

Feathers serves for decorative purpose

Feathers are associated with animals especially birds. However over the years, feathers have evolved from being a protection to birds, to an essential material amongst humans. The beauty of feathers has made it to become an essential beauty to humans. The use of feathers is wide and highly decorative; they can be used across major spheres of human activity.

Feathers serve decorative functions, as they are used as decorations in homes, office etc. They are used in fashion to make dresses, handbags, accessories. They can also be used in millinery, as costumes and ornaments. Feathers are beautiful to behold and easy to use, they do not weigh much which makes it very easy to work with.

There are a variety of feathers just as there are various kinds of bird species, each one with its own beauty and uniqueness. One of such interesting and exquisite type of feather is the Peacock's feather. Peacock's are known to be very beautiful birds with their beautiful and colourful feathers. Peacock also known as Peafowl is a bird with Asian root. There are two species in Asia known as the Blue peafowl or Indian Peafowl, often associated with India and Sri Lanka. We also have the green peafowl associated with Indochina and Myanmar. There is also the African specie- the Congo peafowl of the Congo Basin.

The peacock is exceptionally beautiful and it's a bird of pride and class. For example, the Indian peacock has chatoyant blue and green plume. The feathers at the back/tail known as train have eyespots that come to full glory when the peacock displays/fans its tail. This beauty has caught the human eye to the extent of preserving and making lovely, decorative and creative materials. They also have religious functions among the Indians especially.

There are varieties of peacock feathers. There is the white peacock feather gotten from white peacocks. White peacocks exist as against the colourful ones we know, they are not albinos they just have a condition called leucism which makes them to have an overall reduction in their pigments. Even though white peacock feathers are not colourful as regular peacock feathers, yet they are very beautiful and bright. They serve millinery, bridal, decorative and fashion purposes. In the world of fashion, they can be used to produce handbags, clothes, shoes, dresses, earrings, hair accessories etc.

We also have bleached peacock feathers. Peacock feathers are lightly bleached to produce an attractive hue of colours adding to the beauty of peacock feathers. They also serve millinery, decorative and other functions.

Some peacock feathers are also dyed to add to the intensity of the colour and to create a more beautiful pattern and give a beautiful appearance to the feathers.
