There are several different styles of yard gnomes to choose from. Gnomes are traditionally made out of plastic, but there are ones available today that are made of metal or ceramic. Metal and ceramic models are more durable and will not degrade or warp over time. Some people prefer the look and feel of metal gnomes, so if that is the case, you can usually find plastic or metal gnomes for decoration in a variety of colors, styles, and designs. Many people also choose to use yard decorations made from natural materials like ceramic, stone, and wood.

If you are interested in using garden gnomes for decorations, it is important to get them ahead of the planting season. Buying gnomes in the middle of winter is generally not a good idea because most of them do not survive the cold winter weather. If you live in an area where Halloween is a popular holiday, you may also want to avoid getting your garden gnomes in the middle of the holiday season. They will become cold and exposed to the elements.

Gnomes are also great yard decorations because they are small and easy to store. You can place them in a corner or against a wall in your yard, and they will not take up any room. You can also put them in baskets on your porch if you want to create a more festive look for your yard. Yard decorations made from plastic or metal materials usually take up very little space. They can be stored easily, but plastic and metal gnomes should not be kept out in the open where they could be damaged by the weather. When plastic and metal decorations are placed in a container, they usually last for quite some time before they begin to deteriorate.
