

Minecraft-like Hydroneer Update Overhauls Co-op And Automobiles

Minecraft effectively spawned a complete sub-genre of sandbox games the place you had been let free in a world you might shape as you like by digging, building, and crafting. If you're after a little bit of sandbox escapism like Minecraft, Hydroneer replace 2.0 launched yesterday - and it's the "biggest update we've ever made", in accordance with the developers.

Hydroneer isn't as complicated as Minecraft, as fairly than tasking you with travelling by way of totally different dimensions, you just have to earn cash. Head out into the world and search for gold, sell fish you catch, and earn money nevertheless you possibly can manage. As with many of these constructing games, it starts off simple enough, but things ramp up as you buy new equipment and create your personal mining operations.

The newest update, Hydroneer 2.0, adds in a whole bunch of new items, a "complete rework" of the codebase to make things extra stable, an overhauled vehicle system - together with the patch be aware that "trucks not fly off into the atmosphere" - and even the primary iteration of multiplayer by way of splitscreen and Steam Remote Play. MINECRAFT EGGWARS SERVERS noting that some users are saying the multiplayer is a bit janky in the mean time, nevertheless it doesn't appear to be the case across the board.

There's a lot in the new replace, but the developer has made it clear that it's not the tip of the game at all. They've already given a quick define for each the 2.1 and 2.2 updates, which will convey in more things like farming, cooking, extra vehicles, and even new physics issues like allowing players to dig deeper than earlier than. It's an thrilling time for those who've been playing Hydroneer already, nevertheless it also marks a good jumping on level if you've been conserving an eye on it.
