Coleman And MacDonald Promoted To Deputy Superintendents

Some 450 Charlestown residents gathered last Wednesday evening, June 20, at the Knights of Columbus on West School Street to honor two distinguished members of the Boston Police Department.

Francis J. Coleman, a longtime resident of 8 Seminary Street, and William P. MacDonald, former Commanding Officer and Captain of District 15 in City Square were honored by family and friends in recognition of their recent promotions to the rank of Deputy Superintendent.

Coleman's promotion represents the first time that Charlestown has a resident serving on the Command Staff of the Boston Police Department. As Deputy Superintendent, Coleman assumes command of Area E, encompassing Dorchester and South Boston.

His promotion fills a vacancy created by the retirement of former Deputy Superintendent Lawrence Quinlan.

Like Coleman, MacDonald is a distinguished veteran of the Boston Police Department. He joined the Boston Police as a patrolman in July of 1949, and during his career he has held the rank of Sergeant, Lieutenant and Captain. He assumed command of District 15 as Acting Captain in January, 1975 and was promoted to the rank of Captain on March 22, 1978.

As Deputy Superintendent, MacDonald will maintain his close ties with the Charlestown Community. His command of Area A encompasses both Charlestown and East Boston.

Coleman recently completed his twenty-fourth year of service

THINKING ABOUT SELLING YOUR HOME? FIND OUT WHAT IT IS WORTH

The first step to take when selling your home is to find out its sale value.

Many people in Charlestown underestimate their home's value, and a few put too high a price on it. Either way, the owner loses: Either equity, or time lost while a home sits for months on the market.

We offer, at no cost or obligation, an opinion of your home's market value. First we consider factors such as:

- Location
- original features
- architectural style
- mechanical systems
- rental income
- brick or wood construction

Next, we compare a home to our most recent sales to help you arrive at the best price for your home: The price that gets you the most in the time you have to sell.

to the Department. During his career, the Charlestown native was promoted no less than five times, having held the rank of Sergeant, Sergeant-Detective, Acting Lieutenant and Lieutenant.

A former Superior Officer of the Department's Vice Control Section, Coleman first served as a patrolman in Downtown Boston. Until his promotion, he was serving as Lieutenant on District One which encompasses the Back Bay, Beacon Hill, Waterfront and North End sections of the City.

Both Mayor Kevin H. White and Police Commissioner Joseph M. Jordan joined the festivities along with Superintendent Edward F. Connolly, Chief of the Department's Bureau of Field Services. Mayor White reminded the large gathering of the many years of service provided by both officers and termed the promotions as an effort on the part of the Police Department to increase and improve neighborhood police services to the neighborhoods of Boston.

SPEAKING at a community reception hosted at the Knights of Columbus last Wednesday was Boston Mayor Kevin H. White. Mayor White (center) joined the Charlestown Community in honoring Deputy Superintendents Francis J. Coleman (left) and William P. MacDonald (right) in recognition of their many years of outstanding service to the City of Boston.

"I went from a size 16 to a size 10 at Gloria Stevens."

"When I stopped smoking the weight just piled on, so I joined Gloria Stevens. In 6 months I lost 30 pounds. My husband thinks I look great. My friends are envious of my new figure, but I feel anybody can do it. The hardest part is starting, going through the door for the first time. The new me is great. You can't beat this feeling, and I know I couldn't do it without Gloria Stevens."

Introducing New Police Captain McCormack

He's softspoken and still remembers what he thought of cops before he was one of them. His name is Joseph V. McCormack and he is the new Police Captain of Charlestown's District 15.

Transferring from a Captain's position from the Bureau of Field Services McCormack was also Captain in District 2 (Roxbury) and District 11 (Dorchester). He has been in the Boston police force 29 years, 10 of those years as a captain when in 1969 former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover promoted McCormack while he attended the FBI Academy in Washington.

In his fourth week as Charlestown's Police Captain, McCormack says he would like the people of Charlestown to name the district's priorities.

Arriving at a time when Charlestown has been a primary media target on crime has not discouraged the captain. "The publicity is unfair," said he concerning the recent horse shooting incident, "I think there would have been less publicity if the officer had been shot. Reporters went to the project for their interviews and were lead erroneously that everyone had guns."

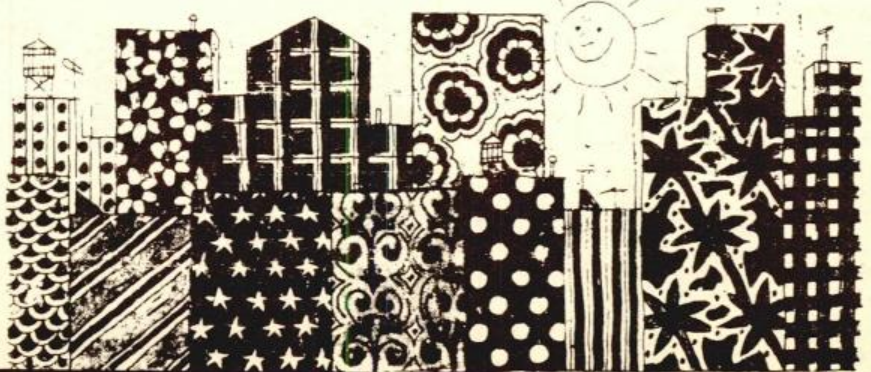

The 52 year old law enforcer began his career with seven years of night school at Northeastern University where he earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Law Enforcement. Most of his police career has been served in Roxbury. "I think I'm going to enjoy Charlestown. The people are friendly and I've been well received."

While McCormack is still familiarizing himself with the locality and some of the district's unique crime prevention tactics such as team patrolling, he is also concerned with the image of the police officer in Charlestown.

"I remember once when I was driving a White Fuel truck and an officer called me all kinds of names for parking in the wrong place. I don't like that kind of discourtesy. If you're a kid 15 or 16 and starting to hang on the corners with some of your friends and a police officer comes up and is crass or loud that kid is going to think all policemen are like that."

A former resident of South Boston, McCormack now lives in Medford with his wife and three daughters.

Ceremonies Mark Museum Opening

Balloons, boats, bands and special guests will be part of the gala festivities on July 1 when two of New England's liveliest museums, the Children's Museum and the Museum of Transportation, open the doors of Museum Wharf, their new home on Boston's waterfront.

The Berklee Faculty Band will provide the music for the midday ceremony which will culminate in the release of thousands of balloons. The Fort Point Channel will be filled with a fleet of colorful sailboats piloted by young sailors from the Cottage Park Yacht Club National Ten Association, and fire boats from the Boston Fire Department and the U.S. Coast Guard will add their own splashy salute to the festivities. Musket fire and bagpipe music from the Boston Tea Party Ship will add to the excitement.

Grand Opening celebrations, Massachusetts' major celebration of the International Year of the Child, will continue through Sunday, July 8 with music, fire engine rides, antique vehicles displays, folk dancing, jugglers, clowns and puppet shows.

Visitors to Museum Wharf will be able to explore a nineteenth century streetcar suburb, see a magnificent collection of doll houses, pedal a 95-year-old high-wheel bicycle, and clamber through a three-story cross section of a city street.

YOU'RE NUMBER ONE WITH US.

1979 marks The International Year of the Child, and the 125th birthday of the Charlestown Savings Bank. To celebrate, Charlestown Savings and the Boston School Department sponsored the "That's my Boston" Arts Competition. A competition open to students in all grade levels.

The theme was "That's my Boston," and students could use whatever visual medium they preferred. There were 22 High School and 22 Middle School prizes awarded in the form of savings accounts at Charlestown Savings. The 22 Elementary School prizes took the form of grants to be used for class trips and other special activities. The winning artwork will be on display in the lobby of Charlestown's main office at 55 Summer Street, June 26th through July 31st.

To all those who entered, and to all who won, thank you and congratulations from Charlestown Savings. You're all number one with us.

Good Books For The Summer

Travel through the world of books this summer by picking up old and new classic works at the Charlestown Branch Library. There are few things more enjoyable than spending lazy summer days with a good book as a friend.

As in previous years, copies of summer reading lists from the schools in the Boston area are available for use at the library. These lists indicate recommended reading for three grade levels, 7th and 8th; 9th and 10th; and 11th and 12th. Interesting and well-written works are listed for both categories of fiction and non-fiction.

The library owns many of these titles on the lists as well as other very fascinating and educational

by Charlie McGonagle

In the back of every jogger's mind lives the mystique of the Road Race. As he pounds along the pavement, visions of the Boston Marathon Dance in his head. He sees the middle aged jogger, one hundred yards ahead of him, as Bill Rogers. As he shortens the distance between himself and the older man, the adrenaline begins to pump into his legs bringing him closer to the Old Man Rogers' figure. He can feel the Laurel Wreath being placed on his head, arms stretched skyward in victorious salute to the masses cheering his every move.

As a jogger, I have experienced these fantasies as I struggle along the banks of the Charles River, and on the very rare occasion of passing a fellow runner, the dream looms even larger.

To run for exercise and enjoyment is one thing. But the added ingredient of competition found in a Road race so intrigued me that I decided, a few months ago, to satisfy my curiosity by entering the Boys' Club five mile road race held last Saturday morning.

I knew I would have to begin a very intensive training program so as to be ready for the anticipated grind.

My first promise to myself was to stop my weekly drive to the package store for a case of beer. For the next two months, I promised myself, I would walk to the package store and carry the case home, after all, I would need the added exercise.

I awoke Saturday morning after a night of dreams that had me standing atop a pedestal, trophies draped in great numbers around me, adoring people cheering wildly.

The temperature had reached ninety degrees. The mercury was inching higher and higher, and the race was still two hours away.

As the cobwebs of sleep began to breakaway from my miniscule brain, reality, sanity, and rationality worked its way in.

"Maybe they'll call the thing off," I said to my wife wishfully.

"They can't do that," she retorted. Her statement stole the last hope I had of backing out.

"With any luck I might twist my ankle walking over to the club." The thought of excruciating pain shooting from ankle to brain brought great pleasure to my thoughts, but luck was not mine Saturday as I reached the club uninjured.

1 Day Road Race

photos by Bob Marauder

As I pinned number 162 to the front of my scant blue shirt, I scanned the competition. Trim, newly, young. The adjectives that could be used to describe these athletes were endless.

"Where are all the fat guys and old broads?," I whispered to the fellow sitting next to me.

"Have you tried the Mirror?" answered the guy who resembled, very closely, Jerome Drayton. They grouped us on High Street, more than one hundred men, women, and children perspiring in the deadly heat even before the first step was taken.

As the starter raised his pistol, I inched to the front. The gun sounded, and bodies passed me in great numbers. About three hundred yards into the race, at the monument on High Street, the first of what would be many urges to quit engulfed me.

Far in front of me was a circle of runners vying for advantageous position. A long line of singletons followed. As the conglomeration of participants tapered back to me, I envisioned myself as the very final part of the tail of a huge tadpole.

As we swung onto Warren Street past Saint Mary's Church, I began to become more aware of the intense heat. I had run more than five miles many times before, but not in this sauna type weather. By the time I passed West School on Main, I had lost sight of the leaders. I would not see them again. The blue lights from atop the lead car flashed back to me for the final time as it banked around Main just past the Eden Street Playground.

I swung up Bunker Hill at Sullivan Square. And the anticipated agony of the climb did not hold an ounce of disappointment. The heat, added to the strain of the upward climb brought pain I had never experienced in my pleasure runs. But on the hill something strange was beginning to happen. Some of the runners who had been showing their heels on Main Street were being defeated by the hill. As I passed the tiring bodies, an unexplained surge of energy overcame me. There was still nearly four miles to go, maybe others are more tired than I!

My goal, knowing victory was totally unrealistic, was to finish in less than forty minutes, a jogger's pace. However the ninety six degree temperature at the Races's start all but removed that hope from my mind.

Bunker Hill Day Road Race

By Lexington and Bunker Hill, I had passed a few more tired runners, and not since Sullivan Square had anybody passed me. I glanced at my wristwatch for the first time since the race began. At the two mile mark, only fourteen minutes had elapsed. Surprisingly, I was well within my forty minute pace.

I could feel the heat causing my head to throb at the temples. I passed runners who had lost their battle to the sun, and dropped out. Approaching Medford Street on Chelsea, a group of four or five men running together seemed to be slowing quickly. One of the group stopped, bent at the waist, and began to vomit. The sight of their wounded friend seemed to take even more from the group as I passed them turning onto Medford Street at the 'Oily'.

The runners in front of me, at least those still visible, were spaced about every one hundred yards. The race was now more than half over. The sun beat relentlessly on Medford Street, and there was no escaping its torturous heat.

Many times I wanted to stop, but each time I came a bit closer to another runner, the drive to go on outweighed my thoughts of stopping.

I passed Driscoll's and another runner, the Cobblestone and another.

There were people lined, strategically, along the route with water. At first I thought they were just nice, thoughtful folks. By Main Street I was convinced they were angels sent from Heaven.

At Albion Place, Joe Roche and his wife Mary stood, garden hose in hand. As they sprayed the cold mist over my perspiring body, I thought nothing had ever felt better.

At Sunnyside on Main, a runner whom I had passed on Medford, ran up beside me. We ran together for a couple of hundred yards, and as we passed Wood and Green, I could see the early finishers running along High Street, their journey already completed.

Having just been caught by a tiring runner, and seeing others at the finish line, and with still nearly a mile to go, I got my strongest urge to quit. My legs were rubbery and my lungs hurt, but what bothered me the most was the relentless beating of the sun on my head.

"I have to slow down for a while," said the runner beside me. As I inched ahead of him for the second time, I decided, no matter what, I would at least finish.

As I turned down Park Street and onto Warren, I caught sight of a little girl, no more than four feet, eight inches tall and eighty pounds. It was the first girl I had seen since early in the race. The others had assumed positions farther back in the pack.

The little lady's heart had to be bigger than the body in which it was stored. At Saint Mary's Church, I pulled up along side of her.

"Which way from here?" she asked. She couldn't have been more than twelve years old. I admired her talent, but more her courage. If I had to pick a personal hero that day, it would have been her, by leaps and bounds. Eventually she was the first female finisher, and by nearly ten minutes over her closest competitor.

As we attacked Monument Ave. together, the little girl and I, I began to feel more tired than at any other time during the race. The little girl must have felt the same way, for she fell a bit back off the race.

Familiar footsteps pounded up behind as I approached the top of what I considered the toughest part of the race. If Monument Ave. was ten steps longer, I'd have walked the rest of the way.

He passed me again, but as we hit the level ground on High Street, a bit of the weariness left my legs, and as we circled the Monument, I passed him again.

"This is my pace the rest of the way," he said as we passed Chestnut Street.

Many, many runners had already finished, and as I turned onto High for the final two hundred yards, I saw no runners, only people lining the street.

There were no runners to catch, yet the fact that I knew I would finish, combined with the excitement of the crowd, caused my legs to move faster than at any other time during the race.

More than once while running, I swore to myself that I would never do something like this again. I questioned my sanity and my motives.

I'm still not completely sure of my sanity, and my motives are still rather in doubt, but the feeling of self satisfaction that filled me as I crossed the finish line, well back in the pack, explained to me just why runners enter races they know they cannot win.

Walk To The Sea

A special Child World Parade, dedicated to the International Year of the Child, a performance by Ray Charles, and an international fireworks display will be a part of this year's Walk to the Sea over the Fourth of July weekend.

According to Helen Rees, Director of the Mayor's Office of Cultural Affairs, over 100,000 residents and visitors of Boston participated in last year's celebration. "Walk to the Sea, in its third year, has become the grand opener of nine weeks of free theatre performances, dances, and concerts sponsored by Summerthing. This year's Walk to the Sea will kick off Summerthing's twelfth season with three days of fun on land and sea," she said.

Elephants and camels, floats, clowns, marching bands, and antique cars will lead the Child World Parade on July 1 to Waterfront Park where The Greatest Children's Show on Earth will be presented.

Ray Charles will perform at 8 p.m. that evening on the City Hall Plaza, followed by a spectacular fireworks display at Boston Inner Harbor.

On both June 30 and July 1 there will be continuous entertainment outside the New England Aquarium, including square dancers, a barbeque, and a special preview of one of the Tall Ships.

And on July 4, Boston will celebrate the nation's birthday with a marching band, the reading of the Declaration of Independence, a harbor parade, and the annual USS Constitution turnaround. The day will be topped off with a Boston Pops performance at the Hatch Shell on the Esplanade at 8 p.m.

Walk to the Sea is being sponsored by the Mayor's Office of Cultural Affairs, Child World, Inc., the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Lechmere Sales.

Quinn Deserving Of Honor

June 8, 1979

Dear Chairman Gillen:

Our organization has been diligently working to perpetuate the fine character of Lt. Michael P. Quinn. Lt. Quinn was educated in the Boston Public Schools, graduating from Boston Latin School and proceeding to Holy Cross on a scholarship. Mike was active both as a player and instructor in Charlestown sports. His athletic prowess and academic record was a great tribute to him and his family. Commissioned as a 2nd Lieutenant in the Marine Corps, Mike trained at Quantico, and was assigned to Vietnam in November 1968.

As you know, this was not a popular war, but Mike felt a commitment to his country. Mike's brilliant career was brought to an abrupt end on August 29, 1969. His combat death was a tragedy, in his twenty-third year, with so much left to do.

In this era of proper acknowledgement to Vietnam Veterans, we feel it would be most fitting to name the Athletic Complex in his honor. Many memorials have been established for the other wars, but the Vietnam Veteran has been sorely mistreated. This request is equitable and I hope it will be accepted.

To address the issue of the remaining units and the proper designation, merit should be given to the following:

1. Contributors to the community
2. Veteran-War record

The other parties mentioned for honor should have one of the remaining facilities bearing their name.

The youth of today need contemporary figures to identify with, and Mike came from the neighborhood, and had ties with so many of the existing families.

This important decision should be handled with immediate deploy.

Very truly yours,
Ronan J. Fitzpatrick
Treasurer

Historic Presentation

HISTORIC PRESENTATION: Shown admiring the original design of the new State House stamp are Governor Edward J. King and Jean M. Babcock and Robert Depauw of Charlestown. The artwork was recently presented to the Governor in a historic ceremony which marked the first time in Postal Service History that the original artwork for a stamp was given for permanent public display.

Films For Children

The Charlestown Branch Library presents Summer Shadows, a film program for children on Tuesday afternoons at 3:30 p.m. The films on July 3 will be "Ananse's Farm", in which a spider tries to bring his friends together and does not succeed, and "A Ghost of a Chance", the story of three children who save a historic mansion with the help of ghosts.

Dear Editor:

Everyone in Charlestown appears to be pleased at the way the Bunker Hill Day Parade came out. I will not list the many fine organizations or individuals who deserve Thumbs Up for the great work they did but the Thumbs Down list of people who refused to cooperate must be headed by School Committeeman Finnegan. His total disregard of all rules of conduct at the parade start, makes one wonder how he will handle the job as Mayor after his actions June 17th show clearly he does what he wants, wishes of people in charge and rules not standing in his way.

The Charlestown organizations that paid for the many bands or worked so hard to raise the money for these bands were

A Fitting Tribute

Dear Mrs. Conway,

The letter from Mary Kelley that appeared in last week's Patriot served to remind me of the great sacrifice that the Kelley family made on behalf of their community and their country.

I remember, as a kid, climbing up Bunker Hill Street to St.

Charlestown Patriot
Charlestown, Ma. 02129

Dear Sir:

Please let me be the first one to congratulate the Bunker Hill Day Parade Committee. This year's parade was one of the finest since the reign of James M. Curley, Mayor of Boston. Mr. Curley was one of the most loyal fans of the people of Charlestown in preparing the Bunker Hill Day Celebration.

This year's Committee should feel proud and happy of a job, very well done. The Politicians were conspicuous by their absence. This policy should be continued in the years to come. Let's start earlier and really have it bigger again next year.

Again my very best thanks and congratulations to the Parade Committee for a very happy 17 of June.

Sincerely,
Albert G. Smith

Thumbs Down On Finnegan

promised that no politicians would march in the Charlestown Division, this is the way they wanted it. The elected pols all were informed prior to the parade that they could march in the third division with a band they sponsored or at the end of the parade with no band and with other office seekers. As example, Sen. Timility marched in the third division in front of the band he paid for and Councillor Sansone marched at the back, both acknowledged they understood the rules. Mr. Finnegan attempted to step off in front of a band in the second division, was told he would have to wait as all others did but he said he wanted to march in a spot he picked and while parade officials were busy he just stepped in a position and started marching.

This is not hearsay from someone, for I am the one who spoke to him and who restated the rules to him before he told the people of Charlestown, by his actions, that he isn't interested in what you want. If my attention was not distracted, believe me, he would not have marched where he did.

I am sure this will be said to be a smear tactic against him but before his actions that day, I was leaning in his direction in the coming race - but no more.

A 22 year old Somerville "maggot" was arrested after a high speed chase in which he attempted to run the police officers off the road several times. He was finally apprehended in Somerville, informed of his rights, and booked for several motor vehicle violations.

The victim was in a vacant apartment with friends when he entered and took her to another room and assaulted her. He was later arrested at his home by Detectives Antonuccio and Mackin. The child was taken to the MGH for treatment.

To Talk Of Many Things...

HAPPY MOTORING???

by Sal Giarratani

For weeks now, oil company executives have been telling us that they aren't to blame for the gasoline shortage. Instead, they've been talking about the Ayatollah Khomeini, government interference, panic buying, tank topping and unprecedented demand.

But according to all the latest polls, a good majority of Americans believe this oil crisis has been deliberately brought about by the oil companies out to make a fast buck.

The FTC appears as suspicious as we all are. A letter from an official at the FTC stated: "The gas shortage may be contrived."

Memorial Day weekend was the opening act of a drama that will be playing in every U.S. community in the near future.

Skirmishes at the gas pumps, incensed commuters and lnnng lines are scenes already written for the upcoming Fourth of July holiday period.

Many grumble that the shortages aren't real and that there is still plenty of fuel for all. The charges, hard to refute, are just about as difficult to prove.

This past weekend saw long lines at nearly every opened gasoline station following Gov. Ed King's half-tank executive directive.

Recently, I was handed a chain letter written for those who believe the entire situation is contrived by the major oil companies to create a false shortage and to drive gas pump prices up unnecessarily.

The chain letter appeals to the reader to mark your calendars—July 1 to Hell With Shell. We're not supposed to buy anymore Shell products until we get their attention. Shell was targeted first because it is foreign owned and was the first company to ration gasoline to its dealers.

But who's to blame? Big Oil? The Iranian shortfall? OPEC? Washington, DC? Or are the service station owners to be the fallguys? Or is the American driver and gas consumer the bad guy or gal?

The fact is the individual American consumer is at the bottom line. American drivers, who represent less than 6 percent of the world's population, consume 33 percent of the world's petroleum.

We can grumble, wait longer and pay more, or we can choose to change! We can avoid unnecessary trips, seek proper maintenance and use energy-efficient mass transit.

"Put a Tiger in your Tank" used to be the slogan of one major gasoline co., but now that tiger has turned into a monkey on our backs! In the final analysis, the word is clear, conservation is the consumer's watchword?
