

Common Lexic in Romanian and Albanian. Substrate and Loanwords

Dan Ungureanu, Charles University, Prague
Department of Balkanic Studies
Chair of Romanian Language

The following is a list of common words between Romanian and Albanian. We used the Albanian Etymological Dictionary of Vladimir Orel, Brill, Leiden, 1998.

We must add we do not share all the etymologies proposed by the Russian author. For instance, he considers the words shared by Albanian and Romanian, but without a Slavic or Latin origin, as being loanwords from Albanian into Romanian. We have added, in a second list, the words common to Albanian and Romanian. Most are present in Arumanian as well.

So the hypothesis of Orel is, somehow, not unlikely. But it is just a statement, as "words common to Romanian and Albanian come, in Romanian, from the Dacian substrate".

So are they loanwords or substrate? As we have shown in our article about the substrate, with examples from many languages, the words common to Romanian, Arumanian and Albanian are, typologically, substrate in many languages. A few of them, of course, are Wanderwörter.

Difficult cases

Rom. a altoi, Alb. mëltaj "to graft". Both look alike. The Romanian word is considered as being of Hungarian origin, oltvány, olt, itself of Ugric etymology. The Albanian term is deduced from Lat. maritare. Unclear. Possible coincidence. As long as we do not have the decisive Arumanian term (there are different synonyms for grafting in Arumanian) we should accept the traditional etymologies.

Romanian băiat, "boy" belongs to a semantically unstable category, with many synonyms, each easily replaced. Italian has more than thirty different dialectal terms. We found Emiliano-Romagnolo Mantovan baguet "ragazzo, boy" – but, among so many variants to choose from, it may be a coincidence. "boy" is an affectionate/expressive word, and, like all affectionate words, belongs to a rich list of ever-replaced terms.

Rom. dop "cork, bottle stopper, bouchon" was usually derived from Saxon dop, but, as Albanian and Arumanian show, it must be Dacian or late Latin.

In the table below, the Romanian meaning is indicated only when different from the Albanian one.

Orel's dictionary.

Some etymologies in Orel's dictionary are disputed or wrong. For instance, garë f, pl. gara 'competition, race'. Continues PALb **garā* probably connected with Gk χαίρω 'to rejoice' and its derivatives, cf. in particular Gk χάρμη 'joy of battle; battle, fight'. Together with χαίρω, garë belongs to IE **gher-* 'to wish, to feel inclination'. ◇ POKORNY I 440-441; FRISK II 1062-1064.

Albanese garë comes from Italian gara, "competition, race". It is a recent loanword.

frac m, pl. fracra ~ fracna 'biting cold, frost'. Singularized form of the original **frak* continuing PALb **awa-raka*, a prefixal formation etymologically related to Lith rakù, ràkti 'to peck open, to lance', Latv rakt 'to dig'. ◇ JOKL Festschr. Rozwadowski I 248 (reconstructs **vë-rak-jo-* related to OIr diorain 'to sprinkle'); SGGJa I 55; FRAENKEL 694; ÇABEJ St. I 193-194 (considers dialectal thrak in mot thrak 'cold period' to be the older form and uses it to reconstruct **ther-ak*, further to ther).

Albanese frac "cold, frost" comes, probably, from Lat. frigus, cold, friget, it is cold. Lithuanian and Latvian words are phonetically and semantically far-fetched.

gëlbazë f, pl. gëlbaza 'liver illness of sheep caused by worms'. Another variant is këlbazë. Borrowed from Slav **kъlbasa* 'stuffed gut, sausage', a derivative of **kъlbъ* 'stomach (of animals)' (OREL Festschr. Shevoroshkin 261). The irregular change of Slav *-s- > Alb -z- is explained

The vocabulary pertaining to sheep husbandry is heavy with substrate words. It is most unlikely that Albanians, sedentary shepherds, have learned anything about sheep husbandry from the immigrant Slavs. French douve, Rom. gâlbează, "liver fluke", Greek ελμινθες "flukes" σκόληξ "worm" are all substrate. And, if it is a Slavic loanword, why would Albanians not borrow the Slavic word for fluke, and chose the name of the sausage? In the overwhelming majority, loanwords keep a literal meaning.

Albanian could not borrow this word neither from Bulgarian (in Bulgarian, sausage is lukanika, a Greek word) nor from Serbian: the Serbian form is kobasica.
