The Disappearance of Maura Murray – Episode 6

Medium Allison DuBois is flown in to meet with Maggie and Art:

Allison said Maura's mom seemed "removed"

They arrive at the crash site; in the below image you can see how close the Westman's is to the crash site, which is just across the road and a little to the left past the curve; the Weathered Barn is the building on the right.

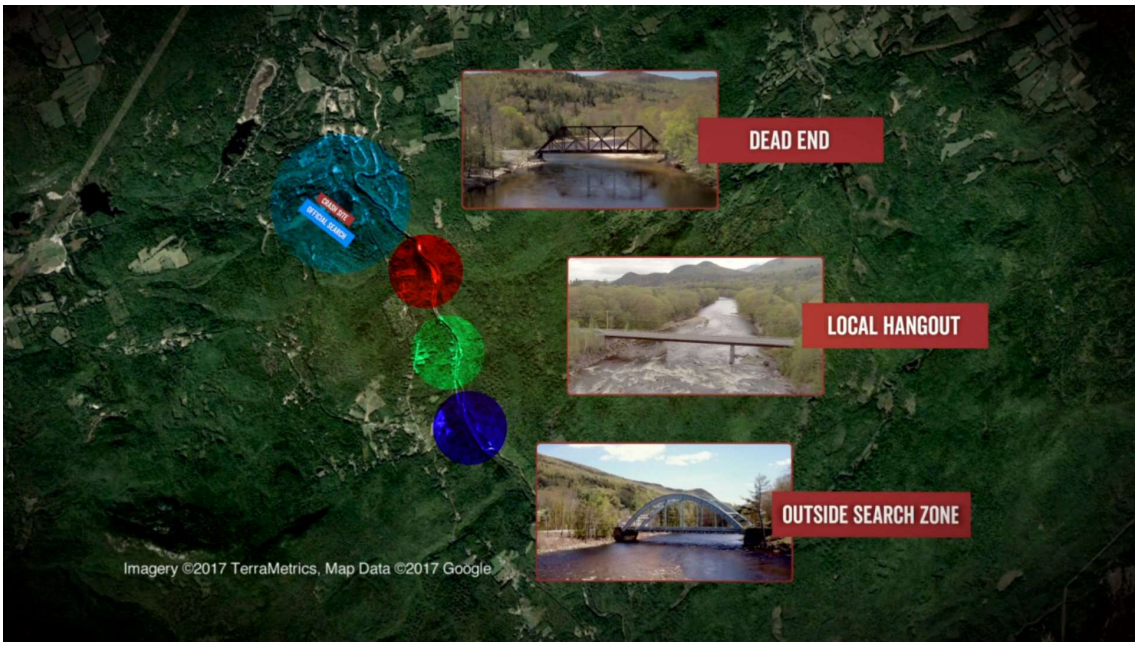

They bring Allison the crash site:

Based on what Allison sees and feels from Maura, three bridges are identified for further inspection (but none of them match Allison's vision):

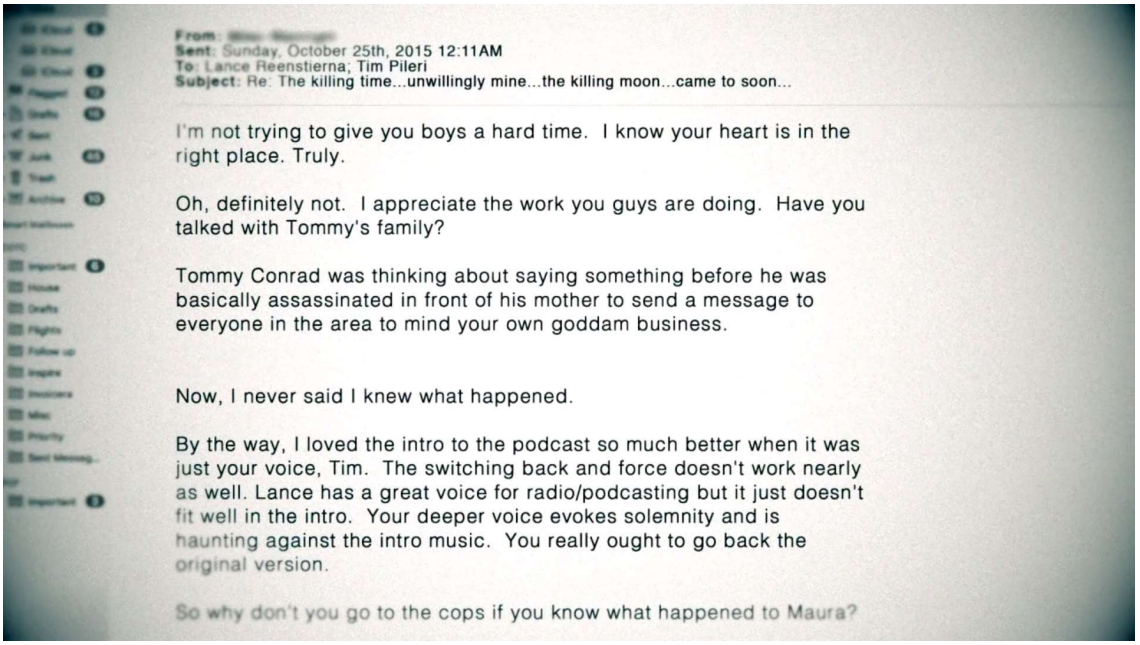

Maggie waits for Kate at her house but is unsuccessful at connecting with her:

The mountains: desolate, ominous, gorgeous:

One of a series of threatening emails regarding the planned search of the coordinates:

I'm not trying to give you boys a hard time. I know your heart is in the right place. Truly.

Oh, definitely not. I appreciate the work you guys are doing. Have you talked with Tommy's family?

Tommy Conrad was thinking about saying something before he was basically assassinated in front of his mother to send a message to everyone in the area to mind your own goddam business.

Now, I never said I knew what happened.

By the way, I loved the intro to the podcast so much better when it was just your voice, Tim. The switching back and force doesn't work nearly as well. Lance has a great voice for radio/podcasting but it just doesn't fit well in the intro. Your deeper voice evokes solemnity and is haunting against the intro music. You really ought to go back the original version.

So why don't you go to the cops if you know what happened to Maura?
