A diamond engagement ring is the most special jewelry you will ever buy. It symbolizes the emotional engagement between two people forming a special bond that can only be dignified by the most beautiful diamond engagement ring. If you want to have a diamond ring that is different than what most people have, consider buying a diamond engagement ring. The smartest way to buy diamonds for an engagement ring is to buy GIA certified loose diamonds at wholesale prices and have them mounted separately. You will be able to buy a higher quality diamond with the same budget buying wholesale by reducing retail margins.

Here is a synopsis of a very useful and informative seminar given by Diane Flora, CGA, which describes the grading techniques used by GIA's Gem Trade Laboratory for loose diamonds. Flora notes five factors determine a clarity grade: Size, number, position, nature and relief.

"Size" does not mean for example the size of a 1 carat diamond ring but the size of inclusion relative to the size of the diamond.. The impact of two identically sized inclusions varies depending on the size of the stone.

"Number" refers to how many inclusions are in the diamond. A single crystal can reflect multiple times, depending on where it's located, and therefore must be evaluated as multiple crystals.

"Position" can also play a role. If all other factors are equal, inclusions under the table impact a clarity grade more than inclusions under the crown.

"Nature" refers to the type of inclusion it is. Crystals and feathers have different impacts on diamonds. If it's a feather you must consider its size and location, and whether it breaks the stone's surface. Most feathers do.

"Relief": The color of the inclusion can cause it to stand out in high relief against the background reflections of the diamond. In a near colorless diamond, a black crystal is easier to see than a white one.

What are the real diamond prices?

The value of diamonds is calculated depending 5 parameters: first the Shape (round family or fancy family), then 4 other parameters known as the 4C, the Cut (proportions), the Carat (weight), the clarity and the Color of the diamond. The diamond prices can go from 10 000$ for a 2 carat diamond to 70 000$ and up for a 3 carats diamond or bigger stones.

Every individual has its own taste when it comes to diamond rings. Some would prefer a diamond engagement ring that comes with a solitaire setting, high prong, halo setting or tension setting. Whatever your diamond ring preference is, there must be a ring out there for you.

Some diamond ring settings have been in the market for a long time, therefore some say that trends stick around forever and some change every year or even every season.

This year, extravagance is gaining popularity in the form of unusual diamond rings that are the new modern ring styles. Ring styles we have not seen in the jewelry industry before but is popping up more and more. Rumors say that Mister Charming George Clooney started this change in ring styles by giving Amal Alamuddin a 7 carat emerald cut in the color yellow. A combination that is unlikely to see. This extravagant yellow diamond ring was given by George Clooney as an engagement ring to his beautiful Alamuddin

Let's have look on the price variation comparing some 2 carats diamond prices and some 3 carats diamond prices. In this comparison chart, the same round diamond shape is used to better understand the price variation. The price would be slightly different if we use another shape like an Emerald Cut Diamond.

As you can see only one parameter can change a lot of the diamond price, so it's better to know a least your budget or what kind of diamond you exactly want to find. Some specific fancy colors are cheaper than others, that's why Black Diamond Engagement Rings are much more affordable.

The world's most comprehensive diamond price and information platform. Helping individuals to find the perfect diamond, buying directly from the source at wholesale prices.
