We thought it would be nice to show you a bit about the world behind the wheel of a limousine. So we decided to share our experiences as a limousine driver with you, including some recommendations on why is a great driver. Limo

As a limousine driver you have to do more than just drive a car. To begin with, you're driving a car which means you have to know traffic, ways and shortcuts like your back pocket. In case there is road work, traffic jams or accidents on your way, you still need certainly to have the ability to get the customer punctually at the destination. Fortunately, there is a great gimmick that can help: a GPRS device that will show you the way. It is a great investments for almost any starting driver, but be advised that such devices are only as effective as the application they have. It's still advisable to understand the town you're driving in very well. Limousine

Another aspect of being a great limousine driver is that you need to have good people skills. Passengers can be found in all shapes and not forgetting all different kinds of moods. Maybe one customer just had a gruelling day in the office, or he/she just originated from probably the most horrible flight you can imagine after already travelling for 20 hours, with a jetlag! Understanding such situations and keeping in mind that the driver is there to calm down the customer, make him/her feel relaxed and welcome is an essential skill! At times, in the event of a wedding, prom or birthday event, the driver needs to ensure the atmosphere is placed for happiness and being jolly! In some instances a driver needs to have the ability to strike a conversation, having sincere interest in the passengers and at other times the driver needs to understand that the passenger just wants to be left alone. You can find even times that the driver functions as a therapist: listening and giving the customer an opportunity to vent whatever it is that is bothering him/her. At the conclusion obviously, the customer goes home and does the driver continues on to the next customer. The service is completed and ends with the customer exiting the car. Yet, sometimes, small gestures and events can have an enduring effect. limousine Houston

Punctuality is a wonderful quality for a driver. Among the worst things a driver can perform is appear late for work. For others this can be bad and can lead to a reprimand from your own boss, but for drivers it means someone will be late for work or even worse: for a journey! In case there is special events, it means the bride might be late on her wedding! As drivers are merely people, being late may happen, specially when driving customers late through the night and early each day the next day. Despite all precautions: double alarms, spouses waking you up, bosses calling to ensure you are on the road with time, it may occasionally happen that the driver is late! Deservedly, tips might be withheld. Yet, please attempt to understand: drivers are only humans too! They're not machines, so they might be late in rare cases, whether due to weather conditions, traffic or oversleeping.... although that doesn't give them a reason for being late, please give them a break now and than and ask why they are late? It would be gracefully appreciated!
