Action By The B.O.A. On Old C.H.S. Postponed To July 16th

by Marianne Martin

After heated debate between neighbors, a final decision has been made regarding the placement of the garage egress for the proposed conversion of the former Charlestown High School on Monument Square into 44 apartment units.

On Tuesday, June 25, 1985, after hearing arguments in support of two proposals on the location of the egress, the Board of Appeal voted to place the egress on the Bartlett Street side of the school, should the developer receive proper variances.

The two proposed sites for the egress were either on Monument Square or Bartlett Street. At a public meeting held on Tuesday, June 18th, while residents were unable to reach a consensus on either plan for the egress, the Graham Gund Associates stated they were willing to comply with either plan.

Harry Stoddard, who represented the Graham Gund Associates before the Board, stated that both proposals had good points and that the pros of one were essentially the cons of the other.

Peter Matson of Graham Gund Associates told the Board the only consensus reached at the past town meeting was to close the Cross Street entrance of the ancillary parking facility planned for the site of the former Spencer Annex. Dick Loring from the Traffic and Parking Department, told the Board that while both the Bartlett Street and Monument Square proposals had merit, he supported the Monument Square egress because it would "minimize on street parking loss and utilize existing traffic patterns."

Bartlett Street resident, Dan Jaffe, told the Board that the Monument Square entrance is the "most civil location" and is the "safest and most practical choice." The Board, however, disagreed.

Board member Paul Parks stated, "I think the safest placement (of the garage entrance) is on Bartlett Street. It just bothers me to put it near an intersection (the Monument Square proposal) where the ability to protect the safety of anyone in the area is difficult."

Parks also stated that due to the slope of Monument Square, vehicles would "tend to hit the street with a lot less control" and also the "intensity of use" of the roadway suggests that a garage entrance on Monument Square would not be safe.

Board member Chia-Ming Sze added that the slope of a driveway onto a sloping street near an intersection, was not safe.

Elm Street resident, Bob Rolinson agreed that the degree of slope on Monument Square would present a handicap, adding that when the building was utilized as a high school, Bartlett Street was used by the school buses. "If it was good enough for the city to use it ten years ago, then it's good enough for the people living in the building to use it."

While the Board voted in favor of the Bartlett Street entrance, this vote had no affect on the application for variances requested from the BOA by Graham Gund Associates.

James Farmer, Board member, stated "I don't think there has been a good faith effort (on behalf of the developer)."

Farmer, who stated the reason he was on the Board was to represent the laborers of Boston, said that he would like to see Graham Gund Associates pay prevailing wages to those working on their development.

Parks added, "You are talking about a fairly large building and I would think you should pay the prevailing wages and it is an issue of putting into specific language the hiring of Boston residents," and reminded the developers that "there are too many poor people in this city."

Sze agreed, "Since the building was a public building, the developer should pay Boston wages."

Councillor Robert Travaglini asked if the developer would be willing to reduce the number of units proposed from 44 to 40, thus eliminating the need for a variance for the parking space which would be eliminated by the closing of the Cross Street parking lot entrance. The Councillor stated with

"variables unanswered" he could not support a decision either way.

Sze stated he did not have a problem with the 44 proposed units, as long as the developer paid the laborers the prevailing wage. According to Sze, the real estate market could support the wages.

The Board voted to defer a decision regarding the renovation until Tuesday, July 16, 1985. The Graham Gund Associates were asked to bring to the next hearing finalized design plans, in addition to verification of the wages paid to workers, before the Board could grant any variances to the development.

Galvin stated this was "not a simple situation," presenting a history of past occupancy of the building, which he states proves that the building was a multiple unit dwelling. Galvin, however, did not have tax records to support his argument, but added the renovation work was done because Colpack "relied on the City of Boston's records, which were wrong."

Colpack has completed his renovations and the two tenants now living at 26 Monument Avenue requested that the Board not to ask them leave their homes.

Monument Avenue residents, James Whelan and Lawrence Rinaldi, spoke in opposition to the appeal. Rinaldi asked the Board to "preserve the character of the street and enforce the zoning laws."

Whelan presented the Board with a petition signed by 43 residents of Monument Avenue, adding that 22 of the petitioners were property owners. Galvin rebutted with a petition of his own in support of the application containing 300 signatures, eleven of which were property owners, adding one property owner signed both petitions.

Letters of opposition were presented to the Board on behalf of Representative Richard Voke and Senator Fran Doris. City Councillor Maura Hennigan spoke in opposition to the Colpack appeal, stating a vote to allow this "after the fact" renovation would "set a precedent" for future developers.

City Councillor Michael McCormack told the Board he had changed his opinion on the situation. "I didn't expect to hear that the Colpacks were told by the Assessing Department that it was a three family. I think the City of Boston and Inspectional Services were not without fault."

Councillor Robert Travaglini recommended the Board deny without prejudice the appeal, stating the Inspectional Services' "operations were questionable."

Richard Dennis, acting Chairman of the Board of Appeal, told the gathering that the Board would deny the appeal without prejudice, but asked that a review of the tax collector's records be made.

A denial without prejudice will allow Colpack to file his appeal before the Board at a future date.

The Massachusetts Port Authority celebrated the grand opening of the $18.5 million Constitution Plaza at Hoosac Pier in Charlestown on Wednesday, June 19, 1985.

The seven-acre site was developed by Hoosac Pier Associates, a joint venture of O'Connell Development Company, John Drew Company, Corcoran, Mullins, Jennison (CMJ) and Old Forge Realty. The development includes a three-story 130,000 square foot office building, and a 30,000 square foot restaurant — Barrett's on Boston Harbour — which opened in March. The development also includes public access along the Pier edge facing the U.S.S. Constitution, public open space at the entrance area, and parking.

"The transformation of the largely unused Pier into a modern office and commercial complex is adding to the economic base of the City and returning this valuable waterfront real estate to productive use," Massport Executive Director, David W. Davis said.

"For the Charlestown community, this project will provide residents with direct access to their waterfront while serving as an important complement to the revitalization of the Navy Yard and the Boston National Historic Park adjacent to Hoosac Pier," Davis said.

The opening event was attended by over 300 people, including City and State officials, Massport officials, the developer (O'Connell Development/Corcoran, Mullins, Jennison) and numerous Charlestown residents including Gloria Conway, editor of the Charlestown Patriot and John Curtin, president of the Charlestown Little League which received a donation of $1,000 from the Authority to commemorate the grand opening.

Development of the Hoosac Pier generated 150 new construction jobs for Boston area trades during the construction period, Davis added. It will also generate numerous permanent jobs on the site, including many jobs for Charlestown residents.

John Drew, president of the joint venture said, "The redevelopment of Hoosac Pier into an office building and restaurant complex was the next step in the revitalization of the Charlestown waterfront and it will complement the new housing in the Charlestown Navy Yard and stimulate the development of City Square." He added that 90 percent of the office building has been leased to an insurance company, law firms, and advertising agencies.

BUNKER HILL DAY ORATION BY THE HONORABLE BRIAN DONNELLY, UNITED STATES CONGRESS

General Putnam's biographer did not exaggerate when he wrote that the battle waged here in Charlestown, "will only cease to be celebrated when time shall exist no more."

We have returned to the battlefield today because the courage and commitment of the patriots who fought here and died here are virtues we seek to renew in our own time, in our own struggles, in our own souls.

The men who stood on this spot 210 years ago could not know whether or how their story would be told.

June 17, 1775 might easily have become a minor footnote to history, a sad story of an untrained, ill-equipped, ad-hoc army of farmers and tradesmen, schoolboys and fanatics, who were over-run and put to flight by the British Army in one hot and bloody hour.

Instead, Americans all recall that the course for independence was firmly set at the Battle of Bunker Hill, when the poet later recalled "The ground THEY gained, but WE the victory."

Tensions between the American colonists and the British authorities had been growing steadily for years. Each new act of British repression was countered by new resistance from the Americans. Each act of resistance met with a new repression.

Throughout the colonies, the acts of Massachusetts' patriots became instant legends — the Boston Massacre, the Boston Tea Party, and then Lexington and Concord.

The Continental Congress quickly declared the minutemen and militias around Boston to be the "American Continental Army" and dispatched an officer from Virginia, George Washington, to take command in their name.

On a night in June, before their new commander arrived, about 35-hundred of this Continental Army quietly dug themselves into position here in Charlestown, claiming the strategic high ground overlooking the British troops in Boston.

On the morning of June 17, British General Gage decided to retake the Charlestown hills quickly.

The British heavily outnumbered the Americans. They were vastly better-trained and better-equipped. But the Americans were inspired by their officers and inspired by their cause.

Twice the British marched on the entrenched patriots. Twice they drew close. And twice the American musket fire swept the advancing ranks, taking a terrible toll.

Only on the third assault, when the Americans had run out of ammunition, did the British troops over-run the patriot fortifications.

The word spread throughout the colonies: American fighting men had pushed the British force back twice. Americans had fought well...and bravely.

The British had re-taken Charlestown at the terrible cost of more the one thousand killed or wounded.

The American cause had many new heroes and a new martyr. Warren, the brilliant revolutionary and general, had given up his command to fight as a common soldier and when the last British wave broke over the American's position, Warren stayed at his post and fought to the death.

Not long afterward, an American historian would write: "The enthusiasm for the cause of liberty, substituted in the place of discipline, not only kept these troops together, but enabled them at once to perform the duties of a disciplined army."

General Gage was recalled to England in disgrace. Washington took command of a proven American Army.

Early the next spring, the British evacuated Boston completely.

The battle fought on this ground on that day inspired the populations of widely scattered towns and villages on a lonely continent to fight on, to take control of their own government, and to form a more perfect union, establish justice, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to themselves and to their posterity.

We gather today as their beneficiaries to express our gratitude for the sacrifice they made here.

We gather here as trustees of their magnificent estate to re-commit ourselves to protecting and enriching the heritage of freedom and democracy for ourselves and our posterity.

Charlestown Roots Blossom

by Bob DeCristoforo

Every flower has roots and on Wednesday, June 19th at the Kent Community School, thirteen very special Charlestown Roots blossomed!

The occasion was the first graduation of the Charlestown City Roots Program. City Roots is the program that gets young people back into the learning process and allows them to get their Boston High School Diploma.

One noted the extra sense of pride in these graduates and the further knowledge that they knew just how important is a high school diploma.

One also noted the real, sincere thanks and admiration these fine young people have for the teachers and the staff of the Charlestown program and the admiration that the staff and teachers have for these kids. The graduates were:

Harborfest '85 — Cause For Celebration

Boston Harborfest '85, an event packed festival centered around Boston Harbor, will be celebrated from July 2nd through July 7th.

Thousands of Bostonians and visitors will participate in the many scheduled activities during this favorite summer holiday celebration. Concerts, cruises, fireworks, a parade, harbor island walks and special activities, Chowderfest, and many more events make Boston the place to be to join in the celebration.

Why is there a need to celebrate this particular aspect of Boston's heritage? After a twenty year struggle to revitalize her waterfront, Boston is now a redevelopment success story. By adding residential and recreational usage to the long established commercial usage of her harbor, Boston has economically revived one of her most obvious assets, her waterfront.

Boston's reliance on the sea was established during the early stages of our country's independence when Boston was a center of shipping and trade. Since the mid-1800's there was a slow and steady decline in Boston's maritime trade. Eventually, abandoned warehouses and piers lined a once prosperous center of commercial activity. The harbor islands were for the most part neglected and inaccessible to the general public.

However, Boston has inherited an instinct to persevere and a movement by the city and private business began to reassess the value and use of the waterfront area. The scene today is quite different from the one twenty years ago. Hotels, parks, museums and businesses all thrive in the same area that not long ago was deserted. Most of the architectural splendor of the brick and granite buildings has been preserved, which lends to the wonderful contrast between old and new which now exists in the area.

Boston has done the impossible and the time has come to share in her success.

The six day festival that is Boston Harborfest combines seafood, history and entertainment. Among the 90 activities are free concerts, cruises, fireworks, a parade, harbor islands walks, annual turnaround of the USS CONSTITUTION, the U.S. Coast Guard sail training ship EAGLE, and the Fourth Annual Boston Chowderfest.

Included below are the Harborfest events taking place in Charlestown. For further information on events taking place throughout the harbor area, contact Boston Harborfest at 227-1528.

CHIEF MARSHAL and Mrs. Edward F. Kelly.

I am not old, but I have been around long enough to have worn out a few pair of shoes, and to have experienced some things I doubt will become fashionable again.

Most of my encounters with a primitive style of living took place at my Uncle Tom's camp in Wilmington. Built in the 1920's, the camp featured the latest in plumbing and running water, the latest in those days of summer cottages being none at all.

By the time I began spending my summers at the camp during the 1940's, things that are now taken for granted were virtually non-existent.

Somehow I did not consider the outdoor well, or "the pump," as we called it, an inconvenience, but rather a way of life in the country. Trips to fetch water were regarded in much the same way.

Beside "the pump," which stood about three and a half feet above the ground atop a pipe, a sluice type structure carried excess water away from the feet of the person pumping.

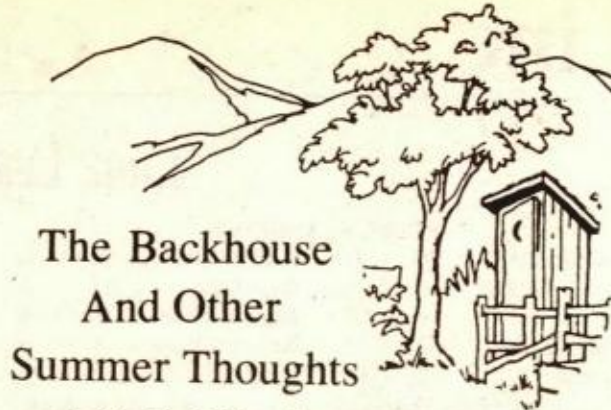

Before "the pump" could begin to pull properly, it would have to be primed. This necessary feature of the hand operated pump required that a bottle of water be left nearby. To forget to do so after each use, resulted in a trip to a neighbor's well for priming water.

The first person awake in the morning was usually charged with the chore of bringing in water for coffee and the breakfast dishes. After I realized this, I became quite adept at not being the first to rise each day.

Now, where there is no water, there can be no tub, no shower, and yes, no toilet. For the kids, daily swimming in nearby Silver Lake somehow justified our cleanliness for everyday living, but Sunday was another story entirely. Sunday was the Lord's Day, and heaven forbid you would wear a week-long coat of dirt, dust, and grime to church.

Saturday night baths became tradition. If the day happened to be warm, we would march off to the lake with a bar of soap to prepare for our weekly attendance at Mass, and with the rich lather of suds added to the usual splashing, we enjoyed the evening. However, if the day was not conducive to bathing in the lake, the dreaded galvanized tub was dragged from the garage, and buckets of ice cold water were pumped from the well to fill its yawning mouth.

We, the kids, would line up for our baths, not a one volunteering to be first, for this was the coldest cleansing of all. With each succeeding bath, the water became cloudy with soap and dirt, but to the delight of those waiting, it also became warmer. Naturally, the smaller children were forced to the front of the line, but each summer, as you grew taller, your place in line moved closer to the rear where warm, albeit dirty water, could be found.

The biggest problem created by lack of plumbing was not found in the absence of bathing facilities, however, it was the non-existence of a toilet which caused the greatest consternation. To the children, though, even this inconvenience was accepted as part of summer living in the country. I doubt the same held true for the adults.

About thirty feet behind the camp, as the backyard reached a wooded area, stood the outhouse. Perhaps to disguise the rather unattractive sound of "outhouse," we referred to our outdoor facility as the "backhouse." Same thing, different name. Here was the most popular of all unpopular visiting spots. It was difficult to build up any great feeling for the "backhouse," but on the other hand, it was quite impossible to make it through the day without a visit or two.

Never to be confused with the local library, the "backhouse" was not a place to sit and read. Many factors, both internal and external, made lengthy visits downright uncomfortable. In addition, as many as four families might be sharing the camp at any given time, and on weekends, when the men joined the group after a week of work, it was not unusual to find upwards of twenty people at camp.

Twenty is a small group according to Hyatt, Holiday Inn, and the Sonesta people, but a two bedroom camp with no running water or toilet facilities does not constitute the lap of luxury for that number. Weekends had a way of creating long lines at the "backhouse" and expediency was always the unwritten rule of thumb. Weekends, however, failed to create the problems presented by unscheduled middle of the night visits.

It was assumed, quite erroneously of course, that to be male was to be brave. The adult women of the camp were firm believers in this philosophy, and it was not unusual for me, being the oldest male offspring in the clan, even at the age of ten or eleven, to be awakened to escort one of the females through the darkness. Was I to be considered adequate protection against the monsters who surely lurked within the woods, but came out only after dark? Oh, I feigned courage alright, but while they escaped to the safety of the "backhouse," I was left outside in the darkness to battle the monsters. For one whose blood curdled at the sound of a warm summer night's breeze rustling through the leaves, I hardly provided the protection they felt I offered.

The problem was self-induced, however, for often I made the trip alone after dark, and always returned without having been attacked. To the women, this was the mark of strength and courage. What they had not noticed, though, was how well the oak tree directly outside the camp's back door had grown over the years. I cannot recall, even today, ever having passed it on one of my late night solos.

There was an old Philco table-top radio that brought the Green Hornet, The Lone Ranger, Dr. Christian, and the Inner Sanctum to us for an evening of entertainment. There was no heating system, but there was a huge trunk jammed with heavy quilts which nicely protected us from the cool evenings of late summer. And the porch, the children's sleeping place, was protected from the rain, not by windows, but by rolls of heavy canvas.

There was an ice-box, not a refrigerator, which kept things cold, but only as long as the compartment could keep the ice from melting.

During the week, while the men stayed in the city to work, there was no automobile, and the closest store was more than a mile away. There were bicycles in the garage, and each was equipped with a basket on the handle bar to carry groceries whenever necessary.

There was a rather ugly green bucket which was used to make ice cream, and freshly picked blue berries were a usual part of the breakfast menu.

In the fall, when cooler temperatures and a new school year called us back to the city, there remained one final chore. The "backhouse," a shingled wood structure sitting over a hole in the ground, had to be moved so the opening could be filled. Here was a job of necessity and performed with reluctance. It was the men's job, and it signalled the end of summer.

Perhaps because of those early summer experiences, I linger in the shower, marvel at electric refrigeration, and delight in the sounds of a flushing toilet.

Facts About Drugs — F.A.D.

Drugs of abuse, other than alcohol, can be classified in several ways. Let us classify them according to their most prominent effects on the brain and central nervous system.

Opioids: Heroin, morphine, methadone. These drugs are used to decrease pain. Their medical use includes relieving intense pain (such as in terminal cancer cases), suppressing coughs, as a remedy for diarrhea. Non-medically, they are used to produce a dream-like sense of well-being. Highly physically addicting.

Depressants: Downers, barbiturates, sleeping pills, quaaludes. These drugs have been called "solid booze" because their effects are similar to alcohol. Depressants relax the body muscles and slow down the messages to the central nervous system. Physically addicting.

Stimulants: Amphetamines, cocaine, uppers, speed. These drugs stimulate the central nervous system, producing euphoria, hypersensitivity, appetite suppression. The aftermath of stimulant use is depression. Psychologically addicting.

Hallucinogens: LSD, mescaline, mushrooms, "acid." These drugs produce hallucinations, usually of a visual nature but sometimes of sound and smell. To hallucinate means to misperceive reality.

Phencyclidines: PCP, angel dust. These drugs are related to hallucinogens and produce similar effects. Users speak of being cut off from their feelings. Very dangerous.

Cannabinoids: Marijuana, hashish, THC, pot. Marijuana and derivatives act similarly to hallucinogens, but also possess the elements of stimulation and depression. Highly psychologically addicting.

Inhalants: Cleaning compounds, glues. These drugs induce light headedness and confusion and generally produce a depression of brain functioning.

Drugs like tobacco and alcohol are so familiar that they are hardly considered "drugs." The "new" drugs, such as cocaine, are not new. Only our mass exposure is new. Drug problems are part of the challenge facing America today. Particularly vulnerable are Americans from 15 to 24 years old.

Doris Cited For Student Aid

Senator Francis D. Doris was recently cited by the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in Massachusetts (AICUM) for his leadership in securing financial aid for Massachusetts students.

The Massachusetts Senate recently appropriated an additional $60,000,000 in student aid for 1986.

In citing Doris, Frank A. Tredinnick, Jr., President of AICUM, noted, "We are grateful for your leadership in creating and implementing an enlightened public policy that is good for students and taxpayers alike."

Senator Doris, who has long been recognized as a champion of student rights, was quoted as saying, "After returning to school to earn my degree as an older student, I was consistently impressed with the dedication of younger students, struggling to earn degrees while working long hours to help defray the continually rising costs of education." Doris continued, "Last year, over 30,000 high school students in Massachusetts chose not to attend college because of financial hardship. History has taught us what happens when we fail to educate our youth."

Hazards Of Lead Contaminated Soil And Dust Around And In Your Home

by Alan Schepps

Lead poisoning is not a problem of the past, it is a problem of the present and future. Nationwide, the cases of childhood lead poisoning far out number cases of other common childhood diseases. The National Centers for Disease Control (CDC) have recent studies that show lower levels of lead toxicity are related to learning and emotional problems in children. Although the cases of severe lead poisoning from the direct ingestion of leaded paint chips (pica) is still a problem, there is now a major effort to prevent, identify and treat lower levels of childhood lead poisoning from other sources.

Lead contaminated soil and dust around and in homes is now being recognized as another major source of childhood lead poisoning, especially in urban areas. Leaded paint which has been weathered or removed is the main source of soil and dust lead contamination. Although lead is no longer allowed in house paints, a great many homes today still have leaded paint on them (may be under newer layers of paint), making soil contamination and paint removal a serious hazard. Automobile exhaust is also a significant contributor to soil lead near busy roads.

Food can also be a source of lead. Some vegetables that are grown in soils with high lead levels can take in significant amounts of lead. Airborne lead can also accumulate on plant surfaces.

The greatest risk, however, is to children under six who directly ingest and inhale lead contaminated soil and dust from play areas and gardens during normal daily play activities. Pregnant and nursing women should also avoid all sources of lead exposure. Daily exposure to lead-contaminated soil, dust, toys, air, food and other sources can cause chronic, low level lead poisoning in children who may not show obvious symptoms.

The Urban Horticulture Program of the Suffolk County Cooperative Extension Service has a well established lead in the soil programs: To educate the public about the general hazards of lead in the soil, promote soil testing for lead, and recommend safe gardening practices where lead is a concern. Slide presentations, workshops, and a display are available to professional and community organizations.

TAKE PRECAUTIONS

- Children should have regular lead tests.
- Pregnant and nursing women should avoid lead exposure.
- Home renovation and paint removal can be very hazardous.
- Test your soil.

For brochures and information about lead in the soil and soil testing for lead, call Suffolk County Cooperative Extension Service at 727-4107 of the University of Massachusetts Suburban Experiment Station at 891-0650.

For information about de-leading, lead poisoning and prevention, call the Boston Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program at 424-5965 or the Massachusetts Program at 1-800-532-9571.

Gallery Presenting Work Of Local Artist

The work of five area painters, including a Charlestown artist, will be featured at the Francesca Anderson Gallery, second floor, 132 Newbury Street, Boston. The exhibit, entitled Boston Painters: New Talent, Urban & Rural Scenes, will be shown from July 12 through August 17, 1985.

The paintings of Patricia Andreotti of Charlestown, Prilla Brackett and Amy Schuyler Clarkson of Cambridge, Cynthia Maurice Garrett of Newton, and Jeanne Greenleaf of Gloucester will be on exhibit.

The subject matter of this exhibit varies greatly — from scenes of Boston and Charlestown, to European architectural facades, to scenes of Cambridge residences, to landscapes of Vermont, Cape Cod and Cape Ann.

Patricia Andreotti of Charlestown studied at the Worcester Museum School, Vesper George School of Art, New England School of Art, and Massachusetts College of Art. She paints her environment outside her Charlestown studio as well as trees and woodland areas in the countryside nearby Boston. She is well-known for her Rooftops series in wonderfully soft colors of pinks, yellows and pale blues.

Gallery hours are 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. For more information, call 262-1062.

NDEA To Fund Improvements To Non-Profit Agencies

Under the Community Development Block Grant program, the Neighborhood Development and Employment Agency (NDEA) will be supporting a variety of activities to be undertaken by neighborhood-based organizations. NDEA has issued a Request for Proposals (RFP) which will fund physical improvements to non-profit organizations in Boston on a limited, competitive basis. Daycare centers, emergency shelters, health care agencies, and residential treatment facilities are examples of organizations that could apply for funding under the program.

Proposals may be submitted for repair and renovation of buildings for the purposes of licensing and code improvements, new or improved service delivery, increased accessibility to the physically disabled and/or energy-related improvements. All physical improvements must expand or improve services to low and moderate income Boston residents. Grants will range from $10,000 to $100,000.

The RFP is available immediately and copies may be obtained from NDEA, 15 Beacon Street, Development Division, 10th floor, Boston, between 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Responses are due July 30, 1985.

To aid applicants in writing their proposals, a Bidders' Conference has been scheduled for Tuesday, July 9, 1985 at the Boston Public Library Lecture Hall, 666 Boylston Street, Boston from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. Attendance is strongly encouraged.

Post Offices Closed July 4th

Area residents are advised that all post offices will be closed on Thursday, July 4, 1985 in observance of the Independence Day Holiday.

There will be no regular mail deliveries on that date, and all collection boxes will be picked up according to holiday collection schedules.

In keeping with postal policy, Special Delivery and Express Mail will be delivered on the holiday.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the Editor must be signed and include name, address and telephone number for verification. The name will be withheld if the writer so requests. Anonymous letters will NOT be published.

My Thanks

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my family and friends for the pretty flowers and cards.

CAMP BUNKER HILL

For the past fifteen years, the Bunker Hill Health Center has operated an outdoor recreational therapeutic day camp for Charlestown children. For eight weeks each summer, eighty young boys and girls between the ages of five and 14 are bussed to Hale Reservation in Westwood. There they engage in a full program of outdoor activities such as camping, swimming, boating, hiking, sports, a ropes course, and environmental education. These activities are intended to help the children understand, respect, and learn to master their environment. In the process of accomplishing these goals, the campers increase their own self-esteem and achieve greater self control.

Using this typical day camp program as its foundation, the camp is able to offer a program that uses a full range of therapeutic techniques. These techniques are holistic in scope with a specific focus on helping the participants to develop coping and internal control skills, to initiate or increase social and behavioral skills, and to decrease and eliminate inappropriate behaviors. To accomplish these goals, the staff at camp are trained to use a basic token economy system, modeling, role playing, and a formal program which teaches problem-solving skills, relaxation techniques, and self-instructional training.

In order to achieve maximum effectiveness for this comprehensive program, a dedicated staff must be recruited and trained to work with the camp's population. The group size must also be small enough to insure that each participant benefits fully from the total camp experience. Parents, of course, are a key element to the success of the camp's operation. Their ability to work together with the camp staff ensures maximum benefits for their children.

Throughout the years, Camp Bunker Hill has been supported financially by a number of agencies and institutions. Their support has enabled us to develop a program which serves a population which cannot afford expensive camp fees. We hope that our program will continue to provide services for many more years.
