ENGL-126-5461 > Assignments > Essay #2 Final Draft >

The screenshot shows a submission details page for 'Essay #2 Final Draft' by Min Zhang, submitted on Apr 20 at 8:05am. The page includes a sidebar with navigation options like Home, Announcements, Modules, Chat, ConferZoom, Discussions, People, Grades, NetTutor, DVC Library, Office 365, NameCoach Unified Tools, Secure Exam Proctor (Proctorio), Labster Dashboard, and DVC Tutoring. The main content area displays 'Submission Details' with a grade of 5.3/10. A preview of the final draft PDF is shown, along with feedback comments. One comment states: 'The writing style was a little confusing. The paragraphs and topics seem to jump around without clear focus, and there are a lot of repeated ideas.' Another comment says: 'I think your largest area of improvement will be to slow down and think about what you are expressing with each sentence. Keep the structure in the front of your priorities - topic sentences should make a claim about the topic, then you should introduce some context for your supporting evidence, provide the evidence (examples or quotes), tell what they mean on the surface, point out specific keywords and ideas from the evidence, explore the suggested tones, messages, themes, and ideas (values/concerns /consequences) of the information, then link to a larger significance. A paragraph needs to be well constructed, clear and direct.'

In terms of plagiarism, the paper I requested experienced around 90% of uniqueness. But just after taking a more in-depth search, I recognized clear makes an attempt to match the algorithms with paraphrasing.

I had been struggling with a troublesome paper and experienced no potential for handing it in on time. An expert from WritemyPapers4Me.com made available products and services in a really shorter although and did my paper very well.

Sadly, Essay Pro does not have any savings or loyalty courses. Its enterprise product doesn't allow for it to supply it.
