

How to Compare Latest Water Purifier Prices in India

Water purifiers are seeing a rise in sales as a category with the deteriorating quality of water available for drinking, but the purchase process varies from household to household. Very often, it is seen that the water purifier price list is the first level of comparison of products and the lowest price gets the benefit of the sale. Price is certainly an important factor of any purchase, but it must never be the first.

The water purifier price must be compared only after you have arrived at a shortlist of products that satisfy all the criteria that you have set out for the water purifier that you wish to install in your home. So, before you compare the water purifier prices in India, you must remove all products that do not belong. How you go about the process is described below:

Test the Water

This is the first step that helps you decide the purification processes that are a must in your water purifier. Do not opt for a process if the water does not contain impurities removed through that particular process. You also must not compromise on those that you certainly need. Select only the purifiers that offer the required combination of processes. Strike the others off your list.

Compare the Other Features

Depending on your family size and the electricity and water supply, you might want to get a purifier with a storage facility. If so, you must get one with a capacity that suits your needs. You must also look at the installation requirements of each and see if they are suitable for your home. Any that require you to make changes to your home may not be considered.

Compare the Certifications, Warranty, Prices and Maintenance Costs

At this stage, you must consider the price list in combination with the after-sales services of the manufacturer. The cost calculations must also consider the maintenance charges that you would need to pay over the years. Once you have these, now compare the total costs and make your decision.

Once all the factors are satisfied and you get the desired water purifier price list for comparison, you can make a well-informed decision.
