10.00pm Dave

COMEDY New series David Mitchell hosts a rustic romp that involves six comedians pitting their survival skills (loosely defined) against the great outdoors – if the great outdoors were a stretch of pleasant-looking woodland in the home counties.

It's essentially a relaxed, campsite version of Taskmaster where you get badges instead of points, but the guinea pigs include Ed Gamble, Kerry Godliman, Lou Sanders and Jamali Maddix, so there's quality joshing here.

Their first task is to bury the hatchet – in an actual tree, attempting to win their lumberjack badge. It's enjoyable watching cosseted townies trying to get ruffy-tuffy and mostly failing, while Mitchell mocks their efforts from a safe distance. DB

ISLAND LIFE

Ben, from Mull, considers what lies ahead

28 Up: Millennium Generation

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY Imagine the pressure of someone interviewing you every seven years to take stock – very publicly – of how your life is going. I'm in awe of the subjects in these documentary projects, but the insights they offer are striking. This is the fourth instalment of the project that began in 2000, charting the progress of children who turned seven that year. They are now 28, an age when career paths are taking shape for better or worse and life decisions start to feel pressing.

John, the thrill-seeking BMX biker, is working as an electrician and planning a move to Australia. Ambitious, upbeat Sanchez, once in the first team squad at Leeds United, has bowed out of football and into a job as a radio DJ – with a clothing brand as side hustle. Meanwhile, Ben from Mull is "still trying to figure everything out, really – even at this old age!" DB

The Hairy Bikers Go North

8.00pm BBC2

FOOD Some think it's heresy to eat anything but fish and chips in Whitby, but Dave Myers and Si King want to prove there's more to Yorkshire's coast than battered fish and fried potatoes. As the first food producers they meet are a seaweed farmer, a vineyard owner – yes, a vineyard in Yorkshire! – and a world-class pâtissier, I'd say job done.

In picturesque Robin Hood's Bay they do make themselves a fabulous fish supper of langoustines with an intense Marie Rose sauce, while in Whitby they tuck into kippers. "It's not so grim up north, is it?" they conclude. JANE RACKHAM

Joe Lycett's Got Your Back

8.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT This episode, the thorny topic of gambling – and specifically, gambling adverts that could appeal to children – is in Joe Lycett's line of fire. Underneath the daft skits and soft-science segments that only really give a cursory poke at the psychology behind compulsive gambling, there's a stern message. As his guest Sara Pascoe puts it, the show is "genuinely doing a really good positive thing, which comedy rarely does".

There's also the regular fare: more deadpan asides from Mark Silcox and a Make Poverty History spoof campaign that takes a swipe at the soft target of supermarket substitutions. FRANCES TAYLOR

Ambulance

9.00pm BBC1

DOCUMENTARY It's hard not to gush about this programme. Following the North West Ambulance Service, that cares for the 1.4 million people of Lancashire, it offers an unflinching insight into the turbulent shifts of paramedics. As they meet patients on the verge of suicide and aid a newborn experiencing breathing difficulties, their versatility is hypnotic.

Of particular note is paramedic Nutan, whose kindness seeps into every interaction. She constantly offers a "cuppa" or a "brew" to her patients, her sensitivity leaving a mark on those she cares for. It's a charismatic contrast to paramedic duo, Josh and Josh, who serve up light-hearted humour and plenty of smiles, despite the long-slog of 12 hour shifts. KELLY-ANNE TAYLOR

PICK OF THE DAY All Creatures Great and Small 9.00pm Channel 5

DRAMA It feels as though All Creatures is a little nervous about the recasting of Mrs Pumphrey following the death of Dame Diana Rigg in September last year. Yes, the old eccentric does make an appearance this evening, but she's preceded on screen for a good 30 minutes by her pampered Pekingese Tricki Woo, who's in need of babysitting by his "uncle Herriot". But a spry Patricia Hodge is terrific value in the role. In fact, she effortlessly steals her debut scene, with her take on the wealthy widower managing to be ridiculously snobby but also touchingly warm-hearted.

Elsewhere, we have Siegfried setting Tristan a challenge, as well as work struggles for James – with advice for all three coming from Mrs Hall. Someone really should write an article about the wisdom shown by TV housekeepers. DAVID BROWN

STREAMING NOW

Taskmaster gets some pretty big contestants these days: you probably don't need to be told that Victoria Coren Mitchell hosts Only Connect (iPlayer) or that Alan Davies is best known for Jonathan Creek (BritBox) and QI (iPlayer). One major talent you might have previously been unaware of is that of Guz Khan (far right), whose comedy Man like Mobeen is still available via iPlayer as a three-series box set.

A broad but savvy sitcom about a Birmingham man tasked with caring for his younger sister while keeping his idiot friends out of trouble, Man like Mobeen has racism and gang violence as strong undercurrents beneath what seems initially like a fairly standard character comedy. It's very funny but the handling of serious issues shows a fiery intelligence that makes Khan a star to watch. JACK SEALE

The Real Manhunt: the Night Stalker

9.00pm ITV

DOCUMENTARY For viewers gripped by last week's Martin Clunes drama, here's a chance to hear from the real-life officers who tracked serial burglar and rapist Delroy Grant over 17 years. Known as the Night Stalker, Grant's offences were terrifying for his vulnerable victims (all aged from their late 60s to their early 90s) and his pattern of offending over many years was, a senior officer says here, "a stain on the reputation of the Met".

That meant, she adds, "We were going to throw the kitchen sink at it," which they did via a massive stakeout operation. It finally bore fruit, but then came the realisation that, but for a vital DNA mix-up, Grant might have been caught years earlier. DAVID BUTCHER

Taskmaster

9.00pm C4

ENTERTAINMENT There's a moment in tonight's chaotic show where poker ace Victoria Coren Mitchell chips in with a bit of quickfire mental maths as if it were the easiest thing in the world. Like so much of the show, it's a joy to witness, and VCM's pitch for why the triple word score from Scrabble that she has brought in for the prize task is "the most awesome square thing" is equally good ("Very, very elegant bulls***," concedes Greg Davies).

Elsewhere, Coren Mitchell is far from her comfort zone, but that's the point of Taskmaster, to be a discomfort zone. Trying to taste the food ingredients in various types of unpleasant gloop, for instance: Desiree Burch decides one tastes of "oatmeal and death". DB

Mark Kermode's Secrets of Cinema

11.00pm BBC4

ARTS This cinematic essay from the man in black (first shown in 2020) lovingly examines "the uneasy world of mystery and suspense": the spy movie. Good timing with the latest Bond movie finally about to be released. Naturally, 007 is heavily featured (Skyfall is one of Kermode's favourite movies from the past decade, although so is Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy – see right – which couldn't be more different). As always there are thought-provoking film comparisons using a split screen and a guide to cinematic tricks.

Kermode is extraordinarily skilful at making us look at, and consider, films in a different way. Yet we never feel we're being lectured. JR

GENTLE TOUCH

Marie Gentles helps troubled youngsters find their voice

Don't Exclude Me

DOCUMENTARY OF THE WEEK

This series will leave you in awe of Marie Gentles, its unassuming star. Gentles is a behavioural expert with a quiet authority and an approach to dealing with challenging children that we watch working its magic at a primary school in Southend-on-Sea.

Six-year-old Oscar and eight-year-old Jack are each showing the kind of volatile, aggressive behaviour that could soon have them excluded permanently. But Gentles believes exclusion can be disastrous for the future of a child, because a sense of rejection and failure gets baked into their sense of who they are.

So she sets to work with heroically patient teachers to calm and reassure the children, while making it clear who is in charge. It is strangely moving to watch and at a time when school exclusions in some age groups have, we are told, doubled in five years, Gentles's approach looks vital. DB

ESCAPE ARTIST?
The chained Henry Drax (Colin Farrell) is still a threat out in the Arctic

PICK OF THE DAY The North Water 9.30pm BBC2

DRAMA This gruelling hour of TV really ought to come with all manner of warnings. For language. For violence. For the sight of Henry Drax (Colin Farrell) talking far too close to people's faces after eating raw seal meat. But mainly because it's all so bleak and depressing to be witnessing these men, now stranded in the Arctic following the sinking of their ship, being brought to the brink of starvation and madness. Even Bear Grylls would be shaking his head and saying, "Rather you than me, guys."

There's also, of course, the unpredictability of Drax to consider. He's still in chains, but scheming to slip out of them, and it's all rather like a frostbitten version of that sequence in The Silence of the Lambs where Hannibal the Cannibal is plotting his escape. As with Lecter, we instinctively feel Drax is somehow going to achieve his aim, but that the fallout will be grisly for anyone who might get in his way. DAVID BROWN

7.00pm Channel 5

HISTORY Anyone tuning in for sun-dappled shots of Tony messing about on the river are in for a wait tonight. First, he digs out his old Time Team hard hat and heads down a very, very big hole in the ground.

The mission? To explore the immense engineering project upgrading London's sewage system to meet the demands of the modern city (nine million and rising).

Brace for a blizzard of factoids as he meets the patron saint of tunnellers, helps out the scientists re-creating the aroma of the Great Stink and – finally – visits the wetlands of Oxford to experience a different form of water cleansing.

CERI THOMAS

Unreported World

7.30pm C4

CURRENT AFFAIRS A new run of the series opens with a report on Mexico's lethal love affair with fizzy drinks. In Chiapas, one of its poorest states, Coca-Cola is king: it's estimated that residents there drink on average almost 16 litres a week.

Reporter Guillermo Galdos meets families in the midst of a diabetes crisis, where a combination of Covid and sugar consumption is proving fatal. One family makes a living from selling Coca-Cola but is also experiencing its health consequences first-hand.

Even worse, the drink has become embedded in indigenous customs and rituals, where – with a brutal irony – it is used by local shamans to treat diabetes. DAVID BUTCHER

Richard Osman's House of Games Night

8.30pm BBC1

QUIZ The BBC2 teatime favourite once again morphs into a primetime entertainment show on BBC1. And now there's added razzamatazz, with a US-talk-show-style house band, fronted by comedian David O'Doherty. In one round, he sings blues songs to suggest historical events the contestants must guess – typical of the pleasing streak of absurdity running through the show.

It's there when Sian Gibson has to guess what film Ed Gamble's finger-painting is meant to be and when Dara O Briain's shambolic pasta art doesn't suggest to Sindhu Vee the famous building he was going for. As ever, the urbane Richard Osman makes hosting look easy. DB

Mr Mayor

8.30pm Sky Showcase

SITCOM Your tolerance levels for kooky comedy will need to be high to enjoy this second episode. If, like me, you find that a little bit of goofy goes a long way, then Neil's day of glad-handing the public will feel far too dopey, especially after a visit to a cannabis dispensary leaves him stoned, hungry and then paranoid.

Outside of sitcomland, the scrapes he gets into would be career-ending, but Mr Mayor is sweet-natured rather than satirical, so you can bet his misdemeanours will soon be forgotten. Though, for this half-hour at least, they do cast a shadow over the more politically minded plotline, which finds Mikaela getting a lesson from the cynical Arpi in how local government in LA really works. DBr

STREAMING NOW

After spells on Amazon Prime and most recently All 4, Seinfeld today arrives in its rightful home on Netflix. It's a natural destination in the sense that its creator, Jerry Seinfeld, has been releasing content on Netflix for a while, including his stand-up specials 23 Hours to Kill and Jerry before Seinfeld, as well as the superb chat show Comedians in Cars Getting Coffee. But his sitcom Seinfeld (in which he stars, seated left, with Michael Richards, Julia Louis-Dreyfus and Jason Alexander) is where it all began.

Once it was the biggest show on US television, which is still hard to credit given that the New York exploits of four 30-something losers, observing and experiencing modern life's most annoying nuances, celebrate such a wilfully leftfield outsider's perspective. In its pomp, though, from around season four onwards, it's a comedy masterclass. JACK SEALE

Wolfe

9.00pm Sky Max

DRAMA Each investigation in this series seems determined to out-gross the one that came before, with this week's bad-taste set-up finding our forensics expert in Manchester's sewers getting to grips with a gigantic fatberg containing human body parts.

Any fans of gentle whodunnits are likely to be changing channels before the first commercial break. Hardier types will, though, enjoy the mystery that follows, which sees Wolfe growing increasingly convinced that someone on his team is trying to undermine the department.

And, yes, he does have an unfortunate medical history when it comes to paranoid thoughts. But that doesn't mean that somebody isn't now out to get him. DBr

The Cleaner

9.30pm BBC1

SITCOM Stephanie Cole knows a thing or two about surprise twists, having appeared in memorable episodes of both Inside No 9 (the live Halloween special Dead Line) and Tales of the Unexpected (the frankly terrifying The Flypaper). So, she's fully aware of what's expected of her here as she plays a refined but fierce elderly lady with pearls, cardigan and a cloud of white hair who's had an unfortunate encounter with a burglar.

It's the thief who's come off worse, with his blood now staining the parquet floor. But, as with all of Wicky's clients, there's more to Cole's well-to-do martinet than first meets the eye. She's related to Winston Churchill, for starters – though her idea of bulldog spirit might not match his. DBr

The Graham Norton Show

10.35pm BBC1

CHAT SHOW There are some great guests on tonight's show, but one name stands out for me: Greg Davies. The lofty comedian has been on Graham Norton's sofa many times and is always eye-wateringly funny. His self-deprecating and often rude stories – usually about his former career as a teacher – manage to render everyone else incapable of coherent speech.

So good luck to Foo Fighters' frontman Dave Grohl, Paralympian and Celebrity MasterChef contestant Kadeena Cox and pop star Sophie Ellis-Bextor. The kitchen disco queen won't be singing this time, but there will be music from Jack Savoretti and Nile Rodgers. JANE RACKHAM

Grantchester

9.00pm ITV

DRAMA You'll often find Grantchester misfiled as a honey-hued hour of nostalgia, but it can sometimes be bruising, both physically and emotionally. Just witness tonight's opening minutes, which find Will getting involved in a punch-up with a thief (played by one-time Outnumbered teenager Tyger Drew-Honey) who has just staged an audacious robbery from a bank security van. And then there's curate Leonard, who's looking like very much like a cornered animal as he's ambushed in court by the no-holds-barred barrister at his gross indecency trial.

Both stories are gritty in their own way, but don't initially appear to have much of a connection. Yet by the end of his shift, Geordie has found that, when viewed together, the cases have something significant to say about the perversities of policework and the limitations of the justice system. DBr

AT THE SHARP END
Will (Tom Brittney) and Geordie (Robson Green) learn some hard lessons

Roll final credits

The Film Programme is being axed after 17 years – and presenters Francine Stock and Antonia Quirke are sad to see it go

The Film Programme

Thursday 4.00pm Radio 4

THIS WEEK'S EDITION of Radio 4's The Film Programme will be both a first and a last. What's last about it is that after 17 years the show is coming to an end. What's first about it is that never before have the programme's two presenters, who have done it as a job share, come together to present the same show. The occasion is that historic.

For both Francine Stock and Antonia Quirke, the rolling of the credits on a programme that's been a weekly fixture since 2004 marks a regrettable turn of events. The programme's sort-of successor will be a show called Screenshot, but it will air fortnightly not weekly. And its mission to "look at the kaleidoscopic world of the moving image" is expected to extend to TV, video and gaming as well as film in the traditional sense.

For all the havoc wrought on the film industry by the pandemic, Stock and Quirke still believe in the power of the cinema-going experience, and in the idea of film communities – the community of film-makers, and that of film consumers. To a great extent, it's those communities that the programme has existed to serve.

"It's ironic that on the exact day of our last programme, Hollywood is opening the biggest ever movie museum," Quirke, who is 50, says. "And it's going to have incredible theatres and screening rooms and programmes of events year-round, so tell me this is a dead form! It's clearly an alive and exciting, precious form. This idea that it's time we bowed out and film stood behind long-form television or any other kind of screen iteration is just insane to me."

The axing of the show has also dismayed the wider film world. Some 100 film luminaries – among them Martin Scorsese, Steve McQueen, Emma Thompson, Kristin Scott Thomas, Richard E Grant and Liam Neeson – wrote a letter to The Observer, in which they said that "to axe such a long-standing and much-loved programme represents an unacceptable diminution of the BBC's dedication to the continuing story of film, whatever programming is intended to replace it". The Film Programme, the letter said, "has always been an exemplary blend of coverage of current cinema and the film canon, and an active champion of independent film".

HOW WE CONSUME film was undergoing huge change even before the pandemic, with streaming well established and movies turning up on Netflix within days of them going into cinemas. Indeed, this trend will be the topic of the jointly fronted final edition. Nonetheless, says Stock, the evolution of film consumption didn't limit the scope of The Film Programme.

"An enduring thing that I'm very happy with is that we looked not just at the classics, but perhaps at lesser-known but really terrific films from film history that we could just shine a light on. That's probably the thing

PICK OF THE WEEK

Contains Strong Language

Various days Radios 3 and 4

Derry did it in 2013, followed by Hull in 2017. Now Coventry is the third UK City of Culture. The BBC's contribution to the celebrations is a series of events called Contains Strong Language – a poetry-and-spoken-word festival performed at venues around the city, recorded before live audiences. That means it all happens after RT goes to press, of course, but here's a flavour of what you can expect to hear.

Performance poet Luke Wright discovers the city through the eyes of the writers it has inspired in

Live from Coventry
(Sun 4.30pm Radio 4).

Dr Lisa Mullen tells the story of the city's transformation after being blitzed in the Second World War in Sunday Feature:
How to Rebuild a City
(Sunday 6.45pm Radio 3).

That's followed by a specially commissioned premiere of a play inspired by Ira Aldridge, who became Britain's first black theatre manager in Coventry in 1828. Tune in to Drama on 3: This Little Relic
(Sunday 7.30pm Radio 3).

And finally, there are five unique views of the city from artists, poets and car designers in The Essay: Postcards from Coventry (Monday–Friday 10.45pm Radio 3).

Scotland, when the town was trying to save its Art Deco cinema; and to Lewes in Sussex for a screening of Paper Moon (the 1973 movie starring real-life father and daughter Ryan and Tatum O'Neal) for a junior film club.

Of the programme's demise, Stock says, "I'm sad. I understand that things have to change, and that the industry has changed. But I still think there's a great desire to watch things communally. And the programme has brought a different way of sharing the film experience. I think of it as something that has allowed enthusiasm to be spread around."

STOCK AND QUIRKE give great credit for the programme's popularity to its longtime producer Stephen Hughes, and between the three of them they established an approach that meant the film world came to them rather than the other way round. The programme seemed to operate outside of the press-junket circuit of film promotion. "We never really held tight to current releases," explains Quirke. "Of course, we'd always feature a film that was out that week, but it didn't have to headline the programme. We might headline with a classic film because we'd discovered that someone involved in the making of it, who people thought was long dead, might still be around and living in, I don't know, Reading. That's how we found the special-effects artist who masterminded the world-turning-backwards sequence in Superman. One time I interviewed the guy who edited Jagged Edge, which was one of the most exciting films I ever saw when I was growing up."

'The idea that it's time we bow out is just insane'

Quirke's stand-out interview was with Christopher Lee. Perhaps appropriately, the star of many a Hammer Horror movie was, she says, terrifying. "It was for one of The Lord of the Rings films. And he got the wrong end of the stick when I talked to him about Tolkien. Of course, he'd known Tolkien, and got very angry, and there was this great flaring of the nostrils."

She also loved interviewing directing duo the Coen Brothers, likewise the actor Willem Dafoe. "That was the lovely thing about The Film Programme. Because it was so respected, you were given proper time with top people." And now The Film Programme's own top people are heading off into the sunset. SIMON O'HAGAN

I've had more response to and letters about than anything – people saying, 'I would never have discovered this, had I not heard about it on The Film Programme.'

She cites a listener who heard the director Moira Buffini on the programme discussing the 1979 movie Stalker – a work by the Soviet director Andrei Tarkovsky that even its adherents might describe as challenging – and finding that she had opened it up to him. "That was really a guiding element of the programme."

Stock, who is 63, has been to film festivals all over the world, but it's perhaps significant that her personal highlights are closer to home and reflect the role that cinema plays in everyday lives – a trip she made to Campbelltown in

AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers this week...

Beechwood is the nucleus of much drama as Lee makes an unexpected discovery that leads to more anguish for Kirsty. But her efforts to make sense of the situation go badly wrong, resulting in a shock incident that'll have repercussions for more than one Ambridge family. Lynda, meanwhile, feels duty-bound to support a kindred spirit – but when the Snells open up their home, Robert fears they've inadvertently made matters worse.

Finally, Tracy is trying to keep her cool as the day of Chelsea's first driving lesson dawns. But will this be a bonding session for mother and daughter? Or are they about to mirror, signal and manoeuvre their way into another argument? DAVID BROWN

Father figures

Heard the one about comedians sharing parenting problems?

THERE IS NO such thing as the man fully prepared to become a parent. The father-to-be, unlike the mother, continues his not particularly demanding routine of watching TV and padding back and forth to the fridge until the arrival, at the end of nine months, of a new head of the household. This one, sharing many of the features of an explosive device, compels him to kiss goodbye to his old life for ever.

Britain's leading podcast for dads places that feeling of loss front and centre, as can be detected in its title, Rob Beckett and Josh Widdicombe's Parenting Hell. While neither is actually a criminal, they affect the speech of gangsters, which brings to the world of pre-schoolers something of the gallows humour of Slade Prison. They describe the period during which the nursery is closed for summer as "a six-stretch". They reckon that if Miss describes your child as "full of energy and very strong-willed", the chances are they're a threat to society.

Here is where you learn that the contemporary father doesn't just attend the birth and make Spotify playlists for his children. He also worries he isn't maintaining his skincare regime as assiduously as he might. This, you feel, is what they would be talking about down the pub if only their life allowed for "down the pub".

Parenting Hell may not shed that much light on the practical business of child-rearing. But in its stories of routines that didn't work, plans that misfired and the creeping feeling of inadequacy that is every parent's lot, it provides the reassurance its audience needs. And through its digressions it lets slip more about the world of contemporary masculinity than anything else that sets out to do the same.

SHOW OF THE WEEK

Parenting Hell

Rob Beckett and Josh Widdicombe (above) offer a smart take on the convulsions that overturn the modern dad's life – from pub time to skincare.

IVF Dad

There's no arguing with Chris Lawson's opening statement: "Men don't talk much about fertility." In the course of this 14-part series, he more than makes up for it by talking in detail about how he and his partner embarked upon the arduous journey that's undertaken by increasing numbers of young couples – not always with outcomes as happy as theirs. You will probably know somebody who would benefit from hearing this.

Daddy Squared

Otherwise known as the Gay Dad podcast, this informative and absorbing series is the work of Yan Dekel, an Israeli journalist based in Hollywood, and his husband Alex who are raising five-year old twins together. For the last six months they've been reporting from around the world, from Ireland to Iran and from Brazil to Australia, finding out just how easy, difficult or plain impossible things can be as same-sex parents.

Dave Berry's Dadpod

Dave Berry has had celebrity dads like Mo Farah and Gregg Wallace in to talk about parenting, but it's his chat with Griff Rhys Jones, in which the latter points out that the inconvenient thing about fatherhood is it occurs at the point in your life when work is likely to be at its most all-consuming, which makes you wonder why nobody has yet made a podcast for grandads. Maybe they have. Maybe Griff should.

TRY THIS The Line-up

Shaun Keaveny's first move since leaving BBC 6 Music is a bit like Desert Island Discs in wellies. In each instalment he asks a guest to "curate" their dream rock festival. Guests, including various Manic Street Preachers, actors such as Jodie Whittaker and the inevitable comedians, are also encouraged to recount their experiences as festival-goers – and the more gory the better.

My life scientific

Radio and science are woven into my DNA

Over the course of the pandemic, there's been a dramatic shift in the way people view science: its role and value to society, how scientific research is carried out and its claims tested, and how scientists communicate their discoveries.

Science and scientists are under scrutiny like never before. While the public is still fascinated by images of a black hole or news of a new subatomic particle, they also want to know more about what makes scientists tick and why they should be trusted. This is why, after ten years of presenting The Life Scientific on Radio 4, I believe the programme is more relevant than ever.

Over the past 18 months, I have interviewed virologists, geneticists, immunologists, epidemiologists, mathematical modellers, behavioural psychologists, and public health scientists, each with their own inspiring story and important contribution to the battle against the virus – or, to use the fashionable phrase at the moment, to talk about their “journey”.

My personal journey has also been one I could not have predicted when I started presenting the series on Radio 4 in October 2011. And yet here we are, celebrating its tenth anniversary and it's still going strong. I tell people that I see myself doing a “Melvyn Bragg” – Melvyn having presented the wonderful In Our Time since 1998.

I see the guest list of The Life Scientific as a roster of some of the world's cleverest people. It includes 11 Nobel Prize winners, four presidents of the Royal Society and three government chief scientific advisers. I have chatted to engineers and inventors, probed the work of astronomers and astronauts, philosophers and psychologists, entomologists, ornithologists, fungal ecologists, cosmologists, primatologists and climatologists. To paraphrase Maureen Lipman's 1988 BT ad: “You've got an ology, you're on the programme.”

And yet I, and I suspect most listeners, have been most inspired by the unsung heroes – the obscure and sometimes reluctant researchers who, unbeknown to the rest of us, have discovered something new about the world and often made it a better place to live in.

The programme was the brainchild of the then controller of Radio 4, Gwyneth Williams, who asked me to host a new weekly science programme. Understandably, the production team in the BBC Radio Science Unit were more than a little nervous to have imposed on them a new showcase programme, to be presented by an academic with little broadcasting experience. But we all knew we had to make it work. And I guess it has. It has also reinforced my love of the medium in ways I could never have predicted.

It was the BBC World Service, not Radio 4, that provided the soundtrack to my childhood growing up in Iraq – the link my mother maintained with Britain. But for my brother and me, 7pm (Baghdad time) on Saturday afternoons was when our radio came into its own. That's when we listened, ears glued to the speaker, to the classified football results on Sports Report, always read by the late, great James Alexander Gordon. Despite delicately tweaking the tuning knob it was all too often a case of “Everton 2, Leeds United hssssssss”. Arrrghh!

More than four decades later, and despite the age of the internet, radio is more important to me than ever. And one of the unexpected pleasures of now being a Radio 4 “voice” is that I occasionally get invited to present Pick of the Week on a Sunday, when I have the pleasure of listening to programmes I might otherwise have missed. Not only is my brain finite, but so is my time. After all, I still have my day job as an academic research scientist (lest you forget!).

The Life Scientific is on Tuesday at 9am on Radio 4

Today's Choices

Archive on 4: Nuremberg Remembered 8.00pm Radio 4

"There comes a point when a man must refuse to answer to his leader if he is also to answer to his own conscience," said Hartley Shawcross in his closing speech as the lead British prosecutor at the Nuremberg War Crimes tribunal (above, 1945–46), where 24 leaders of the Third Reich were tried. As we approach the 75th anniversary of judgement being passed, the writer William Shawcross, Hartley's son, speaks to those whose parents were brought together by the tribunal and asks how it has been remembered within their families. Are the principles of evidence-based international law set at this ground-breaking trial still as powerful? Or, as with the memories of some of the participants Shawcross the younger speaks with, in danger of being forgotten, to all of our peril? JANE ANDERSON

Opera on 3 6.30pm Radio 3

A rapturously lyrical and affirmative Jungian allegory of personal and societal renewal, set in a mythic world of the composer's own invention, albeit partly indebted to Mozart's Magic Flute, Michael Tippett's debut opera The Midsummer Marriage was written as a response to the psychological damage and physical and aesthetic privations of the war years. A good choice, then, with which to open the London Philharmonic Orchestra's first Southbank season since lockdown, and also to tie the knot between the orchestra and its new principal conductor, Edward Gardner, who first made his name as music director of both the Glyndebourne Tour and English National Opera. MARK PAPPENHEIM

Today's Choices

Drama: The Good Earth

3.00pm Radio 4
American novelist Pearl S Buck (above), the daughter of missionaries, had lived much of her life in China by the time her influential novel was published in 1931 when she was 39. Her portrayal of the struggles of farmer Wang Lung and his family is credited with bringing a deeper understanding of Chinese people to American readers and helped earn her the Nobel Prize for Literature. The grunts of hard labour in the field and muffled sounds of childbirth behind closed doors give a raw earthiness to this two-part adaptation. In part one, Wang Lung (Chris Lew Kum Hoi) buys himself a wife, former kitchen slave O-Lan (Chipo Chung), who transforms his fortunes as he learns to love and respect her as much as the land he cultivates. FIONA HUGHES

Desert Island Discs Revisited

10.00am/9.00pm Radio 4 Extra
Few editions of Desert Island Discs have made such an impact as this one – ex-footballer Ian Wright's appearance in 2020, with his tale of how he emerged from a painful childhood to achieve great things on the pitch. Reflecting on the programme now, its producer Cathy Drysdale – since retired from DID – tells me that she would get a sense that a particular interview was going to elicit a huge response, and that this was one of those occasions. "Ian's personality was so warm, so open," she recalls. "He drew you in. He was able to convey the little boy he'd been – and how he'd felt things – so vividly. It was very moving. There were many hugs after the recording. We were all so pleased by the outpouring of love for him." SIMON O'HAGAN

But as Dr Lisa Mullen reveals, it was a vision that predated the war; even if the Nazi bombs hadn't destroyed the city's medieval and Georgian heritage, Coventry's radical Labour council – and its even more radical city architect, Donald Gibson (1908–91) – had planned to do so anyway. Contributors include local historians Paul Maddocks and Roger Bailey and others including Jane Thomas, Gibson's daughter. Producer Sara Conkey

Landscapes of the Mind 11.00am Radio 4

There is plenty of evidence around the mental, physical and emotional benefits of visiting green spaces, particularly for people living in urban areas, and this really came to the fore during the pandemic. But as more of us set out on constitutional strolls, it became markedly clear that history was repeating itself: it's harder for those from poorer socio-economic backgrounds to get to a nearby green space. Enter James Corner, designer of the remarkable New York High Line (above), a public park built on a 1.45-mile-long elevated rail structure. He's hoping to do the same in Camden in north London, with a design for a "garden in the sky" along a disused track. He discusses both the benefits of and challenges for the project, with contributions from academics, historians, architects and public health professionals. JANE ANDERSON

Poison

1.45pm Radio 4

The violent protests and looting sparked by the jailing of former South African president Jacob Zuma for contempt of court in July could be taken as a sign of his popularity. So why is it that ever since this hero of the ANC came to power, he has been obsessed with the idea that people are trying to poison him? During his presidency the secret service was spending the equivalent of £90,000 a month on a toxicology unit. Foreign correspondent Andrew Harding wrote and presented last year's excellent true-crime series Blood Lands, about two murders in a divided South African town, and he takes a similarly forensic look at what drove the genial Zuma to this level of paranoia.

Today's Choices

The Hidden History of the Window

4.00pm Radio 4

In Gloucester cathedral there's a stained-glass window the size of a tennis court. At 38 feet by 72 feet, it was the biggest window in the world when it was built in the 1350s. The statistics around Hardwick Hall's windows are similarly startling. The Derbyshire stately home, created by Bess of Hardwick in the 1590s, has 1,403 mullions, made up of 140,000 individual pieces of glass. These are just two of the discoveries made by social scientist Rachel Hurdley as she looks through the history of the window and finds that there's more to it than meets the eye. Take the advent of plate glass in the 1840s, which ushered in the era of the department store. A nice, light and airy half-hour. But did no one think to call it You've Been Framed?

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

There is something of the night about this evening's live recital from the Wigmore Hall, given by German baritone Christian Gerhaher – the finest lieder singer of today – and a hand-picked string ensemble led by violinist Isabelle Faust. In the rarely heard Notturmo for voice and string quartet by the little-known late-Romantic Swiss composer Othmar Schoeck, thoughts of night inevitably turn to thoughts of death. Despite its sunny-sounding title, Berlioz's ravishing song-cycle Les nuits d'été – newly arranged for sextet by David Matthews – also deals with death and loss. In Schoenberg's Verklärte Nacht, though, night is transfigured by love and the prospect of new life.

Today's Choices

Steve Lamacq 4.00pm 6 Music

I was 16 when I first saw the Specials (above) at Friars Aylesbury. The hall was filled with very separate and distinct fans: punks, mods and loads of skinheads. The tension was palpable, and I confess to feeling both excited and scared. But when the band came on with their unique ska/reggae/punk vibe the whole atmosphere instantly changed into a unified, uplifting celebration of musical crossovers rather than differences. I am, therefore, thrilled to learn that the band are giving an exclusive performance of their new album Protest Songs 1924–2012 from 6pm. It features 12 cover versions of artists including Frank Zappa, Bob Marley, the Staple Singers, Leonard Cohen and Talking Heads. Why this, why now? As bass player Horace Panter says, “Injustice is timeless.” The Specials are still uniting us. JANE ANDERSON

The Pickwick Poppers 2.30pm Radio 4 Extra

If you grew up in the 70s, you probably remember the cheap and cheerful Top of the Pops albums (the ones with scantily clad women on the cover). Produced by the Hallmark label – part of the Pickwick Music Group – the albums offered many chart hits for little more than the price of a single. However, these “hits” were cover versions by session musicians. In this 2006 doc, Stuart Maconie charts the phenomenal success of the albums and talks to the session musicians, who had to be able to reproduce everything from Abba to the Sex Pistols – often in the same day. As a slice of pop culture history this is, as the albums’ sleeve notes might say, a humdinger. DAVID CRAWFORD

Today's Choices

The Forum

10.05am/12.05am
BBC World Service

It's the ultimate cosmopolitan dish, enjoyed the world over. Yet sushi is a 2,000-year-old story, predating both the invention of the California Roll and even its revered status in Japan, where it is widely assumed to have originated. Here, Rajan Datar investigates the dish's history, from its humble start as a way of preserving fish to its elevation as a medieval luxury and then, thanks to later waves of migration from Japan, its modern-day ubiquity. Joining him are two professors in the field as well as Michelin-starred sushi master Endo Kazutoshi, head chef at London's Rotunda restaurant: further evidence of sushi's globalised image.

What on Earth? With Count Binface

11.00pm Radio 4

Comedian and classicist Jon Harvey's best-known alias is Count Binface, who stood (in superhero cape and dustbin-like headgear) for Mayor of London earlier this year. He won more votes than both Piers Corbyn and Ukip's Peter Gammons. (He's also been Lord Buckethead but we can't go into that now.) Harvey's interest in the history of democracy resulted in the recent Radio 4 series Could an Ancient Athenian Fix Britain? Now Binface, described in his manifesto as an "independent space warrior", discovers how we Earthlings select our leaders. His guide to the convoluted process is Heidi Allen, former leader of Change UK.

FRIDAY Radio

Today's Choices

Charlotte and Lillian 11.30am Radio 4

When we last encountered Charlotte (Helen Monks) and Lillian (Miriam Margolyes, above), the former hapless, helpless millennial was hinting that it would be a good idea if she moved in with the latter officially grumpy old woman. The social isolation created by lockdowns turned out to be a blessing in disguise for Lillian: she's still got the large house to herself and only has to tolerate the odd visit from her well-meaning but frankly useless "befriend-the-elderly-scheme" friend Charlotte. The third series opens with a belter of an episode involving a trip to the local library and a scheme to steal data to help Lillian crib for her book group. Throw in an impoverished man who believes Charlotte is harassing him and it adds up to a comic treat. JANE ANDERSON

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3
Radio 3's Southbank residency continues tonight with Edward Gardner's second appearance this week as the London Philharmonic Orchestra's new principal conductor. After Saturday's operatic outing, it's back to more mainstream orchestral repertoire, though Gardner could hardly have chosen a more theatrical showpiece than Berlioz's Symphonie fantastique, with its hallucinatory sequence of scenes culminating in the nightmare vision of a witches' sabbath. By contrast, the first half offers an airy evocation of spring from the short-lived Lili Boulanger and the avant-garde histrionics of Lutoslawski's Cello Concerto, written for the legendary Russian cellist Mstislav Rostropovich and premiered by him in this very venue half a century ago.

Face behind the voice Eamonn Kelly Smooth Radio/Smooth Country

Age 54
Current job
Presenter of the weekend breakfast show on Smooth Radio (6am–10am) and the weekday morning show on Smooth Country (9am–1pm). "I work seven days a week but it's never felt like work! I operate on the basis of who would you like to find yourself next to at the bar or a party, and I try and be that person."

CV Born in Dublin, he attended St Declan's College and got into radio before he'd even left school thanks to working in a record shop. A pirate station opened nearby, "we got talking, and one day someone didn't show up to present, and they said, 'Would you like to do it?' I was 17 and it was an amazing break. That's when I got the radio bug and I still have it." His first paid job was at Q102 Dublin in 1985 and then he moved to the UK in 1988 to present on Radio Broadland in Norfolk. After that he worked at Invicta/Coast AM, Capital Gold in London, Smooth Radio in the East Midlands, then back to Gold in London. He joined Smooth in 2014.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I definitely feel my relationship with the audience has grown stronger. The pandemic has made me realise how intimate and special radio truly is. The other thing I've noticed is artists' creativity during this period – musicians I've talked to like Keith Urban and Lady A – and finding how productive they've been."

Best moment "When I was on Capital Gold and a feature I had called Kelly's Classic Capital Countdown, which we did with listeners but occasionally an artist would come into the studio and they would choose five top tracks. On this occasion it was Kenny Rogers. He was so endearing, so engaging, and our allotted 15 minutes turned into 45 minutes."

Worst moment "My first day at one local station – I won't say which one – which also turned out to be the newsreader's first day and the producer's first day. It was a disaster. None of us knew what was going on. The show lasted four hours and by the end of it I was exhausted. I felt I could cope with anything after that."

Off air "I live in a village just outside Rochester in Kent. I have my two sons with me – one just finished at university, the other about to go. We have two rescue goats. I've long kept goats. They're great characters. We've a field at the end of the garden and what's the point having a field if you don't do anything with it? Nature has definitely helped me through the past 18 months."

'I try to be the person you'd like to be next to at the bar'

First radio memory "My parents bought me a tiny little transistor radio, and I have this memory of being aged seven or eight with pop music coming out of it – I think it was Seasons in the Sun by Terry Jacks – and suddenly my black-and-white world turned to colour."

Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari on LBC for the way he commands the show and can go from serious to light-hearted in a moment. He's at the top of his game. And from my Dublin days, a broadcaster called Declan Meehan. He had a breakfast show and he was everything a breakfast presenter should be – friendly, warm, funny."

Ambition/Dream job "I'd like to do more speech radio. I've done it before and it's a completely different skill. Dream job? I always wanted to be an astronaut but I've left it a bit late!"

Secret skills "I'm big into studying the stock market and trying to devise a system for making a profit!"

SIMON O'HAGAN

Face behind the voice Eamonn Kelly Smooth Radio/Smooth Country

Age 54
Current job
Presenter of the weekend breakfast show on Smooth Radio (6am–10am) and the weekday morning show on Smooth Country (9am–1pm). "I work seven days a week but it's never felt like work! I operate on the basis of who would you like to find yourself next to at the bar or a party, and I try and be that person."

CV Born in Dublin, he attended St Declan's College and got into radio before he'd even left school thanks to working in a record shop. A pirate station opened nearby, "we got talking, and one day someone didn't show up to present, and they said, 'Would you like to do it?' I was 17 and it was an amazing break. That's when I got the radio bug and I still have it." His first paid job was at Q102 Dublin in 1985 and then he moved to the UK in 1988 to present on Radio Broadland in Norfolk. After that he worked at Invicta/Coast AM, Capital Gold in London, Smooth Radio in the East Midlands, then back to Gold in London. He joined Smooth in 2014.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I definitely feel my relationship with the audience has grown stronger. The pandemic has made me realise how intimate and special radio truly is. The other thing I've noticed is artists' creativity during this period – musicians I've talked to like Keith Urban and Lady A – and finding how productive they've been."

Best moment "When I was on Capital Gold and a feature I had called Kelly's Classic Capital Countdown, which we did with listeners but occasionally an artist would come into the studio and they would choose five top tracks. On this occasion it was Kenny Rogers. He was so endearing, so engaging, and our allotted 15 minutes turned into 45 minutes."

Worst moment "My first day at one local station – I won't say which one – which also turned out to be the newsreader's first day and the producer's first day. It was a disaster. None of us knew what was going on. The show lasted four hours and by the end of it I was exhausted. I felt I could cope with anything after that."

Off air "I live in a village just outside Rochester in Kent. I have my two sons with me – one just finished at university, the other

'I try to be the person you'd like to be next to at the bar'

about to go. We have two rescue goats. I've long kept goats. They're great characters. We've a field at the end of the garden and what's the point having a field if you don't do anything with it? Nature has definitely helped me through the past 18 months."

First radio memory "My parents bought me a tiny little transistor radio, and I have this

Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari on LBC for the way he commands the show and can go from serious to light-hearted in a moment. He's at the top of his game. And from my Dublin days, a broadcaster called Declan Meehan. He had a breakfast show and he was everything a breakfast presenter should be – friendly, warm, funny."

Ambition/Dream job "I'd like to do more speech radio. I've done it before and it's a completely different skill. Dream job? I always wanted to be an astronaut but I've left it a bit late!"

Secret skills "I'm big into studying the stock market and trying to devise a system for making a profit!"

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice Eamonn Kelly Smooth Radio/Smooth Country

Age 54
Current job
Presenter of the weekend breakfast show on Smooth Radio (6am–10am) and the weekday morning show on Smooth Country (9am–1pm). "I work seven days a week but it's never felt like work! I operate on the basis of who would you like to find yourself next to at the bar or a party, and I try and be that person."

CV Born in Dublin, he attended St Declan's College and got into radio before he'd even left school thanks to working in a record shop. A pirate station opened nearby, "we got talking, and one day someone didn't show up to present, and they said, 'Would you like to do it?' I was 17 and it was an amazing break. That's when I got the radio bug and I still have it." His first paid job was at Q102 Dublin in 1985 and then he moved to the UK in 1988 to present on Radio Broadland in Norfolk. After that he worked at Invicta/Coast AM, Capital Gold in London, Smooth Radio in the East Midlands, then back to Gold in London. He joined Smooth in 2014.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I definitely feel my relationship with the audience has grown stronger. The pandemic has made me realise how intimate and special radio truly is. The other thing I've noticed is artists' creativity during this period – musicians I've talked to like Keith Urban and Lady A – and finding how productive they've been."

Best moment "When I was on Capital Gold and a feature I had called Kelly's Classic Capital Countdown, which we did with listeners but occasionally an artist would come into the studio and they would choose five top tracks. On this occasion it was Kenny Rogers. He was so endearing, so engaging, and our allotted 15 minutes turned into 45 minutes."

Worst moment "My first day at one local station – I won't say which one – which also turned out to be the newsreader's first day and the producer's first day. It was a disaster. None of us knew what was going on. The show lasted four hours and by the end of it I was exhausted. I felt I could cope with anything after that."

Off air "I live in a village just outside Rochester in Kent. I have my two sons with me – one just finished at university, the other

'I try to be the person you'd like to be next to at the bar'

about to go. We have two rescue goats. I've long kept goats. They're great characters. We've a field at the end of the garden and what's the point having a field if you don't do anything with it? Nature has definitely helped me through the past 18 months."

First radio memory "My parents bought me a tiny little transistor radio, and I have this

Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari on LBC for the way he commands the show and can go from serious to light-hearted in a moment. He's at the top of his game. And from my Dublin days, a broadcaster called Declan Meehan. He had a breakfast show and he was everything a breakfast presenter should be – friendly, warm, funny."

Ambition/Dream job "I'd like to do more speech radio. I've done it before and it's a completely different skill. Dream job? I always wanted to be an astronaut but I've left it a bit late!"

Secret skills "I'm big into studying the stock market and trying to devise a system for making a profit!"

Face behind the voice Eamonn Kelly Smooth Radio/Smooth Country

Age 54
Current job
Presenter of the weekend breakfast show on Smooth Radio (6am–10am) and the weekday morning show on Smooth Country (9am–1pm). "I work seven days a week but it's never felt like work! I operate on the basis of who would you like to find yourself next to at the bar or a party, and I try and be that person."

CV Born in Dublin, he attended St Declan's College and got into radio before he'd even left school thanks to working in a record shop. A pirate station opened nearby, "we got talking, and one day someone didn't show up to present, and they said, 'Would you like to do it?' I was 17 and it was an amazing break. That's when I got the radio bug and I still have it." His first paid job was at Q102 Dublin in 1985 and then he moved to the UK in 1988 to present on Radio Broadland in Norfolk. After that he worked at Invicta/Coast AM, Capital Gold in London, Smooth Radio in the East Midlands, then back to Gold in London. He joined Smooth in 2014.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I definitely feel my relationship with the audience has grown stronger. The pandemic has made me realise how intimate and special radio truly is. The other thing I've noticed is artists' creativity during this period – musicians I've talked to like Keith Urban and Lady A – and finding how productive they've been."

Best moment "When I was on Capital Gold and a feature I had called Kelly's Classic Capital Countdown, which we did with listeners but occasionally an artist would come into the studio and they would choose five top tracks. On this occasion it was Kenny Rogers. He was so endearing, so engaging, and our allotted 15 minutes turned into 45 minutes."

Worst moment "My first day at one local station – I won't say which one – which also turned out to be the newsreader's first day and the producer's first day. It was a disaster. None of us knew what was going on. The show lasted four hours and by the end of it I was exhausted. I felt I could cope with anything after that."

Off air "I live in a village just outside Rochester in Kent. I have my two sons with me – one just finished at university, the other

'I try to be the person you'd like to be next to at the bar'

about to go. We have two rescue goats. I've long kept goats. They're great characters. We've a field at the end of the garden and what's the point having a field if you don't do anything with it? Nature has definitely helped me through the past 18 months."

First radio memory "My parents bought me a tiny little transistor radio, and I have this

Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari on LBC for the way he commands the show and can go from serious to light-hearted in a moment. He's at the top of his game. And from my Dublin days, a broadcaster called Declan Meehan. He had a breakfast show and he was everything a breakfast presenter should be – friendly, warm, funny."

Ambition/Dream job "I'd like to do more speech radio. I've done it before and it's a completely different skill. Dream job? I always wanted to be an astronaut but I've left it a bit late!"

Secret skills "I'm big into studying the stock market and trying to devise a system for making a profit!"

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice Eamonn Kelly Smooth Radio/Smooth Country

Age 54
Current job
Presenter of the weekend breakfast show on Smooth Radio (6am–10am) and the weekday morning show on Smooth Country (9am–1pm). "I work seven days a week but it's never felt like work! I operate on the basis of who would you like to find yourself next to at the bar or a party, and I try and be that person."

CV Born in Dublin, he attended St Declan's College and got into radio before he'd even left school thanks to working in a record shop. A pirate station opened nearby, "we got talking, and one day someone didn't show up to present, and they said, 'Would you like to do it?' I was 17 and it was an amazing break. That's when I got the radio bug and I still have it." His first paid job was at Q102 Dublin in 1985 and then he moved to the UK in 1988 to present on Radio Broadland in Norfolk. After that he worked at Invicta/Coast AM, Capital Gold in London, Smooth Radio in the East Midlands, then back to Gold in London. He joined Smooth in 2014.

How has your show adapted to the Covid-19 crisis? "I definitely feel my relationship with the audience has grown stronger. The pandemic has made me realise how intimate and special radio truly is. The other thing I've noticed is artists' creativity during this period – musicians I've talked to like Keith Urban and Lady A – and finding how productive they've been."

Best moment "When I was on Capital Gold and a feature I had called Kelly's Classic Capital Countdown, which we did with listeners but occasionally an artist would come into the studio and they would choose five top tracks. On this occasion it was Kenny Rogers. He was so endearing, so engaging, and our allotted 15 minutes turned into 45 minutes."

Worst moment "My first day at one local station – I won't say which one – which also turned out to be the newsreader's first day and the producer's first day. It was a disaster. None of us knew what was going on. The show lasted four hours and by the end of it I was exhausted. I felt I could cope with anything after that."

Off air "I live in a village just outside Rochester in Kent. I have my two sons with me – one just finished at university, the other

'I try to be the person you'd like to be next to at the bar'

about to go. We have two rescue goats. I've long kept goats. They're great characters. We've a field at the end of the garden and what's the point having a field if you don't do anything with it? Nature has definitely helped me through the past 18 months."

First radio memory "My parents bought me a tiny little transistor radio, and I have this

Favourite broadcasters "Nick Ferrari on LBC for the way he commands the show and can go from serious to light-hearted in a moment. He's at the top of his game. And from my Dublin days, a broadcaster called Declan Meehan. He had a breakfast show and he was everything a breakfast presenter should be – friendly, warm, funny."

Ambition/Dream job "I'd like to do more speech radio. I've done it before and it's a completely different skill. Dream job? I always wanted to be an astronaut but I've left it a bit late!"

Secret skills "I'm big into studying the stock market and trying to devise a system for making a profit!"

Richard Osman
cracked the crime genre with his first novel, selling over a million copies – but not all the critics were happy...

I'VE CAUGHT RICHARD OSMAN in a lie ("Awkward," he admits) and, just for a moment, I feel like a member of his Thursday Murder Club. The Club – in case you're one of the few remaining people in Britain not to have read the Pointless presenter's first crime novel, which has sold more than a million copies – is a quartet of 70-somethings at a Kent retirement home who solve cold cases for fun... until fresh murders start dropping on their doorstep.

Osman's untruth concerns the secret identity of the Club's real-life inspiration. He's previously claimed to have got the idea after visiting a friend's mum at her old people's home – but under intensive interrogation from Radio Times ("Why would you visit someone else's mother?") he admits his deception: "OK, it was actually my mum. I've been drawn into my own subterfuge. The truth is, I visit her all the time, and her retirement community reminds me of an Agatha Christie location: it's a beautiful little village in Sussex. But the people who live there have done extraordinary things with their lives – they're underestimated now, but they have these incredible skills and experience and wisdom, and that combination makes for the perfect detective."

Could Mrs Osman and her pals really crack a case then? "Could four very intelligent people solve a murder? Yes. Could they get away with everything that happens in the books? Probably not, but neither could Holmes or Poirot in theirs. The spirit of what happens here is true, though, because it's about new friendships in later life, making mischief, being overlooked and taking advantage of that, and about a last hurrah."

He makes retirement homes sound fun –

Death, jealousy and little white lies

TEATIME QUIZZES
Richard Osman
hosting Pointless
(left) with Alexander

does he believe that's true? "God, yeah. There's so much gossip, so many people, so much of a laugh. My mum is just surrounded by people: any time she wants, she can open the front door and she's got mates there; any time she wants, she can close it and watch Morse. It's like university but without the work. Honestly, I'm 50 now and in 15 years' time I want to be in one of those places."

Right now he lives in south London with his partner – that's another RT exclusive, as he's told previous interviewers he lives alone. "No, I'm actually very happily in a relationship, have been for ages. But you can't believe everything you read. I saw once, on my Wikipedia page, that I was Oprah Winfrey's nephew."

'Ben Fogle in a submarine? That's a good idea'

And what about reviews? Does he believe them? I point out a particularly stinging one for his new novel, The Man Who Died Twice, from fellow crime writer Joan Smith in The Sunday Times ("a novel so flawed that it is hard to believe it would ever have been published without a celebrity's name on the cover," she called it). "That did upset me," admits Osman. "It felt very personal, like it wasn't really a reflection on the book, but a vindictive attack on me. Success doesn't armour-plate you against feelings, and I do get upset by things."

Other peers have been kinder, he says. There are several semi-secret societies of crime writers, each with their own sacred oaths and initiation rites – "and I've been very warmly welcomed," says the new boy. "They knew I wasn't some cynical interloper, that I was a real lover of crime fiction. So they've revealed all their secrets: the special handshakes, how to really murder people, all that stuff..."

"The lovely thing about books," continues the game-show-producer-turned-presenter-turned-novelist, "is that writers aren't rivals. TV's much more cut-throat, because you've only got a few channels and limited slots. In telly, I've got rivals till the end of time. Pointless and The Chase have been rivals for 12 years."

IN FACT OSMAN only "gave up the day job" as a TV production executive last December. So is the brains behind House of Games, Eight out of Ten Cats and Deal or No Deal still fizzing with ideas for quizzes? "TV development is rarely sitting around the table talking about monkey tennis. It's spending three weeks scientifically testing a concept in every possible way – not just some people with beards and glasses saying, 'I know! How about Ben Fogle in a submarine?!'" He pauses. "Which, by the way, is a good idea."

The viewer's loss, at least, is the reader's gain. The Man Who Died Twice is every bit as deliciously funny, warm and unputdownable as its prequel – and Osman has signed up for at least another two. "After that, we'll see. I don't want The Thursday Murder Club to become like Murder She Wrote, with coincidental homicides every five minutes."

"I want every book to lead on from the previous one, so I'm just getting them into deeper and deeper water, and at some point they will run out of available oxygen. But not for a little while yet, I hope. And when they do, I might try to launch a new detective, maybe a whole new series. Who knows, perhaps it's DCI Fogle and his underwater detection agency..." ED GRENBY

Pointless is on Monday–Friday 5.15pm BBC1 and Richard Osman's House of Games is on Monday–Friday at 6.00pm BBC2

YOUR RT Gardening

NICE & EASY DOES IT

Is your garden so high-maintenance you don't have time to relax and enjoy it? Joe Swift offers up four essential tips to help you reduce the spade work

NON-STOP FLOWERS
Verbena bonariensis
looks after itself

1 BUCK UP YOUR BORDERS

Be ruthless – remove some plants and replace with others. Avoid tall perennials that need staking (delphiniums, anchusa, phlox), and those that always get munched by slugs and snails (hostas, Solomon's seal). Grow tough and easy perennials that repeat-flower without deadheading, like Verbena bonariensis, hardy geraniums ("Rozanne" just doesn't stop flowering!) and Erysimum "Bowles's Mauve". Plant in easy-to-maintain blocks rather than randomly dotted around.

Structural shrubs don't have to be boring, and need little care once planted. Look for contrasting forms and heights (such as elegant multi-stemmed amelanchiers, viburnums and buddlejias), tidy dome shapes (hebes, osmanthus or pittosporum) or naturally upright vase shapes (buddlejas, philadelphus). Pack ground cover between them to carpet the soil and reduce weeding. Most ornamental grasses won't need watering or feeding: just cut back to the ground in spring. Mulch borders with plenty of organic matter to reduce watering and feeding next year.

2 JUST LET IT GROW

The lawn is the highest-maintenance part of most gardens. In a small garden, could you swap it for a combination of plants and surfaces? If it's large enough, let some of it grow and mow a path or two through it. Alternatively, mow it on a high setting once a month. Mown strips with long grass in between in geometrical blocks can look great and is far better for wildlife than a manicured sward.

3 BANISH ALL WEEDS

Landscape fabric can reduce weeding by up to 100 per cent! Clear weedy areas then pin some over the soil, cutting circles around established shrubs until all the ground is covered. Cut holes to add more plants, such as perennials, and mulch on the top with a layer of bark, gravel or pebbles.

4 GO POTTY

Instead of having lots of small pots, go for fewer, larger containers planted with a combination of plants to give you more impact with less watering and feeding. Choose plants that cope with less water such as lavender, artemisia, rosemary, olive and thyme, and succulents, like sempervivum and echeveria, which can go for long periods without water, too.

MAKE COMPOST

The compost heap is the garden's engine room. When added into your soil, compost will make it fertile, moisture-retentive and nutrient-rich – the basis of a healthy garden. It's easy, too:

1 FIRST, MAKE A COMPOST HEAP

There are many bins available to buy, and some councils will even supply or subsidise one. Alternatively, make one from old pallets: keep it easy to access from the front, and line it with old pieces of wood or cardboard. Make a lid from plastic sheeting or old carpet to retain heat. Place it directly onto soil if possible, so insects can get in and help break it down; and in sun or semi-shade, as the sun heats the compost and speeds up the process. Screen it from key views with plants or trellising.

2 WHAT TO PUT ON IT...

The best proportion is a 50/50 mixture of "green" and "brown" materials. "Greens" include vegetable peelings, leaves, nettles, grass clippings (in layers and not too much at once), annual weeds and tea bags. "Browns" include shredded paper (including glossy magazines), cardboard, woody materials, sawdust, hedge clippings, eggshells and wood ash, in moderation.

3 WHAT NOT TO PUT ON IT...

Avoid pernicious weeds such as horsetail, bindweed or any with seedheads that may just increase your weed problem. Don't add meat, fish or cooked food as this can attract vermin.

4 HOW TO MAKE THE COMPOST

Try to mix green and brown as you go, avoiding large layers of either, and chop up tough flower stems before adding. Water a little once done. Frequent turning (once a month is ideal) makes better, quicker compost. Compost ninjas can make it in eight weeks, but it usually takes around a year. It should be dark, crumbly and non-smelly. Don't worry if it's a bit lumpy, or if there's the odd twig or whole leaf – it's fine!

My world of wonders

Bettany Hughes reveals her favourite historic treasures – and how to see them

Bettany Hughes's Treasures of the World
Saturday 7.00pm C4

YOU KNOW THOSE annoying people yammering enthusiastically into their mobiles even as the plane pushes back from its stand towards the runway? Well, Bettany Hughes is one of them – talking to Radio Times right up till take-off time as she jets towards the Greek island of Kos, where “something rather exciting” has been discovered. (“I’m writing a book on the Seven Wonders of the World,” she explains, “so I just jumped on the first available flight.”)

The historian, author and broadcaster won’t say much more about that – confirming our suspicion that all archaeologist types are secretly racing each other to the big discoveries, Indiana Jones-style – but she’s happy to talk about the destinations of Bettany Hughes's Treasures of the World, which continues this week. “Covid was such a horrific time, with people wondering what we’re doing here, and how to relate to one another. And personally, I find the answers to questions like that in history and the thousands of years of human experience that have gone before. So I wanted to try to uncover places that would help us celebrate humanity and human civilisation.”

Even better, the places Bettany visited for the series are nearly all open to tourists (Covid restrictions allowing). Here are her favourites...

ROCK STAR

SECRET SPY CAVES IN GIBRALTAR

I was blown away by Gibraltar. Firstly there are boat trips you can do into prehistoric caves – the Costa del Neanderthal, archaeologists call it – but there’s this other amazing cavern called the Stay Behind Cave. It was a top-secret World War Two plan, basically a suicide mission where six brave Allied soldiers would be walled up, hidden and sealed inside a mountain if the Nazis took Gibraltar, so that they could radio intelligence back from behind enemy lines. Ian Fleming was one of the masterminds behind it, and you can definitely see the idea trickling through into some of his Bond plots. It was only discovered in the late 90s, but there are tours now. Unmissable.

OLYMPIC ORIGINS

It was really special, in this Olympic year, to be in the birthplace of the Games, in the Peloponnese in Greece. They happened at Olympia for 1,000 years uninterrupted, which I think says something about our drive, as humans, to get together and to be as amazing as we can humanly be.

What was strange though, because of Covid, was that instead of 100,000 spectators, it was pretty much just me. And with no tourists around, I could wake and hear the dawn chorus along the river there, where the air is thick with birdsong – exactly the same as Socrates and

SPECIAL ACCESS
Bettany Hughes in the Baghdad Kiosk in Topkapi Palace, Istanbul

Herodotus and Plato would have done. Anyone can do that, too: just get there early before the other tourists!

MASS GRAVES IN MALTA

In Malta we got to film in a staggering underground prehistoric temple called the Hypogeum. It's a Unesco site, so anybody can visit, but no one's been allowed to film there for years, because it's covered with incredibly delicate 5,000-year-old wall paintings.

What's fascinating is that there are 7,000 people buried together there: at the very dawn of civilisation, they had a sense that "we're all in this together" and "why would you want to be buried on your own?" I did get the spooks there a bit, but it's not morbid, it's inspiring.

INSPIRATION IN ISTANBUL

Istanbul is my favourite city on Earth, and I got to "meet" my all-time history heroine there, too. Theodora came from the bottom of the sixth-century pile – she was an erotic dancer and probably a sex worker too, she but ended up marrying the emperor, Justinian. She then became a reforming, social-justice queen and led a massive building programme, which included the great cathedral (now mosque) of Hagia Sophia. I got to stand on the same spot as her and I genuinely felt connected.

Once you've done the history, you can take a water taxi across to the lovely Princes' Islands, which is the city's best-kept secret, where all the locals go to have an ice cream and chill out. Blissful...

SENTINELS
The ancient Terrace of the Lions on the island

DEITIES ON DELOS

Delos, in Greece's Cyclades [the subject of this week's programme], is a sacred island: nobody's allowed to stay overnight, apart from a couple of curators (the whole island is an archaeological ruin). But because of Covid, there was no one else around so they let my crew and me stay, and we had the most magical night: it was a supermoon, we got to walk among the temples, and even did a bit of singing and dancing – which will have pleased Artemis, the Moon goddess who was worshipped there in ancient times. You can have a similar experience without staying over: the first ferry of the day gets there just after dawn, and it's always pretty empty. Same with the last one back in the evening. Which means it's just you and the cats and tortoises and birds and bullfrogs – it's like travelling back in time because there's no intrusion from the modern world.

That's a very nourishing experience.

Beware the pension tax

Reaching 66 can mean your work pension shrinks, warns Paul Lewis

STEVE EMAILED ME to say he was being robbed – and by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, no less! He receives a pension from his old employer, and he was happily paying the tax on it. His tax-free allowance is the standard £12,570, and Steve had been paying tax on the rest of his £17,000 pension – which came to £886 a year (or £73.83 a month), which was automatically deducted by his pension provider.

But then Steve reached 66 and claimed his state pension, which was £7,000 a year. When he got his next monthly works pension he was shocked to see the tax taken from it had gone up. In fact it had almost trebled! And when he looked at the accompanying statement, he saw that this was because his tax-free allowance had been reduced from £12,570 to £5,570 – hence his plea, “I’m being robbed!”

This feeling is common when people first claim their state pension. In fact, Steve was paying the correct tax. The state pension is paid gross – without tax being deducted – but it is taxable. In other words, if your income is over the personal tax-free allowance, as Steve’s was, then you must pay tax on it. The basic-rate tax due on Steve’s £7,000-a-year state pension was £1,400. That tax is collected by taking more from your other taxable income, such as a pension or wages paid through the system known as PAYE.

Hence the extra £117 tax taken off Steve’s works pension each month. Instead of paying £886 per year tax, he was now paying £2,286 because that collects the £886 tax due on his works pension and the £1,400 due on his state pension.

LIKE MOST PEOPLE, Steve didn’t reach pension age on 6 April. So his state pension wasn’t paid for the whole tax year. HMRC takes this into account and the £7,000 figure was just the state pension he would get in this tax year. In subsequent years the tax will go up again as HMRC taxes a whole 52 weeks of pension...

WHO WILL HELP YOU MAKE YOUR DAY-TO-DAY DECISIONS?

Find out more about a Lasting Power of Attorney

A Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA) is a legal document that lets you appoint people to help you make decisions. You may only need help temporarily because of a hospital stay, or more permanently because of an injury or long-term illness. An LPA means you can have more control over what happens to you if you cannot make your own decisions.

Without an LPA your next-of-kin would have to apply to the Court of Protection to make any decisions for you, which can be a slow and stressful experience. If you are unable to make decisions for yourself, it’s then too late to put an LPA in place.

Word of the week Groggy

Grogginess often follows intoxication, illness or lack of sleep, and when we say we are "groggy", we are giving a possibly unknowing nod to an 18th-century English Admiral. Edward Vernon is said to have worn a coat made of grogram, a fabric made of silk and mohair or wool. As a result, his nickname was "Old Grog". However, this was not his most notable attribute. The Royal Navy in the West Indies was traditionally given a daily ration of rum. But Vernon, alarmed at the rum's impact on the performance and health of sailors, ordered that it be diluted with water. The mixture was duly named "grog" after its creator, and eventually became a general term for alcohol. "Groggy" then came to be a byword for "drunk", before being used to mean generally weak or dazed.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

A hard enough job...

WHO'S IN CHARGE?
A critical recent episode of BBC1's Holby City

I can manage quite a lot of dramatic licence in a good drama. I can even accept as an oversight the submarine commander in Vigil getting promoted, with an extra ring on his epaulettes, partway through an episode (12 September BBC1).

But the critical incident in Holby City (14 September BBC1) was in another league. The hospital staff had clearly never read the emergency plan and had no idea what to do. Police, fire and ambulance were there, but nobody took overall control.

As a recently retired health professional I watched the Manchester Bombing inquiry with horror as several people, doing their jobs correctly, were criticised by the media. The job is hard enough without misrepresentation on TV. The principles of teamwork and "doing the most for the most" should be shown, even in drama, in order to inform the public.

ZERO POINTS

I know that change is inevitable and often desirable, so I was looking forward to the much-loved Question of Sport (Friday BBC1) being replaced by an all-singing, all-dancing new show.

What a disappointment! The new incarnation is just a sports quiz, with a standard game-show host, lacking all the fun and quirkiness of its predecessor. In its present format I can't see it surviving in the long term.

Ralph Dunkley

Purley, south London

Lots of RT readers agree.

ADVANTAGE C4!

Many thanks to Channel 4 for enabling me and millions more to watch the exciting women's singles final at the US Open Tennis (11 September C4). We were able to support an inspiring British player, Emma Raducanu, making history. It was much appreciated.

Janet Airlie Biggar,

South Lanarkshire

...Please thank Channel 4 for negotiating with Amazon Prime to show the women's final. My TV is fairly basic and without them I would have missed the match of the year. Channel 4 made my day!

Gillian Hancock

Pershore, Worcestershire

The C4 audience for the live match peaked at an amazing 9.2 million.

...After all the excitement at the US Open the BBC's sports editor Dan Roan was featured on the ten o'clock news the next night speculating on Emma's future and the future of British tennis, live from outside a darkened Wimbledon. Why?

Irrespective of the cost, it added nothing to the story and the report could easily have been transmitted live from Dan's front room.

Leon Drake

A THRILLING VOYAGE

The North Water (Friday BBC2) is bleak, violent and dark – but I love it! I'm watching it on BBC iPlayer because I can't wait for the next episode. Colin Farrell, who I think put on weight for his character Henry Drax, is phenomenal at portraying Drax's psychopathic persona, which creates a feeling of unease throughout each episode.

I also love the locations, which must have been quite demanding for all the actors and film crew, but the production is first class.

Susan Cooper

Torquay, Devon

WORLD OF WATER

H<sub>2</sub>O: the Molecule That Made Us (BBC4) was fascinating, awe-inspiring and sobering and should be compulsory viewing in schools.

Our access to water is taken for granted in most developed countries, but in fact the future is not so secure, at least not without some changes. This three-part series covered everything from drought and floods to fires and climate change. Some of the technology used in the investigations was astonishing.

Water, and the way it is obtained, affects our planet, lives and the natural world. We ignore the research explored in this programme at our peril.

Sue Sandy

HOW BRITISH IS BAKE OFF?

COMPLETE NATURALS

The delightful Chris Packham and Megan McCubbin in Chris and Meg's Wild Summer (Sunday BBC2), with their kind, gentle presentation and the special chemistry between them, make me laugh and smile, and also value the importance of caring for nature.

This captivating series has so many magic moments, such as Chris being confronted with a slushy, and I was sure the alpacas were going to drag them both into the lake for a swim! What a joy seeing the two zip-wiring through the air imagining they were peregrines! I can't have been the only one shouting at the TV: "Let them have another go!"

We deserve more of this fabulous pair... another series, with hour-long programmes please, BBC2. They somehow make me feel that little bit safer knowing they are there, passionately caring for our wildlife and our world.

Janet Hoptroff
Rustington, West Sussex

SOGGY

I tuned in to The Birthday Cake Game (Radio 4) – the comedy quiz hosted by Richard Osman, in which contestants have to work out people's ages – and was truly shocked by this half-baked idea.

With too few ingredients, a poor recipe and too many cooks, it unforgivingly adds up to nothing more than wasted time.

Fred Vintner
Yoxford, Suffolk

ALL SEWN UP

I noticed in Endeavour (12 September ITV) that the name of the fashion house was Fenner Fashions.

That was the name of the factory in The Rag Trade, the sitcom starring Sheila Hancock (above) – wife of the late John Thaw, who played Morse, and stepmother of Abigail Thaw, who plays Dorothea Frazil in Endeavour. A nice touch by writer Russell Lewis.

THE DIVINE COMEDY

As a family we enjoy watching TV together, but there are very few programmes that cater for all our tastes. The exception is Ghosts – it's funny, warm and has just that little bit of cheekiness to keep us all happy.

Well done to the brilliant cast and fabulous writers for a wonderful series, bringing peace to all those families warring over the remote.

A GREAT ADDITION

Thank you for the Radio Times Podcast. Jane Garvey and Rhianna Dhillon are a fantastic duo who talk so intelligently and passionately about TV.

It's so refreshing to hear an entertainment podcast that isn't dumbed down or sensationalised, and I particularly respect their honesty about what they enjoyed, and indeed what they didn't enjoy.

The guests have been brilliant so far and I hope that continues into the episodes that will follow.

We're so pleased that you're enjoying it – listen in from Wednesday 20 September for Jane and Rhianna's chat with Gillian Anderson and Jason Isaacs (p20), and read more from Jane on p53.

BEHIND THE SCREAMS

'It's not even a job'

Ben Willbond – Ghosts' Captain – on messing about for a living

With a Ghosts DVD box set just released, RT caught up with the show's Army officer, played by Ben Willbond

Series three has just finished on BBC1. You must be thrilled with how viewers have embraced it?

Yes, we really are. It's always nerve-racking when you start a show. Actually, the first thing you feel is incredibly lucky to be able to get the show commissioned in the first place. I spoke to the others when we launched series one and Jim [Howick] was like, "I didn't sleep at all!"

Fans really love its mixture of funny and moving...

Yes I think so, that just comes from us as a team – the more real and emotional you can make the characters, the better the connection with an audience. You expect that from an out-and-out drama and I think that should be in comedy, too. It's quite a hard balance to strike.

Your audience averages out at five million, and you've collected fans from the days of CBBC's Horrible Histories and Sky's Yonderland. How do you manage to appeal to both children and adults?

We're all more or less the generation that grew up watching shows before things became labelled – when the BBC started to have more channels and more options, then Channel 4 launched its comedy. We were all coming into the industry at that time, but before then comedy was just comedy. Blackadder was on at nine o'clock at night and we'd all watch it. If you can appeal to everyone just by making it accessible: that's the tone we've tried to strike from the get-go.

Who is the Captain based on?

I had a very odd childhood: I was at boarding school and it was a very military establishment – not by name but it was very military. It was what I grew up with and I was surrounded by people like him. My way of dealing with that was to create a character who was lovable and misunderstood, but also utterly absurd in his belief that everything has to be regimented and "just so". When we were coming up with the show we decided early on that we should pick a character; we all started to pitch to each other: "What if he was a World War Two captain, talks a good game but actually is completely emotionally confused?"

Initially he was quite a figure of fun but his big secret is an important one in terms of representation...

We were really tentative at first and didn't want it to become a joke that landed incorrectly. It had to be sensitive. At the time [the 1940s], if you were gay it was still illegal, which is just extraordinary. And once you start to tap into that it creates a really interesting base for a character that lives in a comedy.

Do things go wrong in filming?

What was nice coming back for a third series is that everyone knows what they're doing, there's no peripheral nervousness, and that includes the crew as well. It's not even a job, it's just messing about. I know that when I get to the set with any of them, it's going to be a really fun day. Because it just takes a look and it'll all go to pot!

All of you write and co-write episodes. Do you enjoy that?

Increasingly so. And I get quite obsessed with story. I'm very lucky to work closely with Larry [Laurence Rickard, who plays Caveman Robin], mostly, because he's so brilliant at joke structure it's just insane. It's like, "How did you find a joke out of that!"

A US adaptation airs next month, but will your version continue?

Conversations are happening... I'm going to leave it there!

Your chemistry must be strong for you to still be a team 12 years on...

It's true. I still marvel at the fact that we can do this. Being with each other, we know instinctively whether something's working or not and it's just lovely to be able to do it. It comes from an odd place forged in the Horrible Histories days when we were all working stupidly long hours dressed variously as cavemen and monks and saying, "What are we doing?" but just having a real laugh. So we don't want that to end. It's a really precious thing when you find it, you don't want to let it go. Even if Ghosts is the last hurrah, that would be a lovely legacy and a lovely memory. MARK BRAXTON

Get out bird watching YOUR WELLBEING WILL THANK YOU

THE ORIGINAL
MORRIS & Co

If you are particularly partial to beautiful birds, you'll love HSL's William Morris bird print focussed designer fabric, Strawberry Thief. Available on many of their stunning fireside chair ranges, you can enjoy bringing the outside into your own living room.

Have you been looking for a new hobby that will bring you closer to nature? Join a thriving community of nearly 3 million British enthusiasts in a popular recreational activity – bird watching.

Bird watching isn't only an enjoyable pastime, it's also very good for boosting your physical and mental wellbeing. Here are just some of the ways:

FRESH AIR & VITAMIN D PRODUCTION

Whilst you could undertake this hobby from your living room window overlooking your garden, getting out in the fresh air helps to boost your mind, body and soul. Not only does fresh outdoor air feel great, but it's also shown to lower your blood pressure and heart rate, give you more energy and focus, and improve your digestion. Also, being out in the sunshine is the most natural way of increasing your body's production of vitamin D.

CALMING

Patience is a virtue that can take a lifetime to master. What better way to practice than to incorporate it into a hobby? Birds are beautiful creatures that are truly worth the wait – but wait you must! As you sit and await your feathered friends' visit, you'll be refining your ability to delay gratification and perfect the proverb "all good things come to those who wait".

INCREASE YOUR REFLEXES

Whilst we've already touched on the need to hone your patience skills, when the birds do appear – it can be in a flash. You'll need to practice being able to quickly reach for your binoculars, reference book and pen so that you can note down what you saw – or perhaps you could also snap a picture if you've got a camera handy.

CONNECT WITH NATURE

Finally, what better way to spend your time than to connect with nature? Go out for a walk, go to a bird watching hot spot, or simply sit in your garden and enjoy what Mother Nature has given us to wonder at.

View from my sofa

WILL KIRK

‘I find it all very bizarre’

The Repair Shop fixer on fame, fans – and trying not to cry on TV

What's the view from your sofa?

My wife Polly said we didn't need a bigger TV, but our last one was really old, so I lied, saying I'd got one in the sales – I might have lied about the price as well! So, we've got a lovely big TV now and underneath that is my PlayStation, which I've been told to give to charity. I never have time to play, but I won't get rid of it! There are plants – lockdown purchases – around the TV and I've been obsessively making terrariums.

Do you have a new sofa too?

We have a two-seat, light grey, modern Scandi-style sofa. Because of all the woodwork I do, there's always sawdust on my jeans and you can probably see where I sit. I washed the covers a few months ago without reading the label and shrank them. I was on the verge of taking the sofa to the Repair Shop!

What have you been watching?

We got into escapist TV during lockdown: Escape to the Country, couples looking round Spanish flats in A Place in the Sun. Cooking programmes, too, but not Celebrity MasterChef – I had an absolute nightmare when I was on it. I'm a huge Rick Stein fan and I love watching old footage of Keith Floyd drinking more than he cooks. Oh, and Nine Perfect Strangers. Nicole Kidman is very spooky.

The stories that feature in The Repair Shop are often very emotional. Is it hard not to cry during filming?

Luckily, we don't go out live... Sometimes you have to get some air outside, especially if someone's story triggers your own memories. I think the show is so successful because everyone can relate to either an object brought in for repair or the story connected to it.

How do you deal with fame – and your particularly ardent fanbase?

I've never been hugged by so many ladies – and men – of a certain age, although not so much during Covid. Pretty much wherever I go, even if I'm wearing a mask and a hat, people recognise me. I'm not a Hollywood star – I fix antique furniture on the BBC. As for certain publications wanting to know everything about my private life... I find it all very bizarre.

You will soon be seen in a new BBC show called The Travelling Auctioneers, in which you and Antiques Road Trip's Christina Trevanion take a mobile auction house and workshop around the UK. It sounds like a lot of fun...

It really is! I've been pitched other shows, but this one appealed to me because it's all about restoring something rather than adding it to landfill. Even better if you can sell it to raise money for a good cause.

The Repair Shop is on Netflix in the US. Would a job offer tempt you to move to America?

As much as I'd love to hang out in California, driving around in a convertible with furniture sticking out of the back seat, I don't think it's going to happen. Having said that, don't hold me to anything!

AMY RAPHAEL

The Repair Shop is on Wednesday at 8pm on BBC1. The Travelling Auctioneers is coming to BBC1 soon

NOTHING TO WATCH?

MY BOOK The Thursday Murder Club by Richard Osman is the only book I've read in about three years.

MY FILM I'm a huge James Bond fan so No Time to Die is on my list.

MY PODCAST I've listened to all 18 episodes of From the Oasthouse: the Alan Partridge Podcast at least five times. I love him; I find his voice quite soothing!
