How Does the Service Work?

The process only takes 3 simple steps. One first opts if they want an individual will or one that involves their partner as well. There are some handy assistance notes at every stage of the procedure as well as a facility to help answer the clients' queries. One then checks to see that all the will's contents are correct and then makes the payment using the provided secure facility. When this is done, the will can now be printed and signed. Instructions on how to do this correctly and how to have the will witnessed are also provided.

The Benefits of Making a Will Online

Most people put off the process of writing a will because they consider the process to be complicated and the fear that it's going to be expensive. This website goes to eliminate these two fears. It has a user-friendly layout and help is always provided. Sample documents are also provided. As for the cost, a single will starts at £29 while partner's wills go for £54.

Some people believe that unless the will is full of legal jargon, it's not going to be valid. However, the best document is that which is straightforward and simple to understand. If a will is full of jargon and conditions, disputes over its interpretation may result due to lack of clarity. The document should be concise, clear and written in plain English. As long as the legal requirements necessary to validate it are met, then the document should stand.

In the modern world, many people are usually pressed for time and as such find it difficult to schedule a solicitor's appointment at a suitable time. The website allows one to write their will in the comfort of their house or office, at a suitable time. It is also safe; the site subscribes to the Code of Practice issued by the Society of will writers. It is also insured to the tune of £2.5 million.
