Introduction

Welcome to this second edition of Getting To Football for the 2021-22 season.

Some of the usual content was omitted from the August edition for lack of time, but much of it now returns. All senior football in Scotland is now covered, together with the third levels of football in Northern Ireland and Wales. Hockey and rugby union too return in this edition, while football in Ireland, Gaelic football, hurling, rugby league, and shinty – all of which play summer seasons – will return in good time for their 2022 seasons. Also, all transport services which run hourly or less often have been re-checked since the last edition.

The entries should be largely self explanatory. For every team, the address of the ground is given, followed by the name of the most convenient railway station (or tram stop, or, in a few cases, ferry port) to which to travel. This is not necessarily the nearest railway station to the ground, although more often than not it is. After that, the guide provides directions from the railway station, tram stop, or ferry port to the ground. If the distance to the ground is less than 0.875 miles, then only walking directions to the ground are given. The abbreviations L and R stand for left and right! If it is further than that, then the guide provides details of bus services where such exist. Unless stated otherwise, all directions assume that matches are played on Saturday afternoons.

	Station forming part of National Rail system		Bus station or interchange
	Station served by light railway or metro		Bus
	Tram stop		Bus, in countries which drive on the right
	Ferry port

All of the entries are to the best of my knowledge correct at the time of going to press, but I fear that I cannot accept responsibility for any errors or their consequences. Bus and train timetables had begun to settle down, although at present there are reports of services not operating for want of drivers or fuel, but it is still the case that not all operators have correct information readily available on their websites.

Should you identify an error, please let me know by email (edwardsandrewd@yahoo.co.uk) and it will be corrected in time for the next edition. I must thank assorted correspondents, many of them members of the NonLeagueMatters Forum (www.nonleaguematters.co.uk), for their valuable contributions and corrections to the various draft releases and earlier editions of this guide.

Most of the content of this work is in the public domain, but I assert ownership of the presentation and of that part of the content which is not. Should any club or league wish to use part of the content in a programme or on a website then please contact me about this. Except as regards full time professional clubs and the leagues in which they play there will be no fee attached to use of the information, but I shall be disappointed if I find the information being used without reference to me.
