

Alcuris Overview

Covid has amplified many existing challenges in Social Care including how to-

- Help improve people’s independence and quality of life, including reducing their dependency on formal care and support.
- Identify, prevent, and address changes in people’s health and wellbeing earlier.
- Support carers, families, and communities with the tools they need to provide better outcomes.
- Facilitate the more effective deployment of care and support resources.

It has also shown the benefits of deploying innovative technology and wrap around services at scale in both health and social care. One thing is clear continuing to commission the same services will not deliver on providing new and improved outcomes.

Next Generation Telecare services from Alcuris helps to prolong independence for users, provides positive reassurance for families with alerts when things change, and insight derived from data for Assessors, Care providers and Commissioners that drives evidence-based decision making. In summary, better outcomes for all stakeholders.

An evaluation, part funded by NHSX, has shown that the insight delivered has enabled:

Increasing Independence

“ I have been able to step back and he now feels he has more control over his own life. He doesn't fully understand how the system works but he certainly felt a change in behaviours of all of his relatives which he loves.

His independence and confidence has grown massively and he now wants to reduce his own care package for more independence.”

Feedback from family

The Alcuris Connect platform provides insight to families, social care practitioners, care providers and commissioners via alerts, dashboards, and our intuitive Memo app. The insight is derived from sensors in the home connected to the Memo Hub. We combine the best of breed technologies including Internet of Things, Bluetooth, RFID, Social alarms, robust connectivity using 4G and Wi-Fi (where available) along with advanced statistical techniques and machine learning. Future integrations using our open platform interface (API) will deliver further efficiencies by streamlining processes.
