

PewDiePie's Upcoming Minecraft Plan could be his Most Effective Yet

During Felix 'PewDiePie' Kjellberg's video on September 13, the YouTube king considered his future plans for the series after he reacted to mods and creations posted by the Minecraft subreddit.

[ad name="article1"]

PewDiePie reached the "end" of the vanilla Minecraft after taking down the Ender Dragon and reaching the very bottom level of the Sandbox title on the 25th of August. This has left some wondering what comes next.

Fans got a glimpse of what the potential future could be for the popular Swedish gaming series in his latest video. He reacted to mods and fan creations that led him to think about some possible ideas.

[ad name="article2"]

PewDiePie's Minecraft future

In the video, YouTube's King showed his viewers mods created by infamous modder 'McMakistein'. McMakistein made houses that can be walked on and fly across the land. The Swede was left to think about the future of his Minecraft series.

Read More: Borderlands 3 spotted Dr Egg with Disrespect

"See that a lot of people have been telling me that I should start using mods in Minecraft immediately. Modified survival is now a thing to keep it current. And you can make this type of stuff," the YouTube star said, showing off the mod.

(Timestamp at 01:49 for viewers on mobile devices).

[ad name="article3"]

Pewds later learned that bees were coming to Minecraft in a future upgrade. He debated whether to wait or cheat to spawn them.

"There's bees in Minecraft!? Deepspaceii I'm not sure if I can play the latest version. Since I don't believe that you can create them without cheating. Or should I just wait for the actual update. He said, "I think I should just sit and wait."

The YouTuber swiftly changed his mind after he saw a player-created data pack which lets users put a saddle on bees and ride them. He exclaimed, "Oh my God, okay. I'm getting bees."